in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the Southern District of New York.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

IN this new edition of Gieseler's Church History a thorough revision of the translation has been made, with additional references to the English and later German works. The alterations are numerous, giving more exactly the sense of the original, and correcting frequent mistranslations.

The entire history to the epoch of the Reformation will be comprised in three volumes, following the divisions of the original German. The subsequent history, to 1848, can probably be embraced in two additional volumes. At the time of Gieseler's decease, his work was completed to the year 1648, in three volumes, subdivided into six parts, each of which was separately issued. The history is to be continued under the editorial supervision of his colleague, Dr. E. R. Redepenning. The volume for the period from 1814 to 1848 is just published; we have taken from it, with slight abridgments, an account of Gieseler's life and writings. The narrative of the ecclesiastical events of this period was written out by Gieseler himself; unlike the previous volumes, it is an extended history, with comparatively few notes. The intervening volume, for the period from the Peace of Westphalia, 1648 to 1814, is promised for the next year. Thus the work will form a complete and authentic history of the Christian Church, to A.D. 1848, composed with abundant and careful learning, especially adapted to the wants of students, and indispensable as a guide to any who would examine the original sources. The aid it gives in the critical investigation of the original authorities is its chief merit, apart from its use as a text-book for classes in Theological Seminaries. It is cold, but cautious; it is more rational than sympathetic; it has not the warmth of Neander's incomparable work, but it is more complete; it has not the vividness of Hase's delineations, but it is more full, and gives copious extracts from the sources, such as can nowhere else be found.

The first three volumes of the present edition correspond with volumes one and two of the original. The first extends to the year 726. The second will be from 726 to 1305; the third from 1305 to 1517. The whole period, 726 to 1517, was published by Gieseler as his second volume, in four subdivisions. The third volume of the German, in two parts, will be the fourth in this translation; and a fifth volume will probably embrace the fourth and fifth of the original.

In the German edition, both parts of the first volume, and also the first two divisions of the second volume (to 1305), are in their fourth edition; the third division of the second volume has reached a second edition; its fourth division, and the whole of the third volume (1517 to 1648), are still in their first edition; and the publisher states that a new one is not to be expected, as a sufficiently large number of copies was struck off to meet the demand.

The first English translation of Gieseler's work was well executed from the third edition of the earlier volumes by Francis Cunningham, and published in Philadelphia, in 1836, in three volumes, extending to the Reformation. The version published in Clark's Library, from which this edition is in part reprinted, is by different translators: the first and second volumes are by Dr. Davidson; the third and fourth by Rev. J. W. Hull. The Edinburgh edition is inconveniently arranged; the first volume breaks off in the middle of the second period; the second, in the midst of the third period; and the fourth, about two hundred pages short of the Reformation. This defect is remedied in the present edition, and a translation added of the portion needed to complete the history to the Reformation. This will be followed, as soon as practicable, by a translation of the additional volumes.

The least satisfactory portion of Dr. Gieseler's work is undoubtedly that of the first century. It is disproportionately concise; and the bias of the author is more marked. But here, too, the sources for correcting his opinions are near at hand to all our students.

THE LIFE AND WRITINGS OF GIESELER.

BOTH the father and grandfather of Dr. Gieseler were clergymen. His grandfather, John Arend Gieseler, born at Minden in 1726, was a pastor at Lahde, and afterward at Hartum, in the principality of Minden. He received his theological education at Halle. The family records describe him as wholly in sympathy with the practical Christian tendencies reintroduced by Franke and Spener, though not devoted to the peculiarities of "pietism;" as a true adherent of the symbols of Lutheranism; as a very earnest, active, and orderly man, yet cheerful, and of great hilarity with the right sort of people. These characteristics reappear in the grandson. The grandmother, of the family of Haccius, shared her husband's piety and love of order.

These qualities also distinguished their son, George Christopher Frederick Gieseler, born in 1770, who was a preacher in Petershagen, near Minden, and afterward in Werther, not far from Bielefeld. He was a man of a marked intellectual character. Though deaf from his fourteenth year, so that in the University he was often obliged to transcribe from his neighbor's manuscript, and though thus almost deprived in later life of social intercourse, he yet attained the most thorough culture and self-discipline. His infirmity seemed to forbid his entering the clerical profession; but, as if born for a minister, he would be that, and nothing else. In his eleventh and twelfth years he held meetings on Sunday afternoons, in a garden-house of his father, which were attended in large numbers from the village, and not without good results. When only thirteen, he took for a time the place of a sick teacher in the chapel at Holtzhausen, conducting the singing and catechetical exercise. He, too, was educated at the University of Halle, and taught in several private families, until he became a pastor at Petershagen in 1790. He was devoted to his congregation, yet ever earnest in his studies. He published several works, but more remain in manuscript, upon Theology, or rather Theosophy, the Revelation of John, and Education. With much that is original, these writings contain also one-sided and erratic views.

John Charles Louis Gieseler was born at Petershagen the third of March, 1793, the oldest of ten children. When four years old, death deprived him of the faithful and loving care of his mother, whose maiden name was Berger, a woman of great practical sagacity. His earliest instruction was from his grandfather, who taught him in an easy, sportive way, to be a good reader in his fourth year. His father's peculiarities contributed to the formation of that independence of character which in early life distinguished him, and in later years came to his aid in so many difficult circumstances. In his tenth year he was sent to the Latin school of the Orphan-house at Halle. Here he soon enjoyed the counsels and care of Niemeyer, whose friendship in after years never deserted him. He aided him in his studies, and after their completion promoted him to the post of teacher in the Orphan School. He had hardly been a year in this position, when, in October, 1813, he followed the call of his father-land, became a volunteer in the war for Germany's freedom, and was present at the raising of the siege of Magdeburg. After the peace in 1815, he resumed his office as teacher; two years later he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy: he became co-rector of the gymnasium at Minden in the same year, and in 1818 director of the gymnasium at Cleve. At Michaelmas, in 1819, he was appointed "professor ordinarius" of Theology in the newly-established Frederick-William's University of Bonn, having already received from that University, on the third of April of the same year, the doctorate of divinity through Augusti's influence.

This rapid promotion he owed to his "Critical Essay upon the Origin and earliest History of the written Gospels," published in 1818. This exposition set aside the hypothesis of one written original Gospel as the common source of the synoptical Gospels, and confirmed the positions laid down by Herder, Lessing, and others, which are at the basis of the whole recent criticism of the Gospels. This important work of Gieseler was soon out of print; yet he could never decide upon issuing a second edition. He shunned that confusion of hypotheses, many of them wholly groundless, which afterward sprung up on this subject, and also thought that the time had not come for new and definitive results.

His thorough philological culture is proved by his treatises published in the second volume of Rosemüller's "Repertorium," which helped to enrich the science of the grammar of the New Testament, then in its infancy. His Essay upon the "Nazarenes and the Ebionites," in Stäudlin and Tzschirner's "Archiv" (Bd. iv. St. 2), showed his peculiar talent in disentangling confused problems. From this time forth he dedicated his powers almost exclusively to his loved studies in church history. Neander's "Genetic Development of the Gnostic Systems" was the occasion of his penetrating review (in the "Hallische Lit. Zeitung, 1823), which cast much new light upon this chaos. The next year he commenced the publication of his "Text-book of Church History." With Lücke, he also edited the "Zeitschrift für gebildete Christen," four numbers being issued in the years 1823, 4.

At that time the yet youthful University of the Rhine enjoyed a fresh and free life; Protestants and Catholics were not rent asunder; Gratz and Seber still taught without hinderance their independent exegesis and theology, assailed only by Hermes; they, with Ritter, the Roman Catholic church historian, were in constant intercourse with Gieseler; all were of one heart and one soul; robust powers were working peaceably together; the University was in the perfect blossom of its spring-time. In his family Gieseler was blessed in a high degree, attached with incomparable truth and devotion to his early loved and early lost wife, Henrietta, of the Feist family in Halle. The blessing of many children was theirs, and with these came many a care. But trusting in God, relying upon his own power of labor, untiringly active, most conscientious in all his work, not troubled by little things, in the midst of his cares he kept his heart open to every joy.

For twelve and a half years he stood in this post of special influence as a teacher of church history, and enjoying the confidence of his colleagues, who had just committed to him the rectorship of the University, when the Georgia Augusta called him to her service; and certainly, in no other University could he have been so wholly in his place as at Göttingen. In its fundamental character, as the nurse of the empirical and historical sciences, and in the manifold practical services to which it called him, it corresponded entirely with his own bias. Mere learned investigation would not have filled up the measure of his activity. It is difficult to say which in him was predominant, his capacity for learning, or his practical sagacity and inward fitness to organize and govern; both, without doubt, went hand in hand. As he was in life, so was he in science, clear, definite, foreseeing, conscientious; in expression concise, at times laconic, in all things a man of one piece—a man in every sense of the word. This was felt as soon as you came in contact with him and put confidence in him. The University frequently committed to him, and in times of trial almost always to him alone, the dignity of pro-rector; with hardly an interruption, he was a member of one or several academical courts. His counsel must be sought upon propositions for the revisal of the University statutes, or in making new regulations. He was a constant member of the Library Commission. The city corporation chose him for its speaker, an office, however, which he afterward declined. He was curator of the Göttingen Orphan-house, and had the administration of many other charitable foundations, especially the scholarships. The Göttingen Academy of Sciences, of which he was a member, committed to him the direction of the Wedemeyer prizes. In union with Lücke, he directed the Theological Ephora. But the Orphan-house was the special joy of his heart. With few exceptions, he was there every day, and hence knew exactly the disposition, conduct, and faults of each child, had for every one friendly words and counsel, and kept the pupils in his eye long after they had left the institution. They, in return, were attached to him, and manifestly eager to give him pleasure; only in a very few cases did he fail of success in his noble efforts for the rescue of the abandoned, undertaken with so bold a faith.

He gave much time to the lodge of the Order of Free-masons, and undoubtedly knew why he did this. In his last days he was violently assailed on this account, in a way which detracts as little from his good name as from the prosperity of the order.

The interests of his country were ever dear to his heart. The last volume of his church history, embracing the period from 1814 to 1848, shows in many passages what his wishes were. His judgment upon the revolutionary movements of 1848 runs through the whole narrative, in which is also seen the calm hope with which he looked to the future in the midst of the storms that robbed so many of their self-possession.

In the affairs of the Church, as well as of the State, he loved to see a constant and ever judicious advance; he would not have any of the threads severed which bind together the new and the old. Hence he declared against the so-called "Constituent Synods," projected in 1848; and these, in fact, would only have done injury, had they been, as he conceived them to be, courts sitting in judgment upon what was henceforth to be received as the doctrines of the Church. But such a tendency might have been easily avoided; and when we think how much has been lost by nearly forty years of neglect, and the difficulty of its restoration, we can only desire that efforts for the building up of our Protestant Church should not again be undervalued; there may at least be progress in the ecclesiastical order and arrangement of the individual churches, so that, when there is greater clearness in doctrine, we may find the foundations ready for the future structure.

The question whether Gieseler was a rationalist, was answered in the negative, immediately after his death, by a Theologian of high standing, his colleague, Dr. Dorner;* and he certainly was never what we now most commonly understand by that word. From the beginning to the end of his literary career, he held immovably to the truth of justification through faith alone, the fundamental idea of the Protestant system, understanding by this, the free personal reception of the divine truth and grace that come through the mediation of Christ, and are manifested in Him. He did not put the knowledge given by human reason above the divine truth given us in Christ; he acknowledged him only to be a Christian who saw in Christ the sum of all the highest truth, never to be surpassed by any one here below. But when, on the other hand, any one detracted from the right and obligation of human reason to appropriate, examine, and grasp this truth, to free it from the letter and receive it as spirit and truth, he became a bold and strong champion for this right, which no one ever undervalued without punishment; for reason is that light in us which can not become darkness, without plunging the whole man into darkness (Matth. vi. 22. 23; Luke, xi. 34. 35). In this sense Gieseler was a rationalist, and had in full measure the claim to be honored with that appellation by those who so readily give it to all who hold to clear and logical thinking, and to a wise separation between what is scientifically certain and all arbitrary fancies. He was ever averse to what some love to call profundity of doctrine, to that empty speculation which is either ignorant of or overthrows the empirical basis on which it should rest, and which runs a tilt against all logic without respect; he laughed in a quiet way at one and another who, without the capacity, considered themselves to be speculative theologians. Every philosophical position had for him value only in the degree of its real certainty; it was one of his prime convictions, that in theology nothing is now more important than the difficult, yet not impossible sundering of the spheres of faith and knowledge (πίστις and γνώσις), of that which is the object of faith, and that which is but a human elaboration of the materials, necessarily changing with the progress of time, and always developing itself with many a fluctuation.

His whole treatment of church history rests upon this distinction. His sole aim was to exhibit the historical developments as they were: he combined in one view whatever was internally connected; he made the agencies and counter-agencies apparent, and pointed out the aim and tendencies of events; but he held himself aloof from the construction of arbitrary schemes and divisions, and from all merely subjective judgments. Starting from the position to which the investigations had already advanced, he penetrated to the problems under the guidance of previous leaders, and had a singular gift of quickly finding the way that led to the goal, without taking any fruitless step. It might be said that the intellectual traits of his Westphalian father-land—where is ever found so much unperverted practical sense, quickly seizing upon the right point—were his own in the highest perfection in his scientific explorations. To the outward form he assigned a subordinate value, as well in his own writings as in his critical investigations. He was sagacious in conjecturing the right words of original documents; many such emendations of high value are due to him. Perhaps, however, in the question of the genuineness of this or that work, he allowed too little influence to its external form—its diction.

The plan and arrangement of his church history are not one symmetrical whole, or, rather, a change in the original plan was made with the second volume. At first intended to be in three volumes of about the same size, the work in the second was so extended, that it lost in some measure its original destination as a guide in the University lectures. The disproportion was to be made up by a more concise history of the period from the Peace of Westphalia, 1648, to the year 1814. But who laments this enlargement of the work? In the very form which the author gave it, it has become the mine from which is drawn so much learning in church history; without it a mass of our later outlines of church history would, doubtless, not have appeared, or at least would not have offered so rich materials.

In another place will be found a designation of the more salient parts of this church history.* In the history of the ancient church Gieseler's assiduity and preference were specially devoted to the Greek Theology. Our acquaintance with it has been materially enlarged by his Programmes upon the opinions of the "Alexandrian Clement and of Origen as to the Body of the Lord," upon the pseudepigraphic "Vision of Isaiah," upon the doctrines of the "Monophysites," as well as by his edition of the "History of the Manichees" by Petrus Siculus, and of the "Panoply" of Euthymius Zygadenus (Tit. 23). In the medieval times he entered into the most thorough and successful examination of the sources of the history of the Cathari, of the Waldenses, of the reforming parties and tendencies before the Reformation, of the cultus, and even of many portions of political history, so far as involved in that of the Papacy. But the crown of his labors in church history is the second division of the third volume (in the German), which exhibits the doctrinal development in the period of the Reformation to the Peace of Westphalia. We there find in the most compressed expression, in many points exhausting all the sources, rich instruction upon the mutual relations of the two great branches of the Reformation, the Swiss and the German, upon the growth of Luther's views, upon the clerical office and the shaping of the Protestant church government.

Gieseler also wrote upon ecclesiastical matters of immediate interest. During the controversy of the Prussian State with the Archbishop of Cologne, he published a work, enumerating the concessions which each party must make to re-establish permanent peace. He gave these counsels under the name of Irenaeus. He retained the same name in another pamphlet, in which he exposed the wondrous perverseness of the times, as seen in those who, in their zeal for so-called "confessional truth," insisted upon it that even their ecclesiastical opponents should be equally zealous for their own confessions; as when, for example, a Lutheran maintained that Calvinists or Catholics must hold stiffly to the distinguishing doctrines of their own communions, while he at the same time rejected them himself as soul-destroying poison. Under his own name he published his acute investigations upon the "Lehmin Prophecy," whose warning words seem still to announce to Prussia impending misfortunes in the perilous position in which that great state is now entangled.

Gieseler also took the liveliest interest in the neighboring Dutch and French Churches. In 1840 he introduced to the German public a work on the "Disturbances in the Dutch Reformed Church," whose author did not wish to be named; and in 1848, a still larger work, the "History of the Protestant Church in France, from 1787 to 1846." His last literary labor was a discriminating review of the Essays of Chastel and Schmidt, to which the French Academy of Moral Sciences awarded prizes, upon the "Influence of Christianity on the Social State of the Roman Empire," a subject which also involves the question of the restorative means offered by Christianity for the social oppressions and perils of our own times.

This question was one which he examined in the most various aspects. He was a man with a clear eye and an open heart for all who are straitened and in distress: science did not take him away from life, it was rather a means of his better preparation for the most various and useful practical service. From manifold experience Gieseler had become acquainted with the life and the relations of the laboring classes, the difficulties and deprivations with which so many are now contending, and not through their own fault; his strong and manly sense of right made him sympathize with all human needs, even those of the guilty. He first called into life in Göttingen a society for the aid of dismissed convicts; he wrote the statutes for the large funds of the "Von Hugo Stipends," which were under his direction as long as he lived; and so wisely did he administer them, that they can now be completely and permanently applied to many a beneficent object. There have probably never lived many men who have rendered more efficient aid than he, or in a more unassuming, sympathizing, and obliging way.

He possessed in a high degree the faculty of order and practical organization, and was wise in the direction of entangled affairs. He seemed born to take the lead. In the critical state of the University fifteen years ago, he showed his discretion and firmness to the full satisfaction of all who were able to understand without prejudice the actual state of the case. Gieseler was also willing to rule, but, we must add, he was without any trace of lordliness; he gave his reasons, he convinced, and if at any time outvoted, he seemed to question again for a moment his own opinion, which, however, he seldom changed, even when he did not refer to it anew. He gave his counsel only when asked; he helped and cared for many a one before they came to him.

He was a very faithful friend. He did not lightly withdraw his confidence from any one to whom he ever gave it.

He never seemed proud of the numerous honors which were bestowed upon him during his life. Far from all vanity, he had a noble, manly self-respect; he felt his own worth without being distinctly conscious of it. He stood firm for the right good cause, not troubled by the sacrifices it might cost. He took the most lively part in the struggle for the maintenance of the Union (between the Reformed and Lutheran Churches), and rejoiced with all his heart in the new light that seemed to break in upon the darkness before his departure. He felt assured that in the kingdom of the Lord new and fair days of prosperity would come, though they be delayed.

Faithful to the welfare of the Church and of his country, and ministering with love to the necessities of others, he was also visited with many a care in his own house. After the death of his first wife in the year 1831, which soon followed his transference to Göttingen, he found compensation for a loss he ever deplored, in his second marriage with a relative of the deceased, Amelia Villaret, whom he chose as his companion and the guardian of his children. This marriage, too, was unusually fruitful in children. Care for their education was added to the necessity of providing for his other sons and daughters, already grown up. But to the last day of his life he had constant experience of the truth of Him who has said to his house, My eyes shall be open upon it both night and day.

On his dying bed he saw all his sons and daughters gathered around him, with the exception of two, who could not come for the distance, and took his last farewell of them, comforted by that firm trust in God which was the leading trait of his character. Until that time sound in soul and body as are few, retaining a vigorous manly form of youthful freshness even to his sixty-third year, he sank only by slow degrees under the violence of the abdominal disease by which he was suddenly attacked. His vigorous body resisted long the pangs of the assault, till its powers were exhausted, and a still and peaceful decease brought to its close his active life on the eighth of July, 1854, in the earliest dawn of morning. Three days later he was interred. Both the city and the University equally felt his loss. The long funeral retinue showed that a place was vacant which another would not soon fill with equal power and honor.

The name of Gieseler will not be forgotten in the history of Göttingen, in science, or in the Church. Whoever knew him as he was, preserves his memory thankfully and faithfully, as a costly treasure among his dearest memories. He, however, separated from us, and regretted with deep sorrow in the ranks of his fellow-champions for the dear and noble freedom and unity of our Evangelical Church, still acts among us by his works and by his life, and thus, like the oldest of all the witnesses for God (Heb. xi. 4), although he is dead, he yet speaketh.

The work in the original consists of several volumes published at different times. The first division of the last volume, containing a portion of the history of the Reformation in different lands, appeared in 1840. In 1844 and 1845 a fourth edition of the first volume was published, one part in each year, greatly improved and enlarged. The author states, in the preface, that this volume first appeared twenty years ago, and that during the interval he has not been inattentive to the subject, but has endeavored to conform his book to the latest investigations. On comparing this edition with the third, we have observed a great improvement, and a large number of new notes.

It may be proper to apprise the reader, that an American translation of the history, down to the time of the Reformation, appeared at Philadelphia in 1836, professedly taken from the third edition of the original, the fourth, however, is so different from the third (if, indeed, Cunninghame's version was made from the latter), that it was deemed desirable to make a new version.

The Translator has adhered closely to the original text. His simple aim has been to give the sense of his author. He has not endeavored to make the narrative smooth or elegant, for in that case he should have been compelled to resort to paraphrase, Professor Gieseler being by no means an elegant writer. On the contrary, his style is loose, and his sentences evidently constructed without any view to effect. It must be always remembered, that the book is a text-book, not an extended history, like Neander's. As such, the Translator reckons it invaluable. In truth, there are only two ecclesiastical histories at the present time that deserve to be read and studied, viz. those of Neander and Gieseler, both ex fontibus hausti, as Bretschneider once remarked to the writer. Gue-rike's is one-sided; and Hase's, alas is too short. The Translator, on looking about for a text-book which he could put into the hands of his students as the substratum of lectures on ecclesiastical history, could find none so suitable to his purpose as the present; and he accordingly recommended the enterprising publishers to bring out a new version of the new edition, that students might not be obliged to apply to the American translation, the cost of which is very considerable.

It is almost superfluous to state, that the Translator does not coincide with all the sentiments of Dr. Gieseler. He has occasionally inserted in brackets a reference to books with which the German professor is probably unacquainted.

THE CHURCH.

Ständlin über den Begriff der Kirche und Kirchengeschichte (in the Göttingen Bibliothek d. Neuesten Theolog. Literatur i. 600). C. G. Bretschneider's systemat. Entwicklung aller in der Dogmatik vorkommenden Begriffe (4te Auflage, Leipzig, 1841), S. 749. Dr. H. F. Jacobson, über die Individualität des Wortes u. Begriffes Kirche (in his Kirchenrechtlichen Versuchen, i. 58).

*The Christian Church*¹ (ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Matt. xvi. 18, ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Θεοῦ, 1 Cor. x. 32, Gal. i. 13) is a religious-moral society, connected together by a common faith in Christ, and which seeks to represent in its united life the kingdom of God announced by Christ (τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοῦ οὐρανοῦ). This kingdom it hopes to see at one time realized, and strives to prepare itself for becoming worthy of having a part in it.² The church bears the same relation to the kingdom of God as the Israelitish church (יהוה יקהל, Numb. xx. 4) had to the ideal theocracy expected by it. And as the divine kingdom of Christ is the purified and spiritual antitype of the theocracy, so is the Christian church the antitype of the Jewish. Differences relating to the objects of Christian faith and ecclesiastical life early separated the church into various distinct societies, each of which commonly assumed to itself exclusively the name of the "true church of Christ," and branded the others with the titles heresy and schism (haeresis, schisma).

While the old unreformed church associations are continually prejudiced by this particularism, Protestants, on the contrary, acknowledge every ecclesiastical society which holds Christian truth in greater or less purity and clearness, to be a preparatory institution for the kingdom of God, and as such belonging to the universal Christian church, whose true essence is the invisible church, the entire number of all true believers throughout the world.

DEFINITION OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY—ITS PARTS—GENERAL HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

Casp. Royko Einleit. in die christl. Religions- und Kirchengeschichte. Aufl. 2. Prag. 1791. 8.—Ch. W. Flügge Einleit. in das Studium u. in die Literatur der Religions- u. Kirchengeschichte, besonders der christlichen. Göttingen. 1801. 8.

The object of ecclesiastical history is to give a pragmatic view of all the changes and developments through which the Christian church has passed, and the influences which it has exerted on other human relations, and thus to lay the foundation for an ethical and teleological estimate of it. As time consists of moments, so is history made up of circumstances connected together as cause and effect. Every condition of the church rests on a two-fold relation. To its internal relations belongs, first of all, that religious faith which forms its bond of union, both in its scientific development and in its life in the members; next the character of the public religious exercises; and thirdly, the form of government. To the external relations of the church belong its diffusion and its relation to other associations, particularly to the state. Though these several relations are not independent of one another, but are developed by constant mutual action, they admit of separate historical developments. We have, therefore,

I. A history of the church's external relations (external church history), viz. :—

1. History of its spread and limitation.¹
2. History of its relation to the state.²

II. A history of its internal relations (internal history of the church), viz. :—

1. History of the teaching of the church.

A description of the worship, ecclesiastical usages, and constitution of the ancient church, is included in the somewhat vague appellation, ecclesiastical antiquities, or archæology,⁹ although these departments do not embrace merely one point of time, but a longer or shorter period, and ought, therefore, to belong to history.

The materials of ecclesiastical history are also divided by a reference to particular countries, and to separate ecclesiastical societies,¹⁰ whose special developments are presented in special

RELATION OF CHURCH HISTORY TO OTHER HISTORICAL STUDIES.

Ecclesiastical history forms a part of the *general history of culture*¹ and of religion,² and requires attention to other departments of study, that we may judge rightly of the importance of Christianity in relation to general culture, and of its contests with other religions. It is scientifically co-ordinate with political history,³ the history of philosophy,⁴ and the history of literature,⁵ with which it stands in so close relationship, that, to be fully understood, it can as little dispense with their aid as they can dispense with it. Besides, it requires, as other histor-

In addition to the well-known chronological distinctions ab urbe condita, according to the consuls, emperors, &c., the following eras are important in church history. Aera contractionum or Seleucidarum, beginning B.C. 312, 1st October, formerly the most common in the east, and to this day the ecclesiastical era of the Syrian Christians. Aera Hispanica begins 716 A.U.C., 38 B.C., abolished in Spain in the fourteenth century, in Portugal not until 1415. Aera Diocletiana or aera Martyrum, begins 29th August, A.D. 284, used in the Christian Roman empire, and still current among the Copts. Cyclus indictionum, a fifteen years' cycle constantly recurring, which first began on the 1st September, 312, but in the middle ages assumed the usual commencement of the year. Aera Constantinopolitana reckons after the creation of the world, the 1st September, 5508 B.C., since the council of Trulla (692), in civil use among the Greeks, among the Russians abolished in 1700. Besides the different commencements of the year must be noticed in the reckoning of time. Comp. Ideler's Handbuch ii. 325, ff.

USE OF THE SOURCES.

The object of investigations in church history is to reproduce, directly from the original sources, the facts belonging to the sphere of the church, in its external and internal life, in their manifestations as well as their grounds, and also in their causal connections. For this purpose the historian requires not only a penetrating and unbiased interpretation of the sources which present themselves, but also historical criticism, to enable him to judge of the genuineness, integrity, and credibility of the sources, not only in general, but in each particular case.¹ This criticism must be the more watchful, since distortions of historical truth frequently appear in the province of ecclesiastical history, produced by credulity and ignorance, by prejudice and partisanship, by the desire to adapt it to certain ends, and even by deceit. In those cases in which the sources afford nothing at all, or what is false, relative either to single facts or their causal connection, the inquirer must have recourse to historical conjectures, whose probability may border very nearly on truth, but often, perhaps, may rise very little above other possibilities. In forming such historical conjectures, he must be guided by a careful consideration of existing relations, of the character of the period and persons, by analogy, and even by the false data of the sources. The ecclesiastical historian must renounce party interest, as well as prejudices arising from the peculiarities of his time. On the other hand, he can not penetrate into the internal character of the phenomena of church history without a Christian religious spirit, because one can not generally comprehend aright any strange spiritual phenomenon without reproducing it in himself. It is only investigation of this nature that can discover where the Christian spirit is entirely wanting, where it is used merely as a mask, and what other spirit has taken its place. Wherever it exists it will not be mistaken, although it should manifest itself in such ways as are foreign to the spirit of our own times.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE MATERIALS OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.— HISTORIC REPRESENTATION.

The old methods of arranging the materials of ecclesiastical history according to years, or of dividing them into centuries, have been rightly abandoned. The division into periods, by means of epochs, has been generally adopted, although great difference prevails in fixing these periods. We assume four periods: the first, To the time of Constantine, the first development of the church under external oppression; the second, Till the beginning of the image controversies, the development of Christianity as the prevailing religion of the state; the third, Till the Reformation, the development of the Papacy prevailing over the state; the fourth, The development of Protestantism.¹ The contents of each period may be arranged either chronologically or according to a general scheme taken from the different relations of the church. (§ 2.) Both methods used exclusively have their advantages and disadvantages. In the chronological arrangement things similar are often too widely separated, and the lines of development are torn asunder. In the other arrangement, when the periods are large, the mutual influence which the development of separate ecclesiastical relations has on each other at different times is obscured, and the survey of the entire condition of one particular time is rendered difficult. We must therefore endeavor, as far as possible, to unite the advantages of both methods, and to avoid their disadvantages. Although every period has its definite ecclesiastical character, yet this character undergoes many modifications during the lapse of the whole period. Hence the division of periods into small sections of time is justified. The materials of these smaller sections are best arranged chronologically, as long as the church in its first beginnings has not yet formed its internal relations; afterward they may be disposed according to a division taken from these internal relations. In every section of time there prevails the development of one or of several ecclesiastical relations, so that the development of all the other relations of the church is thereby controlled. It is therefore suitable to dispose the history of the different relations in the church in every minor period, according to their relative importance, and their influence on the whole.

The mode of writing ecclesiastical history must be worthy of the subject. The phenomena make a continual demand upon our moral and religious feelings. Where moral greatness is manifested, they excite our admiration; where they bear witness to errors, they excite our compassion; where they evince immoral designs and motives, they stir up our indignation; but they never furnish a fit subject for ridicule.

VALUE OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.¹

Church history has a universal interest for men, as it forms the most important part of the religious history of humanity. For the Christian it has a peculiar interest, since it discloses to him the later transformations of Christianity, with their causes and effects, and guides him to a safe judgment with regard to what is original and essential in it. On this account, it is indispensable to the Christian theologian who desires to acquire a scientific knowledge of Christianity.² It is also of importance

§ 8.

The Roman empire, in the first century, extended not only over the whole civilized world, but almost over the known world. Beyond it little was known besides the Germanic tribes in the north, and the Parthians in the east. In the western half of that great empire, the language and customs of the Romans had become prevalent; but in the eastern, Greek cultivation asserted the superiority it had obtained since Alexander's conquests, and under the emperors penetrated more and more even into Rome.¹

¹ Cicero pro Archia, c. 10: Graeca leguntur in omnibus fere gentibus, Latina suis finibus, exiguis sane, continentur. How the Greek had incorporated itself with the language of conversation among cultivated Romans, may be seen in Cicero's Letters to Atticus, and

It is obvious, how much the union of so many nations under one government, and the general diffusion of the Greek language, must have favored the heralds of Christianity.

OF THE RELIGIOUS AND MORAL CHARACTER OF THE ANCIENT NATIONS IN GENERAL.

Polytheism can not, from its very nature, be favorable to morality. Its deities can only be finite beings, and resembling man, because it separates the divinity into many parts. Every nation gives expression to its character, its virtues, and its vices, in the deities it worships; and therefore the divinity, so disfigured, can not lead men to a higher moral elevation. The heathen stand only in an external relation to their gods; and their entire religion is consequently nothing more than an external worship, which leaves untouched not only theological speculation, as long as it does not attack existing forms, but also moral sentiment. Human deities will be worshiped, propitiated, and reconciled, in the way of men; and for this purpose moral elevation is not needed so much as a kind of prudence. They can not inspire respect and love, but fear only. Their worship is nothing more than a barter, in which man expects mercy, protection, and greater gifts, in exchange for demonstrations of respect, and offerings. This general character of polytheism is found in all heathen religions at the time of Christ. A mythology partly immoral, sanctified many vices by the example of the gods. The worship of several deities was attended with immoral deeds. Thus, the worship of Bel in Babylon, of Amun in Thebes, of Aphrodite in Cyprus, Corinth, and many other places, elevated lewdness to the position of a religious service;¹ and the worship of other deities excited, at least, sensuality in a high degree.² In like manner, human sacrifices were customary, in several places, as yearly expiations; but every where, on occasion of extraordinary threatening dangers, for the purpose of propitiating the enraged deities.³ Religious motives existed only to promote the exercise of the duties belonging to citizens;⁴ and whatever of a higher nature appears in the case of individual Greeks and Romans was owing, not to the religion of the people, but to their better moral nature.⁵ In general, the feeling of man's dignity and rights was wanting, while in place of it was found nothing but a partial national conceit, joined to a profound contempt for every thing foreign, and propped up by religion, since every nation had but the expression of its own nationality in its deities. Hence the horrible debasement of man as a slave.⁶ When the national pride was humbled by subjugation and oppression, the people readily lost along with it every noble feeling of self-respect, and sank into slavish abjectness. Woman lost among the Greeks the respect due to her, because of her political insignificance, since public virtue was deemed of the highest importance with that people.⁷ Among eastern nations, polygamy had the same effect to a much greater extent.

RELIGION AND MORALS OF THE GREEKS.

Tom. 8. Groningen, 1833-43. 8vo.

The Greek deities were ideal Greeks, whose sentiments and conduct were Grecian. By their will and example they exhorted to those virtues to which the Grecian character was disposed, or which were found necessary for the state and for social life. But so far were they from imaging forth a pure morality, and so little freed from the national vices of the Greeks,¹ that the mythology granted even by the Greek philosophers was able, for the most part, to influence morality only in the way of injury.² After the subjugation of Greece, when national honor, love of country, and patriotism had ceased to be powerful motives, we find Greece in the condition of the deepest moral degradation. Religion became with the people scarcely any thing but an enjoyment of art, wanting too often in all that partakes of a moral spirit. Hence it was unable to elevate the deteriorated nation above their external destiny. How much the cultivation of the intellect and taste was preferred to morality, even in the flourishing times of Greece, is proved by the general estimation in which clever courtesans were held; while the rest of the female sex were, for the most part, neglected, as far as their spiritual culture was concerned.³ The love of boys, which was so general, and inspired so many poets, shows how art ministered even to unnatural vices. The mysteries were far from presenting a better esoteric religion than that of the people.⁴ They offered nothing but a secret mythology which attached itself to the popular religion—a secret ritual to be practiced in worshipping the gods—directions for the purification of the initiated, accompanied, it is true, by several moral precepts, but all for the purpose of making the deities peculiarly propitious to the initiated.

² Plato (de repub. ii.) wishes to banish the immoral mythology from his republic; Aristotle (Politie. vii. *) proposes that the young at least should be excluded from witnessing immoral rites.

RELIGION AND MORALS OF THE ROMANS TO THE TIME OF AUGUSTUS.

The religion of the Romans was of a more grave and moral character, although in it the Grecian element was mixed up with the Etrurian. We find the ancient Romans distinguished not only for their political but their domestic virtues, and for a chastity rarely found in the bosom of heathenism. As long as Grecian art was unknown at Rome, so long, too, did the Grecian mythology with its poisoning influence remain unknown;¹ but after the destruction of Carthage and Corinth, the national character generally, and the Roman religion along with it, underwent by degrees a great alteration for the worse.² The riches which flowed into the city, the knowledge of Asiatic lux-

aries, and the mode of instruction followed by Greek masters, led to licentiousness and excesses; while the Grecian mythology, incorporated with Grecian art, was diffused by the poets, and entirely extinguished the old Roman character with its rigid virtue.³

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION OF THE ROMANS.

It was an universal principle among the ancients, that the gods themselves had arranged the peculiar form of their worship in every country. Hence all polytheistic religions were tolerant toward each other, as long as every worship confined itself to its own people or country. This toleration was also observed by the Romans.¹ On the other hand, to introduce strange gods and modes of worship without the sanction of the state was tantamount to the introduction of a superstition prejudicial to the interests of the community.² When, therefore, after the extended conquests of the Romans, foreign modes of worship were more and more introduced into the city, partly lessening, by that means, attachment to the national religion, and partly promoting even immoral practices, the laws against the sacra peregrina were frequently renewed.³ Religious societies of foreign origin could not easily hold out against such prohibitions, since, coming under the Roman idea of collegia,⁴ they were also opposed by the laws against collegia illicita,⁵ and since all nocturnal associations were forbidden under pain of death.⁶ On the other hand, the private worship of strange gods was not so easily eradicated.

RELATION OF PHILOSOPHY TO THE POPULAR RELIGIONS.

As soon as philosophy was cultivated in Greece, the unity of

⁶ Tab. ix. Lex 6: Sei quei endo urbe coitus nocturnos agitasit, capital estod. This determination was renewed by the lex Gabinia (Leges xii. Tabularum restitutæ et illustratæ a J. N. Funccio. Rintelii. 1744. 4. p. 400.)

God was expressed in most of the schools,¹ and morality was placed on a more becoming and a religious foundation.² But while philosophy could not fail of producing a high religious feeling in the narrow circle of the initiated, it occasioned a crude skepticism among the more numerous class of the half instructed. Although Plato and Aristotle directly expressed their sentiments regarding the popular religion in a reserved and cautious manner, and even conformed externally to its requirements,³ yet their theology afforded a standard by which, when many parts of the popular faith were judged, they must necessarily vanish into nothing. The Stoic pantheism endeavored to preserve the current mythology by considering the deities as the fundamental powers of the universe, and explaining the myths allegorically; but it destroyed, at the same time, all religious feeling by its spirit of pride.⁴ The Epicurean philosophy, as far as it removed all connection between the gods and the world, making the latter originate in chance, destroyed all religion and morality; and though this was not its tendency in the eyes of the founder, it was certainly the aim of his later disciples. The skepticism of the middle and new academy exerted no better influence, at least in the larger circles.

Soon after Greek literature had been introduced at Rome after the time of Livius Andronicus (about 240 B.C.), skeptical doubts manifested themselves there also.⁵ Subsequently, the

He also distinguishes (l. c. vi. 5) tria genera theologiae, namely, mythicon, quo maxime utuntur poëtae, physicon, quo philosophi, civile, quo populi. Primum, quod dixi, in eo sunt multa contra dignitatem et naturam immortalium ficta. Secundum genus est, quod demonstravi, de quo multos libros philosophi reliquerunt. In quibus est: dii qui sint, ubi, quod genus caet. (Augustine adds: Nihil in hoc genere culpavit. Removit tamen hoc genus a foro i. e. a populis: scholis vero et parietibus clausit. Illud autem primum mendacissimum atque turpissimum a civitatibus non removit). Tertium genus est, quod in urbibus cives, maxime sacerdotes, nosse atque administrare debent. In quo est, quos deos publice colere, quae sacra et sacrificia facere quemquam par sit. Prima theologia maxime accommodata est ad theatrum, secunda ad mundum, tertia ad urbem. (Plutarch also, Amator, c. 18, and de placitis philosophi. i. 6, distinguishes this threefold theology, τὸ μυθικόν, τὸ φυσικόν and τὸ πολιτικόν). Respecting the religion of the Roman state, Varro, as reported by Augustine, l. c. iv. 31, said: non se illa iudicio suo sequi, quae civitatem Romanum instituisse commemorat; ut, si eam civitatem novam constitueret, ex naturae potius formula deos nominaque deorum se fuisse dedicaturum non dubitet confiteri. Sed jam quoniam in vetere populo essent accepta, ab antiquis nominum et cognominum historiam tenere ut tradita est debere se dicit, et ad eam finem illam scribere ac perscrutari, ut potius eos magis colere, quam despiciere vulgus velit. L. c. vii. 6: Dicit ergo idem Varro adhuc de naturali theologia prae loquens, Deum se arbitrari esse animam mundi, quem Graeci vocant κόσμον, et hunc ipsum mundum esse Deum. Hic videtur quoquo modo confiteri unum Deum, sed ut plures etiam introducat, adjungit, mundum dividi in duas partes, caelum et terram; et caelum bifariam in aethera et aëra, terram vero in aquam et humum. Quas omnes quatuor partes animarum esse plenas, in aethere et aëre immortalium, in aqua et terra mortalium: a summo autem circuitu caeli usque ad circulum lunae aethereas animas esse astra ac stellas, eosque caelestes deos non modo intelligi esse, sed etiam videri. Inter lunae vero gyrum et nimbosum ac ventorum cacumina aëreas esse animas, sed eas animo, non oculis videri, et vocari heroas, et lares, et genios. Haec est videlicet breviter in ista prae locutione proposita theologia naturalis, quae non huic tantum, sed et multis philosophis placuit. Tertulian's second book, ad Nationes, is directed against this theology of Varro. Comp. Hartung, i. 274. Krahnert, S. 49.

REVOLUTION OF RELIGIOUS MODES OF THINKING UNDER THE EMPERORS.

C. Meiners Gesch. des Verfalls der Sitten, der Wissenschaften und Sprache der Römer in den ersten Jahrhunderten nach Christi Geburt. Wien u. Leipzig 1791. 8. S. 268, ff. P. E. Müller de hierarchia et studio vitae asceticae in sacris et mysteriis Graecorum Romanorumque latentibus. Hafn. 1803. 8. (translated in the Neuen Biblioth. der schönen Wissench. Bd. 69 u. 70). To this topic belongs the first section, viz., Origin of the—superstition—till the time of Domitian.

In the reign of the emperors the national deities, who were obliged to divide their honors with the most miserable of men,¹ sank by degrees still lower in the faith of the people.² The attachment to traditional customs and institutions, decaying along with liberty, could no longer afford these gods a protection. Politics and habit secured them nothing more than a lukewarm, external worship.³ The relations of the times did not lead men away from the error that had been abandoned, toward a somewhat purer religion, but to a still grosser superstition. The cowardly weaklings,⁴ who were the offspring of a luxury surpass-

¹ According to Polybius, 5, the custom of honoring benefactors with sacrifices and altars appeared first among the Asiatics, the Greeks, and Syrians. Similar honors were frequently paid to proconsuls in their provinces. (Cicero ad Atticum v. 21. Sueton. Oct. c. 52. Mongault, in the Mémoires de l'Acad. des Inscr. t. i. p. 353, ss.) Caesar caused these honors to be decreed to him by the senate in Rome also. (Suet. Caes. 76). Augustus accepted in the provinces temples and colleges of priests (Tacit. Annal. i. 10, Suet. Oct. c. 52); and so did all his successors, with the single exception of Vespasian. Domitian even began his letters with: Dominus et Deus noster hoc fieri jubet (Suet. Domit. 13). J. D. Schoepflin *comm. de apotheosi s. consecratione Imp. Nec pueri credunt, nisi qui nondum aere lavantur.

Nunc patimur longae pacis mala. Saevior armis

ing all bounds, must have stood open to every superstition, especially as dangers daily threatened them from those in power. Curiosity, and an inordinate longing for the secret and the awful, contributed to increase the superstition. To this must be added the decline of the earnest study of the sciences (law and juridical eloquence being almost the only studies of the time); but, above all, the excessive corruption of the age.⁵ Cowardly vice sought partly to make magical rites subservient to its will,⁶ while it was, in part, driven to more powerful purifications by the stings of conscience. Already had the religions of the east, by their mysterious, fantastic worship, and the asceticism of their priests, made an impression on the superstitious disposition of the Romans, so that they had been restricted and opposed by the laws. But the current of the time that set in now broke through all laws. Foreign modes of worship and priests found their way into the state with a power that could not be repressed. In addition to them, a great number of astrologers (mathematici), who pretended to be initiated into the secret sciences of the east, interpreters of dreams, and magicians, spread themselves through the empire.⁷ The object of such per-

This superstition was promoted in no slight degree by philosophy making it subservient to its purpose.⁹ The more boldly philosophical skepticism had attacked not only the popular religions, but also the general truths of religion, so much the more zealously did the later dogmatism endeavor to put together systems framed in part from earlier ones, and in part from the materials themselves of the popular religion. In these newly-invented systems every superstition found shelter. Under Augustus, the long-forgotten doctrines of Pythagoras were suddenly revived in the most wonderful form by Anaxilaus, who was soon followed by the still more adventurous Apollonius of Tyana.¹⁰

Strabo vii. c. 3, § 4: "Ἀπαντες τῆς δεισιδαιμονίας ἀρχηγὸς οἰοῦνται τὰς γυναῖκας. αὐταὶ δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἄνδρας παρακαλοῦνται πρὸς τὰς ἐπίπλεον θεραπείας τῶν θεῶν, καὶ ἑορτὰς καὶ πορνιασμούς· σπάνιον δὲ εἰ τις ἄνθρωπος καθ' αὐτὸν ζῶν εὐρίσκειται τοιοῦτος. On the superstition of this period generally, see Plinii Nat. Hist. ii. c. 5: Vix prope est judicare, utrum magis conducat generi humano, quando aliis nullus est Deorum respectus, aliis pudendus. Externis famulantur sacris, ac digitis Deos gestant: monstra quoque, quae colunt, damnant et excogitant cibos, imperia dira in ipsos, ne somno quidem quieto, irrogant. Non matrimonia, non liberos, non denique quidquam aliud nisi juvantibus sacris deligunt. Alii in Capitolio fallunt, ac fulminantem pejerant Jovem: et hos juvant scelera, illos sacra sua poenis agunt.

⁸ Meiners, l. c. S. 276, ff. The example of the elder Pliny shows how unbelief and superstition united in the educated class. He says, Nat. ¹⁰ Apollonius lived from 3 B.C. till 96 A.D. Celsus does not name him among the wonder-workers (Aristeas, Abaris, &c.), whom he compares with Christ (Origen against Celsus, iii.). In the second century Lucian (in Alexander) and Apuleius (Apologia, Opp. ed. Elmenhorst, p. 331) describe him as a famous magician. In the same light did he also appear to his oldest biographer, Möragenes, who speaks besides of his influence with the philosophers (Origenes c. Cels. vi. ed. Spencer, p. 302), so that he appears to have given a philosophical basis to magic. From the beginning of the third century, when a religious eclecticism gained ground, the memory of Apollonius became prominent.

While these men endeavored to restore, out of its own sources, the Pythagorean philosophy, as if it had proceeded from the mysteries of Egyptian priests, and looked upon Platonism as an efflux of the doctrine of Pythagoras, a singular, heterogeneous philosophy of religion grew up under their hands, in which all popular religions, no less than all magic arts, found their justification. From this time onward even the Platonic school forsook the skepticism of the new academy, attaching itself to those modern Pythagoreans, though it sought to assimilate its dogmatism to other systems also, particularly the Aristotelian. The mode of life among the Pythagoreans was not attractive to many, and consequently this new Platonism formed the prevailing philosophy. With it, as the philosophy of superstition,¹¹ Epicureanism almost alone, as the philosophy of unbelief,¹² divided the dominion over the minds of men generally. Of the pure Peripatetics there was always but a small number; and though the Stoics could boast of so distinguished men at this time (Seneca, Dio of Prusa, Epictetus), yet their system of morality excited admiration, instead of exerting an influence on the life.¹³ The Cynics had lowered themselves so much by Caracalla dedicated a sanctuary to him (Dio Cassius, lxxvii. 18); Severus Alexander set him up in his collection of household gods (Aelius Lamprid. in vita Sev. Al. c. 29). Julia Mamaea, in particular, was a great admirer of him. Into her hands came the memorabilia of Damis, a companion of Apollonius, which Philostratus the elder, in his life of Apollonius (Philostratorum opera gr. et lat. ed. G. Olearius. Lips. 1709. fol.), wished to bring into a more acceptable form (vita Ap. i. 3) by using a work of Maximus of Aegae. Here Apollonius appears as a wise man and a favorite of the gods, furnished with wonderful powers in working miracles, and commissioned by the gods themselves to reform the popular religions. On the other hand, the older representation of Mōragenes is designated as almost useless. Dio Cassius, however, continually enumerates Apollonius among the magicians and impostors. That the work of Damis is spurious, and originated probably in the third century, may be proved not only from the absurdity of the contents, but also from anachronisms (Prideaux's Connection, Hug's Introduction to the N. T.) Cf. Mosheim de existimatione Apollonii Tyanaei (in his Commentationes et Orationes varii argumenti, ed. J. P. Miller. Hamburgi. 1751. 8. p. 347), de scriptis A. T. IN PALESTINE.

After the Babylonish captivity the Jews were successively subject to the Persians, Egyptians, and Syrians, and then formed (from 167-63 B.C.) an independent state under the Maccabees, till the last of that race, Hyrchanus, was obliged to acknowledge the Roman sovereignty. After his death Herod, the Idumean (from 40-4 B.C.), ruled over the land in dependence on the Romans, and afterward divided it among his three sons, so that Archelaus was ethnarch of Judea, Idumea, and Samaria, while Philip, and Herod Antipas, as tetrarchs, received possession—the former, of Batanea, Ituraea, and Trachonitis—the latter of Galilaea and Peraea. After the banishment of Archelaus (6 A.D.), his territories became a Roman province, and were governed under the proconsul of Syria, by a procurator, (the fifth, Pontius Pilate from 28-37 A.D.) The tetrachy of Philip did not continue long after his death in the hands of the Romans, but was consigned to Herod Agrippa (37), who the reason why he doubts of gaining over a wit, Marcellinus, to philosophy: Scrutabitur scholas nostras, et objiciet philosophis congiaria, amicas, gulam: ostendet mihi alium in adulterio, alium in popina, alium in aula. Hos mihi circulatorios, qui philosophiam honestius neglexissent, quam vendunt, in faciem ingeret. Juvenal. Sat. ii. init.

united it to the tetrarchy (39) of the banished Herod Antipas, and was finally elevated by Claudius even to be king of all Palestine (41). After his death, his entire kingdom again became a Roman province, managed by procurators, (Cuspius Fadus, Tiberius, Alexander, Ventidius Cumanus, Claudius Felix, Porcius Festus, Albinus, Gessius Florus). His son, Agrippa II., afterward obtained the kingdom of Chalcis (47), which he was soon obliged to change for the tetrarchy of Philip (52); while, at the same time, the superintendence of the temple at Jerusalem was intrusted to him as a Jew. With him the race of Herod became extinct († 100 at Rome).¹

Oppression under a foreign yoke, and especially the persecution of religion by Antiochus Epiphanes, had produced among the Jews a strict separation from all that was unjewish, inflaming their contempt and hatred for all foreign customs, and, at the same time, raising to a high degree their national feelings and attachment to the religion of their fathers. But, alas! a spiritual feeling for religion had expired with the spirit of prophecy. The priesthood, finding no longer any opposing obstacle, connected, with one-sided aim, the renovated zeal of the people with the external law, and, in particular, with the Levitical worship which was always enlarging itself, in which alone the priests, as such, had an interest. Even the synagogues that arose after the Babylonish captivity,² adapted as they were to promote a more spiritual religion, served still more to advance the legal spirit of the Levitical code. Hence, there arose at this time the most obstinate attachment—yea, a fanatical zeal for the Mosaic ceremonial, apart from any real religious feeling and moral improvement, and accompanied rather by a more general and deeper corruption of the people.³ With this disposition, which was directed only to the external, their pride in transmitted privileges, and in the peculiar favor of Jehovah, increased equally with the hope that God would soon free his favorite people from the yoke of the heathen, and under the dominion of Messiah elevate them to be the rulers of the earth. These earthly expectations and views, which the people painted to themselves in a highly sensuous degree, must have been very prejudicial to the inward religious feelings.⁴ At the same time, the opinion was not rare, that it was unworthy of the people of God to obey a foreign power.⁵ On the other hand, the prejudices and national pride of a people despised by the Romans, infused hatred into the minds of the procurators and other Roman officials, which was often exhibited in provocations and oppressions. Hence arose frequent rebellions against the Roman power, till at last the general insurrection under Gessius Florus (65) led to the devastation of the whole land, and the destruction of Jerusalem, (70). By this means the strength of the people was broken for a time, but their disposition and aims were not changed.

It remains for us to notice three sects of the Jews:⁶ the Pharisees,⁷ in whom the Judaism of that time, with the new doctrinal sentiments acquired in exile, and its own continued culture of the Levitical law, presented itself in a completed form. All the traits of the national character were presented by this sect in a still more cultivated degree, and hence it was the greatest favorite among the people. *The Sadducees*⁸ en-

SENTIMENTS OF THE HEATHEN NATIONS TOWARD JUDAISM.

Judaism was respected by the heathen as an old, popular religion; and Jehovah, as the God of the Jews, received, particularly from the different rulers of this country, the honors due to the deity of the land.¹ But the Jews did not respect the religions of other people in the same manner, inasmuch as they treated their deities as nonentities, avoided all intercourse with foreigners as unclean, and expected that their own only true God would one day triumph over all other nations.² Hence opinion that, though Philo does not mention the Sadducees, there are many references to them in his works, whereas the parties whom Philo combats are to be looked for in Alexandria (comp. Schreiter in Keil's u. Tzschirner's Analecten i. 1, u. ii. 1). Comp. Winer ii. 415.

² Certainly the Jewish idea of the Messiah was known to the heathens in general, but we must not derive the measure of this knowledge from the passages: Sueton. Vespas. c. 4: Percebuerat Oriente toto vetus et constans opinio, esse in fatiis, ut eo tempore Judaea profecti rerum potirentur. Tacit. Hist. 5, 13: Pluribus persuasio inerat, antiquis sacerdotum literis contineri, eo ipso tempore fore, ut valesceret oriens, profectique Judaea rerum potirentur. Both these historians have here manifestly copied Josephus (de B. J. vi. 5, 4: ἤν χρησιμὸς ἀμφίβολος ὁμοίως ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς εὐρημένος γράμμασιν, ὡς κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἐκεῖνον ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας τις αὐτῶν ἄρξει τῆς οἰκουμένης), as is proved not they were despised and hated, especially since antiquity was accustomed to estimate the power of the gods by the condition of the people that served them.³ They were most hated by the neighboring nations, particularly the Egyptians. In the eyes of the proud Romans, they were rather an object of contempt.⁴ We find, therefore, no attempt, under the dominion of the Romans, to extinguish this hostile religion, such as that made by Antiochus Epiphanes, although, once and again, there seems to have been a design to make Roman customs universal in opposition to the national prejudices. This hatred and contempt produced singular stories respecting the origin and history of the Jews,⁵ as well as absurd notions of their religion;⁶ and only by the similarity of the words and the common reference to Vespasian, but also the express mention of Josephus and his prophecy in Sueton. Vesp. c. 5. But Josephus, in this case, gave a Grecian expression to the Jewish notion of the Messiah, and the flattering application to Vespasian was made for the purpose of giving importance to the writer's nation and himself, and to remove suspicion from them, for the present at least. Tacitus makes frequent use of Josephus in his history of the Jews, though he always takes a Roman point of view.

CONDITION OF THE JEWS OUT OF PALESTINE.

J. Remond Geschichte der Ausbreitung des Judenthums von Cyrus bis auf den gänzlichen Untergang des jüd. Staats. Leipz. 1789. 8. Jost's Gesch. d. Israeliten. Th. 2. S. 262.

The Jewish people were by no means confined to Palestine. Only the smaller part of them had availed themselves of the permission of Cyrus to return to their native land, and therefore numbers had remained behind in Babylonia, who, doubtless, spread themselves farther toward the east, so that in the first century they were very considerable (οὐκ ὀλίγαι μυριάδες, Jos. Ant. xv. 3, 1). In Arabia, the kings of the Homerites (about 100 B.C.) had even adopted the Jewish religion, and subsequently it had reached the throne of Adiabene, by the conversion of King Izates, (about 45 A.D., comp. Jos. Ant. xx. 2). At the building of Alexandria, Alexander the Great brought a colony of Jews to settle there, (Jos. de B. J. ii. 36); more were brought by Ptolemy Lagus to Egypt, Cyrene, and Lybia, (Jos. Ant. xii. 2, 4); and the Jews were very numerous in these places, (1,000,000, Philo in Flacc. p. 971. In Alexandria two-fifths of the population, ibid. p. 973). By trade they soon became rich and powerful.¹ Many Jewish colonists had also been carried into Syria by Seleucus Nicanor (Jos. Ant. xii. 3, 1), especially to Antioch, where, in after times, a great part of the population consisted of Jews (Jos. de B. J. vii. 3, 3). Antiochus the Great was the first who sent a Jewish colony to Phrygia and Lydia (Jos. l. c.), and from these two countries they had spread themselves not only over the whole of Asia numen adorant). Others thought that they worshiped Bacchus (Plutarch Sympos. iv. Qu. 5, Tacit. Hist. 5. 5). According to others, the object of adoration was an ass's head (Apion ap. Jos. c. Ap. ii. 7. Tacit. Hist. 5. 4. Plut. l. c.) According to others, a swine (Plutarch l. c. Petronius in fragm.: Judaeus, licet et Porcinum numen adoret, &c.) Comp. the fable of the Jews sacrificing every year a Greek, and eating of his flesh (*Joseph. c. Minor, but also over Greece. The first Jews in Rome had been brought as prisoners of war by Pompey. They afterward obtained their freedom (therefore they were styled libertini, Philo de legat. ad Caj. p. 1014, Tacit. Ann. ii. 85), received permission from Julius Caesar to erect synagogues (Jos. Ant. xiv. 10, 8), and soon occupied the greatest part of the city beyond the Tiber (Philo l. c.). Thus, at the time of Christ it was not easy to find a country in the whole Roman empire in which the Jews did not dwell (Strabo, xiv. c. 2, Philo legat. ad Caj. p. 1031).

All these widely dispersed Jews (ἡ διασπορά) considered Jerusalem as their common capital, the sanhedrim of that place as their ecclesiastical supreme court; and sent not only yearly contributions in money (δίδραχμα), and offerings to the temple (Philo de Monarch. lib. ii. p. 822, in Flacc. 971, legat. ad Caj. 1014, 1023, 1031, Cicero pro Flacc. 12, Tacit. Hist. 5, 5), but also frequently repaired thither to the great festivals (Philo de Monarch. lib. ii. p. 821), without detriment being done to this common sanctuary by the temple built in Leontopolis (152 B.C.) by Onias.² They obtained peculiar privileges, not only in the places where they settled as colonists at the desire of the princes of the country, but Caesar had allowed them the free exercise of their religion,³ in a series of regulations enacted for the purpose, while he granted them several favors in relation to their law.⁴ But these very distinctions merely served to make them still more hated by their fellow-citizens, with whom, therefore, they had frequent quarrels.

² The temple of Onias was as far from causing a schism among the Jews as the dispute between the Pharisees and Sadducees, although the building of it was disapproved by the Palestinian Jews.

⁴ Comp. Jos. Ant. xiv. 10, 2, ff. Claudius, in his edict, gives briefly what was granted them, and what was required of them, (Jos. Ant. xix. 5, 3): Ἰουδαίους τοὺς ἐν παντὶ τῷ ὄψ' ἡμᾶς κόσμῳ τὰ πατρία ἔθνη ἀνεκικλύτως φυλάσσειν, —καὶ μὴ τὰς τῶν ἄλλων ἐθνῶν δεσπομονίας ἐξουθενίειν. *Decreta Romana et Asiatica pro Judaeis ad cultum div.—secure obeundum—restituta a Jac. In the mean time, Judaism had been introduced in many ways among the heathen. It is true that only a few became complete converts to it by submitting to circumcision (proselytes of righteousness);⁵ but several, particularly women,⁶ attached themselves to it for the purpose of worshipping Jehovah as the one true God, without observing the Mosaic law (proselytes of the gate),⁷ which was sufficient for those who were not Jews, according to the opinion of the more liberal Jewish expositors.⁶ Others, on the contrary, especially in Rome, which longed after foreign rites, felt themselves attracted, not so much by the religion, as by the religious ceremonial of the Jews. These individuals observed Jewish ceremonies without separating themselves on that account from heathen forms of worship, kept Jewish festivals, and trusted in Jewish conjurations. There

Quidam sortiti metuentem sabbata patrem,

Nec distare putant humana carne suillam,
Qua pater abstinuit, mox et praepudia ponunt.
Romanas autem soliti contemnere leges,
Judaicum ediscunt, et servant, ac metuunt jus,
Tradidit arcano quodcunque volumine Moses.

A list of existing proselytes is given by Causse in the Museum Haganum I. 549.

⁷ Such was the name originally given to those who were not Jews, but to whom permission was granted to dwell as sojourners in Palestine, under the condition of observing certain laws (Levit. xvii. 8, ff., אֲשֶׁר בְּשַׁעֲרֵי, Exod. xx. 10; Deut. v. 14). But now, under altered circumstances all heathens who attached themselves to Judaism by the voluntary observance of those precepts, received the same appellation. These precepts, which, in the opinion of the Jews, were delivered even to Noah (comp. Genesis, ix. 4, ff.), and in him to the whole human race, are said to be seven. 1. A prohibition of idolatry; 2. Blasphemy; 3. The shedding of human blood; 4. Incest; 5. Theft; 6. The command to practice righteousness; 7. To eat no blood, and no animal in which the blood still remains. See Seldenus de jure nat. et gent. lib. 1, c. 10. In the New Testament these proselytes are called φοβούμενοι τὸν θεόν, σεβόμενοι τ. θ.

soon appeared, also, Jewish jugglers, who ministered to this heathen superstition as conjurors and soothsayers.⁹

At the same time, intercourse with the pagans could not exist without exerting some influence on the Jews. It must have partly smoothed away many rough points of their national character, and have partly communicated to them a great portion of the cultivation of the nations among whom they lived. A philosophical mode of treating their religion was developed especially at Alexandria, under the Ptolemies, in consequence of the study of Grecian philosophy, and thence a peculiar philosophy of religion, which may be traced from Aristobulus (about 160 B. C.), through the Book of Wisdom,¹⁰ and the Therapeutae,¹¹ to its most distinguished representative Philo

⁹ On account of many impostors of this kind, Tiberius expelled the Jews from Rome, Jos. Ant. xviii. 3, 5. The Jewish festivals were kept by the heathen, Horat. Sat. i. 9, 69 :

— hodie tricesima sabbata: vin' tu
Curtis Judaeis oppedere? Nulla mihi, inquam, Religio est. At mi: sum paulo infirmior, unus Multorum.

The women in particular frequented them.

Cultaque Judaeo septima sacra Syro (Ovid. Art. Amat. i. 75), cf. Selden de jure nat. et gent. lib. iii. c. 15, ss. Gottl. Wernsdorf de gentiliis sabbato. Viteb. 1722. 4. For examples of Jewish conjurors see Acts xix. 13. Joseph. Antiq. viii. 2, 5 (Eleazer, who before Vespasian gave proofs of exorcism). Plinii Natur. Hist. xxx. c. 2: Est et alia magices factio a Mose et Janne et Jotape Judaeis pendens. Celsus accused the Jews (Orig. c. Cels. i. p. 21), αὐτοὺς σέβειν ἀγγέλους, καὶ γοητεία προσκεῖσθαι, ἧς ὁ Μωϋσῆς αὐτοῖς γέγονεν ἐξηγητής. In regard to Jewish soothsayers see Juven. Sat. vi. 543:

Arcanam Judaea tremens mendicat in aurem,
Interpres legum Solymarum, et magna sacerdos
Arboris, ac summi fida internuntia coeli:
Implet et illa manum, sed parcius. Aere minuto
Qualiacunque voles Judaei somnia vendunt.

In this way the Jewish names for deity came into the formulae of heathen impostors, though at a later period; and were supposed to possess a peculiar magical power in union with the heathen appellations of God (Origines c. Cels. iv. p. 183, v. p. 262), and were found on gems; see my remarks in the Theol. Stud. u. Kritiken. 1830, Heft 2, p. 403. To this influence of Judaism Seneca refers, de superstitionibus (ap. Augustin. de civit. Dei, vi. 11): Cum interim usque eo sceleratissimae gentis consuetudo convulsi, ut per omnes jam terras, recepta sit, victi victoribus leges dederunt. Illi tamen causas ritas sui noverunt, sed major pars populi facit, quod cur faciat ignorat. It might be expected that with this heathen tendency many should make a mere external profession of Judaism. Hence we can explain why the Talmudists passed so severe a judgment on the Pharisees, although the latter were still very zealous in making proselytes at the time of Christ (Matth. xxiii. 15): Proselyti impediunt adventum Messiae, sunt sicut scabies Israeli, &c. Othonis lexicon rabbin. p. 491. Wagenseilii Sota, p. 754.

(† 41 A.D.)¹² Though Philo's Platonic Judaism in this complete form was only the property of a few, yet the general ideas contained in it were widely diffused among the Hellenic Jews at that time, and afterward gained an important influence over the philosophy of religion which formed itself within the bosom of Christianity. This is especially the case with regard to the doctrine of Philo concerning the Logos, the God revealing himself in the finite, in whom the Mosaic creative word, and the Platonic ideal world, were united.¹³

¹³ I can not agree with the prevailing view, that the strictly monotheistic Philo thought of the Logos as hypostatically different from God. Since the infinite can not be revealed in the finite, God was under the necessity, so to speak, of making himself finite for this purpose, i. e., of separating from his own infinite perfections a finite measure of ideas and powers. God, in this aspect, is the Logos. Accordingly, the Logos is less than God, the revealed God less than deity in himself, but not, on that account, a hypostasis different from God.

destruction of the kingdom of Israel, in the tract belonging to it (2 Kings xvii. 24, ff., פְּתִיחַ, Samarēitai), had constantly been an object of detestation to the Jews, because of their religion, which had been at first compounded of Judaism and heathenism. The Samaritans, indeed, under the direction of the Jewish priest Manasseh, supported by the Persian viceroy Sanballat, had retained the Pentateuch, (409 B.C.), erected a temple on Gerizim, established a levitical priesthood—in short, the whole of Judaism as it then was;² but all served merely to increase the hatred of the Jews against them, although they were united from this time onward, not only by neighborhood, but also by a similar religion, and a series of like fortunes. This hatred entertained by the Jews, which the Samaritans seemed not to have returned with like virulence, was not abated in their native land by the destruction of the temple on Gerizim by John Hyrcanus (109 B.C.); it was transferred to Egypt where Jewish and Samaritan colonies had been planted by Alexander and Ptolemy Lagus,³ and has continued to the latest times.

The Samaritans held fast by Judaism, as it had come to them by Manasseh, with rigid strictness; and therefore the later developments of it among the Jews remained unknown to them, as they did also to the Sadducees.⁴ Besides, in the history of the Samaritans were originally a heathen people, who accommodated themselves by degrees to the Mosaic institution, see Dr. Kalkar's treatise, die Samaritaner ein Mischvolk, in Pelt's theolog. Mitarbeit. Jahrg. 3, Heft 3. (Kiel. 1840) p. 24.—[Kitto's Cyclopaedia of Biblical Literature, art. Samaritans.]

⁴ Concerning their doctrines see Philastrius de haer. cap. 7. Epiphanius de haer. 9. Leontius de sectis, c. 6. Their pentateuch was printed along with the Samaritan translation in the Paris Polyglott, 1629. A more accurate knowledge of their condition and doctrines in modern times has been obtained from the letters of the Samaritans to Jos. Scaliger, 1589; to men at Oxford, through the medium of Robert Huntingdon, 1671; to Job Ludolf, 1684 (see these letters in Eichhorn's Repertorium ix. and xiii.); and to De Sacy (since 1808), comp. Sylv. de Sacy mémoire sur l'état actuel des Samaritains. Paris. 1812 (translated into German in Ständlin's and Tzschirner's Archiv. for Kg. I. iii. 40). These were revised, and along with the recent letters containing two of 1820, republished by De Sacy in the Notices et Extraits des manuscrits de la Bibl. roy. T. xii. Paris. 1829. In addition, a letter of 1700 was made known by Hamaker in the Archief voor kerkelijke Geschiedenis door Kist en Royaards, v. 1 (Leiden. 1834). Besides this, Samaritan poems exist, which this people there was no ground for the same degree of national arrogance and hatred of every thing foreign as existed among the Jews.⁵ And while among the Jews the extravagant national feeling fostered a more sensuous apprehension of the doctrine of a special Divine providence in favor of their nation, and of the Messiah, and by this means favored a worldly view of the doctrines of religion; that smaller measure of national pride existing among the Samaritans was the cause of their looking at Judaism more in its spiritual aspect.⁶ This tendency was certainly promoted by the connection of the Samaritans with those of the same faith who had settled in Alexandria, and who were then partakers of Grecian culture. Still, however, the spiritual tendency which characterized the constantly oppressed people received no scientific improvement. But yet in Samaria there appeared in the first century in succession three founders belong to the times of the Arabs, and were first used in Gesenius de Samaritanorum theologia ex fontibus ineditis comm. (Weihnachtsprogramm, Halle. 1822. 4), and subsequently published: Carmina Samaritana e codd. Londinensibus et Gothanis ed. et illustr. Guil. Gesenius. Lips. 1824. 8.

of sects, of whom *Dositheus*⁷ departed from the prevalent Samaritan Judaism in a very few particulars. *Simon Magus*⁸ drew the germ of his syncretic magical system from the philosophical opinions then current, probably at Alexandria, and unfolded them farther, instigated, perhaps, by Christianity, which had lately appeared. In the third place, Menander,⁹ the disciple of Simon Magus, departed little from the footsteps of his master. All three left behind them sects which continued for several centuries. The followers of Simon and Menander were often confounded with Christians by the heathen,¹⁰ and actually endeavored to insinuate themselves into the Christian church after Christianity had become the prevailing religion.¹¹

The church fathers falsely ascribe to him many peculiar doctrines which were held by all the Samaritans. (According to Jewish tradition, the priest sent by Sennacherib, 1 Kings xvii. 27, 28, was one R. Dosthai. Druisius de tribus sectis Jud. iii. 4. It is probable, therefore, that the two persons were confounded. (A strict, ascetic life, and an overscrupulous observance of the Sabbath were peculiar to him. Origen. de princ. iv. c. 17, quo quisque corporis situ in principio sabbathi inventus fuerit, in eo ad vesperum usque ipsi permanendum esse, manifeste a literal interpretation of Exod. xvi. 29. As late as the year 588, the Dositheans and Samaritans had a controversy in Egypt about Deut. xviii. 18. (Eulogius ap. Phot. bibl. cod. 230.)

By the people he was looked upon as ἡ δύναμις τοῦ θεοῦ ἡ μεγάλη (ϫϫ cf. not. 6). Probably the Σίμων Ἰουδαῖος, Κύπριος δὲ γένος, μάγος εἶναι σκηπτόμενος apud Joseph. Ant. xx. 7, 2. Fabulous accounts of his death at Rome (first found in the Apostol. Constitut. vi. 9, and in Arnobius, ii. c. 12) were perhaps occasioned by the occurrence related in Sueton. in Nerone, c. 12. Juvenal. Sat. iii. 79, 80. The statue on the island in the Tiber, as Justin relates, Apol. maj. c. 26 and 56, with the inscription Simoni sancto Deo, was found in 1574, and has on it, Semoni Sancto Deo Fidio Sacrum, &c. (See Baronius ad ann. 44 no. 55.) On Semo Sancus or Sangus, comp. Ovid. Fast. vi. 213. Justin's mistake is apparent, although Baronius, Thirlby, Maranus, especially Fogginus de Romano Divi Petro itinere et episcopatu, Florent. 1741. 4to, p. 247, ss., wish to justify his account; and Braun (S. Justinii M. Apologiae. Bonnae. 1830. p. 97) has promised a new defense of it. The followers of Simon must be regarded as Samaritan Gnostics (Justin M. Apol. maj. c. 26: καὶ σχεδὸν πάντες μὲν Σαμαρεῖς, ὀλίγοι δὲ καὶ ἐν ἄλλοις ἔθνεσιν, ὡς τὸν πρῶτον θεὸν ἐκείνον ὁμολογοῦντες, ἐκείνον καὶ προσκυνοῦσι), whose system may have been developed parallel with the Christian Gnosis. Among Christians Simon has always been looked upon as the master and progenitor of all heretics (Irenaeus adv. haer. i. 27, ii. praef.), and although he never was a Christian, yet, in later times, he was thought to be the first heresiarch. In the Clementines he is the representative of Gnosis generally, and the system there attributed to him is a compound of the most striking Gnostic positions, and must not be considered genuine (see Baur's christl. Gnosis, p. 302).

RELATION OF THE TIMES TO CHRISTIANITY IN ITS INFANCY.

From the view that has been given it may be seen, that the popular religions of the heathen had become superannuated at the time of Christ, and that unbelief and superstition were on the point of putting an end to all true religion. It is further apparent, that Judaism, losing more and more its spiritual character, threatened to sink down in externalities. Under these circumstances many heathens must have longed for a religion which put an end to their doubts and agitations, satisfied the demands of their moral nature, and afforded them consolation and inward peace. The circumstance of Christianity coming from the East, whose mystical religions had at that time attracted general attention to itself, must have facilitated at least the introduction of it. Not could it be otherwise than that many Jews felt the emptiness of their ceremonial service, especially as they had been already guided to a more spiritual worship of God by many passages in their own prophets. On the other hand, expectations of the Messiah prepared the way for Christianity among the Jews.

But however much there was in the circumstances of these times which must have promoted Christianity, there was not less to obstruct it. Among the Jews, national pride, earthly hopes of Messiah, and habituation to an almost external religion; among the heathen, unbelief as well as superstition, which prevailed at this time, the stain attaching to Jewish origin, and the political grounds which, in the universal opinion, rendered it necessary to abide by the national religion. Christianity could reckon on toleration on the part of the state, agreeably to the principles of the Romans, only as long as it was confined to the Jewish people. But a religion which, like the Jewish, did not only declare all other national religions false, but was likewise gathering adherents among all nations in a more suspicious degree than the Jewish, and was threatening to extinguish all others, could not be endured by the Roman government without an abandonment of the old state religion. The toleration which all philosophical systems and foreign superstitions found at Rome could not, therefore, be expected by Christianity;¹ for an external observance of the state religion was at least consistent with the nature of such systems and superstitions.²

CHRONOLOGICAL DATA RESPECTING THE LIFE OF JESUS.

J. F. Wurm's astron. Beiträge zur genäherten Bestimmung des Geburts u. Todesjahres Jesu, in Bengel's Archiv. für d. Theol. II. 1, 261. R. Anger de temporum in Actis Apost. ratione diss. c. 1, de anno quo Jesus in coelum ascenderit. Lips. 1830. 8. F. Piper de externa vitae J. Chr. chronologia recte constituenda. Gottingae. 1835. 4. K. Wieseler's chronolog. Synopse der vier Evangelien. Hamburg. 1843. 8.¹

The only definite date in the evangelical history² is in Luke iii. 1, relating to the appearance of John the Baptist.³ On the supposition that Jesus appeared in public half a year after John, as he was born half a year after him, the designation of his age in Luke iii. 23 gives nearly the time of his birth, which, perhaps, may be still more closely determined by the circumstance that it must have happened before the death of Herod († shortly

¹ According to Wieseler, Christ was born in February 750 A.V. (4 B.C.), baptized in spring or summer 780, (27 A.D.), crucified on the 7th April 783 (30 A.D.). A work so acute and learned as that of Wieseler can not be sufficiently characterized in a few words. The exact coincidence, however, of different investigations produces more doubt than conviction, since the separate data may be bent, on account of their vacillating nature, in subservience to one object, without completely removing scruples in regard to them. In particular, ὥσεί, in Luke iii. 23, p. 126, appears to be taken too strictly; it is incredible that the chronological designation of Luke iii. 1, should reach to the captivity of the Baptist, p. 197; and the computation of the Jewish calendar, taken from Wurm for the purpose of ascertaining the year of Jesus' death, appears to be wholly uncertain, according to Wurm's explanations.

² Doubtful chronological dates are: Luc. i. 5, ἐφημερία Ἀβιά (cf. 1 Chron. xxiv. 10. Jos. Scaliger de emendat. temporum. App. p. 54. Wieseler, S. 140. Comp. ³ Augustus died 19th August, the year 14 of our era. and thus the 15th year of Tiberius's reign fell between the 19th August, 28, and the 19th August, 29 (781–2, A.V.C.), Wurm in Bengel's Archiv. ii. 5.

before the passover, 750 A.U.), Matth. ii. 1, 19.⁴ Even in the first centuries accounts of the year of Jesus' birth are given;⁵ but the Romish abbot Dionysius Exiguus (525) reckoned, independently of them, the period of the incarnation for the purpose of fixing by it the years in his table for Easter, making the first year from the incarnation coincide with the year 754 A.U. of the Varronian computation.⁶ This Dionysian era, applied first of all under the Anglo-Saxons,⁷ then by the Frankish kings Pepin and Charlemagne, begins at least four years after the true date of Christ's birth.⁸ The day of birth can not be determined.⁹

The ministry of Jesus was supposed by many of the older church fathers, after the example of the Alexandrians, to have

⁹ Clem. Alex. Strom. i. p. 340, relates that some regarded the 25th of Pachon, (20th May), others the 24th or 25th Pharmuthi, (the 19th or 20th April), as the birth-day. After the 6th of January, solemnized as a day of baptism by the followers of Basilides, was kept by the Oriental Christians since the third century as the day of baptism and birth, people began to keep this day as the true day of birth, (Epiphan. haer. li. 21). After the 25th December was solemnized in the fourth century in the west, as the birth-festival, this day came soon to be looked upon as the day of birth, (Sulpic. Sever. hist. sacr. ii. 27).

continued one year, agreeably to Isaiah lxi. 1, 2, comp. Luke iv. 19 (ἐνιαυτὸν κυρίου δεκτὸν).¹⁰ On this was founded the hypothesis, which became almost traditional in the ancient church, that Jesus was crucified in his thirtieth year, in the consulship of Rubellius Geminus and Fufius Geminus¹¹ (in the fifteenth year of Tiberius, 29th of the Dionysian era). But, according to the gospel of John ii. 13 (v. 1), vi. 4, xi. 55, three, or perhaps four passovers occurred during the public ministry of Christ. It must, therefore, have continued more than two years, and may, perhaps, have extended over three. Thus, the year of his death falls between 31 and 33 aec. Dionys., making his age from thirty-four to thirty-eight years. Even if we could agree on the preliminary question whether the Friday on which Jesus died was the day before the passover, or the first day of the passover,¹² yet, amid the uncertainty of the Jewish calendar of that time, an astronomical reckoning of the year of his death can scarcely be established.¹³

¹⁰ So the Valentinians, (Irenæus, ii. 32, 33), in opposition to whom Irenæus puts forth the singular assertion that Jesus was baptized in his thirtieth year, but did not appear as a teacher till between his fortieth and fiftieth (John viii. 57), and then taught three years. One year, however, was adopted by Clem. Alex. Strom. i. 340. Origenes, hom. 32 in Lucam, and de princip. iv. On the other hand, c. ¹² The first three evangelists designate the last supper as the passover (Matth. xxvi. 17, ss., Mark xiv. 12, Luke xxii. 7), and hence it has been usually assumed in the Western Church that Christ was crucified on the first day of the passover. On the contrary, the day of Christ's death was according to John xiii. 1, 39, xviii. 28, xix. 14, 31, the day before the passover. The latter is followed by Tertullian, adv. Jud. c. 8, the Greeks. Scaliger. Casaubon. Capellus, Lampe, Kuinoel, &c. It is strongly in favor of the latter hypothesis that the first day of the passover can never fall on a Friday, at least according to the present calendar of the Jews. See Ideler's Chronologie, Bd. i. p. 519. Probably the account of the first three evangelists is to be explained by the circumstance, that they took the last supper of Jesus to be the Christian passover; see Theile in Winer's Krit. § 21.

HISTORY OF THE YOUTH OF JESUS.

The history of Jesus' life before his public appearance is very obscure,¹ and affords no disclosures in relation to the important question of the mode and progress of his spiritual development.

Modern scholars have endeavored to supply this deficiency by conjectures, and have attributed a decided influence on his character, sometimes to the doctrines of the Essenes,² sometimes to those of the Sadducees,³ sometimes to a combination of Pharisaism and Sadduceism,⁴ sometimes to the Alexandrian-Jewish education.⁵ But such a spirit could not have received its direction from any school, and least of all from the schools of those times, which were better adapted to fetter the spirit, partly by their literal externality, partly by their fanatical idealism, than to prepare it for a clear and great self-development.⁶ On the contrary, the reading of the prophets of the Old Testament must have quickened in his kindred spirit a religious feeling as spiritual as that of the time was literal and carnal, and must have

² So first the English Deists (see against them Prideaux's Connection). From them Voltaire borrowed this idea, as well as many others, (Philosophical Dictionary, under Esséniens). Frederic the Great, Oeuvres ed. de Berlin, T. xi. p. 94. Stäudlin Geschichte der Sittenlehre Jesu, Th. 1. S. 570, ff. The same hypothesis has been enlarged in J. A. C. Richter das Christenthum und die ältesten Religionen des Orients. Leipzig. 1819. Christianity is supposed to be the public revelation of the Essene doctrines, and that these were connected with the ancient schools of the prophets, with Parsism, the Egyptian and Grecian mysteries, and through them with Brahmaism! According to Gfrörer, (das Heiligtum u. die Wahrheit. Stuttgart. 1838, S. 382), Jesus was educated among the Essenes, and afterward followed his own course, but continued to hold what was sound in their doctrines and customs. On the other side see Bengel über d. Versuch Christenth. a. d. Essenismus abzuleiten, in Flatt's Magazine, vii. 148, ff. Heubner in the 5th appendix to his edition of Reinhard's *Versuch über d. ⁶ So in John vii. 15, all higher cultivation in any school is denied to Jesus given it a standard for estimating the condition of the Jewish nation at that period, and for judging of the means by which alone it could be elevated, very different from the usual view.

Before Jesus, appeared one of his relatives John, in the wilderness of Judea, with the solemn call, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and dedicating his followers to this altered state of mind by a symbolical washing of the body.¹ It is certain that John and Jesus had been earlier acquainted with one another; but it is improbable that there existed a close connection between them, or the concerting of a common plan. The peculiarities of John point to an earlier connection with the Essenes.² The same character was possessed by his disciples, who, after Jesus' appearance, continued apart from the disciples of the latter (John iii. 26; Luke v. 33; Matth. ix. 14; xi. 2, ff.),³ and of whom we meet with remains in Asia Minor, long

² Even the place of his appearance ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τῆς Ἰουδαίας (Matth. iii. 1), where, according to Plin. Nat. Hist. v. c. 17, the Essenes also dwelt.

after John himself had fallen a sacrifice to his intrepidity (Acts xviii. 25, xix. 1, ff.).⁴

THE PUBLIC LIFE AND MINISTRY OF JESUS.

Jesus also came out of Galilee to Jordan to be baptized by John, and was recognized in such a way by the latter that he considered it more befitting to receive baptism from Jesus than the contrary. The import of this is, that the Baptist looked upon the rite as a call to higher purity. This baptism was to Jesus the consecration to his Messianic activity. It is true that he began with the same call to his nation as John the Baptist (Matth. iv. 17); but he soon unfolded a far more comprehensive system in the discharge of his ministry, which, though it directly affected the Jewish people only, yet in its very nature belonged to all humanity. The Jewish people at that time

⁴ Cf. Recog. Clem. i. 54 and 60. In the middle of the 17th century, the existence of a sect was made known by Carmelite missionaries, whose head-quarters were Basrah and Suster, calling themselves Nazoreans (not to be confounded with the Muhammedan sect Nasaireans), or Mendeans, but by the Muhammedans they were named Sabians (Sabaei, probably the name was borrowed from the star-worshippers of the Koran). They got the name Christians of St. John from the missionaries. Cf. Ignatii a Jesu narratio originis, rituum et errorum Christianorum S. Johannis. Rom. 1652. 8vo. After one of their holy books was published entire (Codex Nasireaeus, liber Adami appellatus, Syriae transcriptus latineque redditus a Matth. Norberg. 3 Thle. Lond. 1815, 1816. 4to) fragments of two others (the Divan and the book of John) communicated to the world, and many accounts furnished by travelers, Gesenius gave a critical survey of their system in the Universal Encyclopaedia of Ersch and Gruber (Leipzig. 1817), article Zabier, from which it appears that the system is Gnostic-ascetic, nearly related to that of the Valentinians and Ophites, John appearing as an incarnate aeon. The language of their sacred books is an Aramaean dialect, which occupies a middle position between the Syriac and Chaldee. They allege that they came from Jordan, from whence they were driven by the Muhammedans. Most scholars assume the descent of this sect from the disciples of John the Baptist. Les Nazoréens, thèse de Theologie historique par L. E. Burckhardt. Strasbourg, 1840. 8vo. presented an aspect the most deserving of compassion. In the deepest external degradation, always cherishing the most extravagant hopes in regard to the immediate future, they were led by their very religious views in the road to their destruction. And yet this very religion, when judged, not by the partial, priestly form which it had then received, but as drawn from its original documents, and pervaded by the living prophetic spirit which animated it as there described, must have marvelously revealed itself to every human breast as directly certain, as the only true source of human happiness. It was the aim and object of Jesus to awaken, by his life and doctrine, this prophetic element of the Mosaic religion, but in a purer form and in greater development, among his countrymen; and to bring it into the hearts of men as a spontaneous principle of action. By such spiritual regeneration alone could the Jewish people be delivered even from external corruption; and we can not doubt that Jesus would gladly have effected this outward deliverance also. But his plan extended far wider, although the germs which lay in the compass of his ministry proceeded forth and became visible, for the most part, only after he had left our world. Jesus appeared first in Galilee, and resided not at Nazareth (Luke iv. 24), but usually at Caper-narum. From this place, however, he not only traversed Galilee, but often abode for a long time in Judea in his journeys to the festivals in Jerusalem. He was only in Samaria occasionally as he went through it; and we find him but once beyond the confines of Judea (Mark vii. 24, ff.). By degrees he drew around him twelve young men, illiterate (Matth. xi. 25), and from the lower orders of society, for the purpose of initiating them into his spirit and plan, by their living with him and continually receiving his instructions. They accompanied him in his smaller journeys on which he appeared, sometimes among small domestic circles, sometimes in synagogues, sometimes among great multitudes under the canopy of heaven; and much as he attracted to himself universal attention by the extraordinary works he wrought, he excited no less astonishment and wonder by his doctrine, which directly convinced and carried captive the hearer (Matth. vii. 28, 29; Luke iv. 32). At first he avoided observation (Matth. ix. 30); he even forbade his disciples to make him known as the Messiah (Matt. xvi.

20); but afterward he declared himself to be the promised Messiah, with a firmness that forbids the idea of mere accommodation (Matth. xxvi. 64). But the religious ideas of the Old Testament had obtained within him a new and higher life, reaching far beyond the local and temporal form handed down among the Jews by tradition.¹ The Old Testament conception of a Theocracy was transformed in him into the high idea of the kingdom of God, in which men, animated by the Spirit of God, should be united with Deity and one another in moral unity. This kingdom of God he wished, as the Messiah, to establish on earth; on which account he required of his cotemporaries, sunk as they were in the external and the literal, first of all, change of heart, that they might be susceptible of the Spirit of God; next, faith in himself as the Christ, that by yielding itself up to the higher spirit, even the weaker mind might be elevated to free communion with God. It follows, of course, that nothing stood more in his way than that Pharisaic righteousness which rested on works. Hence he leveled his attacks chiefly against it. He did not indeed abolish the ceremonial law of Moses, constantly observing it himself; but he could not look upon it in any other light than as an expression of inward religious feeling; and all value attached to religious external observances, independently of true devotional feelings, was worthless in his eyes (Matth. xii. 1, ff.; xv. 1, ff.; v. 24; xii. 9). So far as he designated the free development of this internal religious feeling as the only genuine religious culture, it necessarily followed from his doctrine, and must have been sooner or later expressed publicly by his disciples, that no religious law for men can be in the form of a rule that requires something merely external. Thus the abolition of the ceremonial law necessarily followed his teachings. In like manner Jesus confined his immediate efforts to the Jews alone, and avoided coming in contact with those who were not Jews, out of regard to the very prejudices of his nation (Matth. x. 5; xv. 21-28). But still there lay always in his doctrine, which rejected all reliance on externalities, an adaptation for all mankind, as he himself often intimated with sufficient distinctness (Matth. viii. 11, 21, 43).

While Jesus endeavored to guide his disciples to this purer religion and moral communion in the kingdom of God, he also drew them gradually away from the common notion of retribution which prevailed among the Jews (Luke xiii. 2, ff.; John ix. 2, 3), announced to them the forgiveness of sins in the way of repentance and faith, and then taught them, in this inward communion with God, to meet all external fortunes with submission and confidence, and the firmest trust in God (Matth. vi. 33; x. 28). The kingdom of God, as it was then begun, was only an inward thing (Luke xvii. 21), in continual conflict with the world and with evil; but Jesus promised that he should appear again, to judge the evil, and to place piety and happiness in their natural relation, in the kingdom of God (Matth. xxiv. 30; xxv. 31). The notion of such a triumphant kingdom of God had been already set forth, though in a sensuous form, in the description given of Messiah's reign; and since it could be spoken of generally only in figures, Jesus borrowed his figures from it, giving at the same time sufficient intimation of a more spiritual, universal, and purer view (Matth. xxii. 30). It could not be otherwise than that these figures should be more or less spiritually understood, according to the different degrees of religious culture: but the leading idea on which all depended, the idea of a future adjustment of the relation of happiness to piety in the kingdom of God triumphant, must have always been maintained. The disciples, accustomed to entertain the conception of an earthly Messianic kingdom, not only took all those images in a sensuous acceptance, but also introduced into them many more definite points. Thus, although Jesus had declared the point of time when he should come again to be a secret with God the Father (Matth. xxiv. 36), yet they annexed to the admonition to be always ready (Matth. xxiv. 43, 44), the expectation of the near approach of his coming (Matth. xvi. 27). These sensuous expectations could not at once be eradicated from their minds, without at the same time endangering their faith in Jesus; but they were gradually purified and spiritualized by a series of events. Probably the closing fortunes of Jesus' life, though even they did not destroy those sensuous hopes, were required to convince the disciples that God's ways are very different from man's expectations, and to confirm their faith in the Divine mission of

Jesus; while at the same time they furnished the highest example of a mind renouncing the earthly, entirely devoted to God, and of a self-sacrificing love.²

The Pharisees cotemporary with Jesus, affected and exasperated by the truth of his doctrine, did not rest till they had brought him to the death he had long foreseen (Matth. ix. 15; xvi. 21, et seq.). Delivered up to them by a disciple, after he instituted, shortly before, a covenant-supper, as a symbol of internal union with him, and of unity among his disciples themselves, he was accused by them of insurrection before Pontius Pilate, and condemned by him through unworthy views. The courage of the disciples, which had almost vanished away, returned after his resurrection with so much strength and purity, that an unshaken attachment to Jesus was now to be expected from them, even amid outward renunciations and self-denial. It was still reserved, however, for later occurrences to correct many remaining prejudices. Thus it was some time before they fully understood the last commission of Jesus to carry the glad news of the beginning of God's kingdom on earth to all nations, to invite all into it, and to initiate them into it by baptism.

This passage was first mentioned and cited by Eusebius (Hist. eccles. i. 11, demonst. Evangel. iii. 5), and for a long time repeated by succeeding writers without any hesitation. The first who entertained doubts of its authenticity were Hubert Gifanius, ICTus (the letter in refutation of Sebastianus Lepusculus dd. Basileae the 24. Febr. 1559. See in Melch. Lucas Osiander (in Epitome hist. eccles. Centur. i. lib. 2, cap. 7. Tubing. 1592). More searching investigations of various scholars, respecting the matter from 1646-1661, first occasioned by the Altdorf Professor Sebastian Snellius, who denied the authenticity, are collected in: Epistolæ xxx. philol. et. hist. de Fl. Jos. testim., quod J. C. tribuit, rec. Christoph. Arnold. Noriberg. 1661. 12 (also in Havercamp's edition of Josephus, tom. ii, Append. p. 233). Here the reasons against it are developed with superior skill, especially by Dav. Blondel and Tanaquil Faber. Later defenders are: Carol. Daubuz pro testimonio Flavii Josephi de Jesu Christo, libb. ii. Londini. 1706. 8 (also in Havercamp's Josephus, tom. ii. Append. p. 187). Houteville erwiesene Wahrheit der christl. Vindiciæ Flavianæ. Lips. 1840. 8. Opponents of the genuineness are: (Abbé de Longuerue) sur le passage de Joseph en faveur de Jésus-Christ (against Daubuz) in Clericus biblioth. ancienne et moderne, t. vii. p. 237. God. Lessii disert. ii. super Josephi de Christo testimonio. Goetting. 1781, 82. Eichstaedt Flaviani de J. C. testimonii ἀθεντία quo jure nuper defensa sit, quaest. vi. Jenæ. 1813-41. Arguments for the genuineness: 1. The agreement of all MSS. from the time of Eusebius. 2. The number of Christians was too great to allow Josephus to pass over their origin without mention. 3. Josephus mentions John the Baptist. Against the genuineness: 1. The silence of the fathers before Eusebius, while Josephus, in Orig. c. Cels. i. p. 35, is said to be ἀπιστῶν τῷ Ἰησοῦ ὡς Χριστῷ. 2. The passage interrupts the connection. 3. The contents betray a Christian. 4. The other Jewish historian, Justus Tiberiensis, has not mentioned Christ. Photii bibl. cod. 33. The assumption of interpolations which found their way into all the MSS. of Josephus out of the far more extensively circulated church history of Eusebius, is the most probable, since Josephus was read and copied only by Christians. Chrysostom appears, however, not to have been acquainted with these interpolations, since he mentions Josephus several times, and in hom. in Joann. 12, quotes his testim. de Joanne, but is silent in regard to this passage. Remarkable is the silence of Photius in his accounts regarding Jos., Archæol. (bibl. cod. 76 and 238), especially as he remarks respecting Justus, cod. 33, that he being a Jew, and encumbered with Jewish prejudices, does not mention Jesus and his miracles. The following writers have decided in favor of an interpolation formed by altering single expressions: Knittel (nova biblioth. phil. et crit. vol. i. i. 118. Goetting. 1782. 8), and Paulus (Heidelb. Jahrb., August 1820, S. 734). In favor of an interpolation formed by inserted glosses are: Steph. le Moyen varia sacra, ii. 931, l'Abbé de Fontaines in the Journ. des Savans, ann. 1723, Juill., p. 10, Paulus Comm. über die 3 ersten Evang. iii. 740, H. Olshausen hist. eccl. vet. monumenta præcipua, vol. 1. Berol. 1820. 8. p. 3, Heinichen Excursus in his edition of Eusebius, tom. iii. p. 331. I have indicated above, by parenthetic marks, in what light I look upon the interpolation.

Hebrews and the Egyptians, &c. II. The later, which refer to the youth, the parents, and the last fortunes of Christ. A. Respecting the history of Christ's youth, we find fabulous writings first of all among the Marcians in the second century. (Irenæus, i. c. 17.) The orthodox, at the same time, received a doctrinal interest in maintaining the miraculous stories of Jesus' youth in opposition to those Gnostics who asserted that the æon was first united with the man at the baptism of the latter. (Ephiphan. haer. li. c. 20.) Several of these traditions are found in the Koran (comp. Augusti christologiae Coranicae lineamenta. Jen. 1799). Gospels of the infancy still extant are the gospel of Thomas, an Arabic gospel of the infancy, and a Latin history of the nativity of Mary and the infancy of the Saviour. At a later period the virgin Mary also began to invite men to similar fabrications. Compounds of the two are exemplified in the Protevangelion of James, the Arabic history of Joseph the carpenter, and the Latin gospel of the nativity of Mary. B. Respecting the last days of Jesus, Justin Martyr, Apol. i. c. 35 and 48, refers to the τὰ ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου γενόμενα ἄκτα; in the same way he himself alludes, c. 34, and also Chrysostom, hom. 31. de natali Christi, to the acts regarding the census of Quirinus, not that he had seen them himself, but because he pre-supposes their existence in the Roman archives. Hence arose Christian traditions in relation to the contents of these acts, out of which Tertullian, Apolog. c. 5, 21, draws the fabulous. During the persecution of Maximin, the heathen, taking occasion from these traditions, produced wicked Acta Pilati (Euseb. H. E. ix. c. 5), to which the Christians of that day had none others to oppose. The latter, however, soon made their appearance afterward (Ephiphan. haer. l. c. 1), and were fashioned and molded in various ways. One of these fabrication has received in later times the name, gospel of Nicodemus. Cf. Henke de Pilati actis probabilia. Helmst. 1784 (opusc. academ. Lips. 1802. p. 199). W. L. ⁴ The first traces of likenesses of Christ are to be found among the Carpocratians (Iren. i. 25), and in the lararium of Severus Alexander (Lamprid. c. 29). The persecuted church of the first centuries needed in Christ the pattern of a sufferer. Hence arose the general opinion that he was of unsightly form, according to Isaiah liii. 2, 3. (So Tertullian de carne Christi 9, adv. Jud. p. 14, and often. Clem. Alex. Paedeg. iii. 1, Strom. ii. p. 308. Origenes contra Cels. vi. p. 327, ὄψεσθαι δὲ τὸ Ἰησοῦ σῶμα.) At the same time all representations were forbidden, according to Exodus xx. 4. As soon as art began to represent Jesus, it must also have sought to express his excellence even in external form. Hence, from the fourth century onward, Jesus was supposed to have had a body of external beauty, something divinely majestic in his exterior, according to Psalm xlv. 3. (Hierou. comm. in Matt. ix. 9). Yet they confessed still that there was no authentic likeness of Jesus to be seen. (Augustin de trinitate, viii. 4. Nam et ipsius dominicae facies carnis innumerabilium cogitationum diversitate variatur et fingitur, quae tamen una erat, quaecumque erat, and c. 5, qua fuerit ille facie, nos penitus ignoramus). Eusebius (H. E. vii. c. 18. Comp. the excursus in Heinichen's edition, tom. iii. p. 396, ss.) relates concerning a statue at Paneas that it was there supposed to point to Jesus and the occurrence in Matt. ix. 20. All later writers repeat the story after him, and John Malala (600 A.D.), in his Chronog. p. 305, gave the name of the woman Beronice. This monument was destroyed by Julian (Sozom. v. 21. Philostorg. vii. 3), or according to Asterius, bishop of Amasia (about 400, in Photii bibl. cod. 271 in fine), by Maximin at a time when copies of it were hardly taken. Judging by the analogy of many coins, the memorial had been erected in honor of an emperor (probably Hadrian), and falsely interpreted by the Christians, perhaps on account of a σωτήρι or θεῶ appearing in the inscription (cf. Th. Hassaei diss. ii. de monumento Paneadeusi. Breae. 1726. 4, and in ejusd. sylloge dissertt. ii. 314. Beausobre über die Bildsäule zu Paneas in Cramer's Sammlungen zur Kirchengesch. und theolog. The θεότευκτος εἰκὼν, ἣν ἀνθρώπων χεῖρες οὐκ ἐργύσαντο (Evagrius Hist. eccl. iv. 27), sent to King Abgarus, and often mentioned in the image controversy, came from Edessa to Constantinople. Rome and Genoa now contend for the honor of its possession. A new miraculous copy of it on a brick was brought by order of the Emperor Nicephorus from Edessa to Constantinople, 968 A.D. Bayer hist. Osrhoëna et Edess. p. 112. Cf. Leo Diaconus (prim. ed. Hase, Paris. 1819), lib. iv. c. 10. 2. Sudarium St. Veronice, still in the middle ages rightly named Veronica, i. e., vera icon. Cf. Pretended pictures of Christ made by his cotemporaries: 1. A picture of Christ, painted by Luke. Perhaps the first mention of it is by Theodorus Lector (about 518) apud Nicephorum Callistum (about 1333) Hist. eccles. ii. 43, who also mentions pictures of Mary and the principal Apostles, painted by Luke, Gregorius III., in epist. ad Leonem Imp., Simeon Metaphrastes (about 900) in vita S. Lucae. There is a picture of Christ, as a boy of thirteen years of age, by Luke, in the Sancta Sanctorum in the church of St. John Lateran at Rome. 2. An image of Christ, cut out of cedar-wood by Nicodemus, which was before at Berytus, as is pretended (cf. (Pseudo-) Athanasius de passione imaginis D. n. J. Chr. qualiter crucifixa est in Syria in urbe Beryto), appears first in the Acta Synod. Nicaenae, ii. (787) sess. iv., was brought to Constantinople by the emperor Nicephorus (Leo Diac. x. c. 5), and is now at Lucca (vultus Lucanus in Gervasius, c. 24, in Leibniti script. Brunsv. t. i. p. 967). Cf. Thus the Ebionites had the περίοδοι Πέτρου διὰ Κλήμεντος γραφείσαι (Epiphani. haer. xxx. c. 15, comp. below, § 59), and πράξεις ἄλλαι Ἀποστόλων (l. c. c. 16). One of the most modern and copious productions of this kind is the Abdias (this Abdias, it is pretended, was a disciple of the Apostles, and first bishop of Babylon) historia certaminis apostolici (belonging to the eighth or ninth century), published in Latin in Fabricii cod. apocryph. New Test. t. ii. p. 388, ss. Respecting the apocryphal productions of this kind, printed and unprinted, see Thilo acta Thomae in the Notitia, p. lii. ss.

¹ According to Wieseler (theol. Studien u. Krit. 1840, iii. 648), the sons of Zebedee were cousins of the Lord, their mother Salome the sister of Mary.

Thomas (called Didymus, John xx. 24), Bartholomew (Nathanael? John i. 46), Matthew (Matthew ix. 9; Levi, the son of Alphaeus, Mark ii. 14), James (the son of Alphaeus, Matthew x. 3, and of Mary, Matthew xxvii. 56, the wife of Cleopas, John xix. 25),² Thaddeus (Lebbaeus surnamed Thaddeus, Matth. x. 3, Jude the brother of James, Luke vi. 16; Acts i. 13), Simon Zelotes (the Canaanite, Matth. x. 4), and Matthias, who was chosen in place of Judas Iscariot, to whom were now added the brethren of Jesus who had become believers,³ spent the first days after Christ's ascension in retirement in Jerusalem, till the Divine Spirit, who had been in the prophets and in Jesus, began to manifest his living power in them in an extraordinary manner on the day of Pentecost. Furnished with power and courage, the apostles now appeared more publicly, and the number of Christ's confessors increased every day. The community, however, did not renounce Judaism and the Jewish law, but rather considered themselves to be the society of genuine Israelites (μαθηταί, ἀδελφοί, πιστεύοντες, σωζόμενοι, φοβούμενοι τὸν θεόν, called in derision by the Jews Nazarenes and Galileans) who, having been saved from that untoward generation (Acts ii. 40), were preparing themselves for the unfolding of the Messiah's kingdom in its excellency. It must certainly be admitted, however, that sensuous expectations and erroneous opinions of the near approach of Christ's return (Acts i. 6, iii. 19–21), were mixed up with their better principles.⁴ The conditions of reception into this kingdom were repentance and faith in Christ, on which forgiveness of sin was promised in baptism, and the Holy Spirit imparted by the imposition of hands. Though they knew that the heathen also were admitted into the kingdom of God, still more that they should be invited, they yet believed that these Gentiles should first be incorporated among the Jewish people as proselytes of righteousness, and necessarily observe the entire Mosaic law. With this opinion they could not be in haste to invite the heathen also to embrace Christianity.

But although the community did not separate itself from the religion of the Jews, yet they were more closely connected together by the peculiar direction which their religious feelings naturally took, and by their peculiar hopes. Thus there arose by degrees a regularly constituted society among the brethren. For this the Jewish synagogue presented itself as the most natural model.⁵ At first, the apostles themselves performed the duties of the society, but by degrees special officers were appointed. The apostles caused seven distributors of alms to be chosen (Acts vi. 1-6),⁶ inasmuch as the brethren showed very great liberality toward their poor,⁷ and because the administration of these gifts threatened to be detrimental to the proper calling and ministry of the twelve. Soon after this, we find πρεσβύτεροι, elders (Acts xi. 30 = עֲלֵי), chosen not so much for the purpose of teaching, as for the management of common concerns, and for maintaining the ordinances of the church. In all these appointments of the society, the apostles did not act despotically, but allowed the church to determine them (Acts vi. 2; xv. 22, 23).

The bold appearance of the apostles, and the enlargement of their party, soon excited attention. The Sadducees were now

In the mean time, however, that man had been previously converted to Christianity, to whom the mystery was to be announced that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs of the promises (Ephes. iii. 3-6). Saul, born at Tarsus in Cilicia, and a Roman citizen,¹ but educated in Jerusalem under Gamaliel, a Pharisee, from being a dangerous enemy of Christianity suddenly became a zealous adherent to it (37-40 A.D.). After a three years' abode in Damascus and Arabia he came to Jerusalem, where *Barnabas*² introduced him to the apostles Peter and James (Gal. i. 17-19; Acts ix. 19-27). The very same person conducted him also to the great scene of his apostolic labors; for, having been sent by the apostles to Antioch in order to establish the infant church there, he recalled Paul from Tarsus, and took him as his assistant (Acts xi. 22-26). After this, when Herod Agrippa (41-44), for the purpose of ingratiating himself with the people, persecuted the church at Jerusalem, when James the elder was put to death, and Peter was saved from a like fate only by a miracle (Acts xii.), Jerusalem ceased to be the secure seat of the apostles;³ and James, the brother of the Lord, and a Nazarite, appeared at the head of the church with a reputation equal to that of an apostle.⁴ In the mean time, Barnabas and Saul at Antioch gathered from among Jews and Gentiles a church so numerous, even in wealthy members (χριστιανοί, Acts ii. 26),⁵ that they were able to bring contributions thence to the brethren at Jerusalem when a famine occurred (44 A.D., Acts xi. 27–30; xii. 25). After this, the two entered on the first large missionary journey through Cyprus, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Lycæonia, during which the gospel was preached to Jews and Gentiles. After they had again abode for a long time in Antioch, Hebrew Christians came thither who excited divisions in the church, by the assertion, that the newly converted Gentile Christians must also necessarily become Jewish proselytes of righteousness. Hence Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem, where they received from the collective apostles, and the assembled church, a decision to the effect that the Gentiles should only be required to accede to proselytism of the gate (Acts xv.).⁶ They were also, at the same time, recognized as apostles of the Gentiles by Peter, James, and John, who resolved to continue their labors among the Jews (Gal. ii. 9, A.D. 52). Soon after, Barnabas and Mark made a second journey to Cyprus, while Paul and Silas repaired to the churches of Asia Minor. In Lystra, Paul took Timothy with him, traveled through Phrygia and Galatia, passed over into Macedonia, where churches were founded at Philippi, Thessalonica, and Beroea, and came by Athens to Corinth (Epistles to the Thessalonians).⁷ After remaining there a year and a half, he returned by Ephesus, Caesarea, and Jerusalem, to Antioch (Acts xv. 36—xviii. 22). But he soon entered on the thira great journey to Asia Minor, where he passed at Ephesus the first two years and three months. Here, and in the vicinity, he established Christianity more firmly (Epistle to the Galatians? First Epistle to the Corinthians), and then traveled through Macedonia (Second Epistle to the Corinthians) to Corinth (Epistle to the Romans). After a three months' abode in this city, he returned to Jerusalem by Miletus (Acts xviii. 23, xxi. 17). Here, having been taken in the temple (58 A.D.), he was brought to Caesarea, and thence to Rome (60–61 A.D., Epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and to Philemon). The Acts of the Apostles closes with the second year of the Roman captivity (63 A.D.); but according to later, though ancient testimonies, he was again liberated from this bondage, made several other journeys (First Epistle to Timothy,⁸ Epistle to Titus), and then fell into a second captivity at Rome (Second Epistle to Timothy), which terminated in his death (67 A.D.).⁹ Among Paul's disciples the most distinguished were Silas, or Silvanus (Acts xv. 40, ss., as far as xviii. 5; 2 Cor. i. 19), who was afterward with Peter (1 Peter v. 12); Timothy, who, commissioned by Paul, abode for a long time at Ephesus, in Stutt. and Tüb. 1835), it would be an inexplicable thing that the writer should lay at the basis of the history certain situations in which the apostle was placed, which can not be pointed out in the New Testament.

⁹ So Eusebius, H. E. ii. c. 22, supported by Clemens Rom. Ep. i. § 5: *Διὰ ζῆλον ὁ Παῦλος ὑπομονῆς βραβεῖον ἄπεσχεν.—Κήρυξ γενόμενος ἐν τε τῇ ἀνατολῇ καὶ ἐν τῇ δύσει, τὸ γενναῖον τῆς πίστεως αὐτοῦ κλέος ἔλαβεν. A single captivity of Paul in Rome, ending with his death, is assumed by Petavius, Lardner, J. E. C. Schmidt, Eichhorn, E. F. Wolf (de altera Pauli Ap. captivitate, diss. ii. Lips. 1819. 20. 8.), Schrader (Paulus, i. 227), Hensen, Baur, Reuss (Gesch. d. Schriften d. N. T. § 54), Matthiä (Pastoralbr. S. 185, 593), de Wette (Einl. in d. N. T. § 122), Schenkel (theol. The history of the other apostles, and their early pupils, is involved in great obscurity, and has frequently been much disfigured by mistakes and fabrications. Among these distortions may be reckoned principally, the traditions respecting the apostles determining by lots to what countries they should go from Jerusalem,¹ the joint composition of the apostles' creed,² and their unmarried state,³ as well as the tradition that they all suffered martyrdom except John.⁴ And when the apostles, who

A violent catholic defense is presented in Frid. Windischmanni vindiciae Petrinae. Ratisb. 1836. If, according to Baur, this tradition proceeded from Judaizing Christians at Rome for the purpose of exalting Peter above Paul, we can not understand how the fabrication did not forthwith meet with a decided contradiction from the adherents of Paul at Rome, nor how Caius, a disciple of Paul, is a leading witness for its truth. E. iii. 31, and v. 24). John also went to Asia Minor, and a great part of his life belongs to the following period. The traditions are ancient respecting Thomas preaching the gospel in Parthia,⁷ Andrew in Scythia (Origines ap. Euseb. iii. 1), Bartholomew in India⁸ (Euseb. v. 10), and it is reported that John Mark, first the companion of Paul and Barnabas, then of Peter, was the founder of the church in Alexandria (Euseb. ii. 16). The later traditions respecting the apostles, and apostolic men, which have been partly indebted for their origin to the wish of many nations to trace their Christianity up to the apostolic age, are, to say the least, uncertain, and in part so marvelously forged, that they sufficiently betray their own falseness.⁹

⁶ Die Clementinen von A. Schliemann. Hamburg. 1844. S. 115. Eusebius, iii. 2, says: Μετὰ τὴν Παύλου καὶ Πέτρον μαρτυρίαν πρῶτος κληροῦται τὴν ἐπισκοπὴν Λίνου, and according to him, iii. 4, Clement is τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐκκλησίας τρίτος ἐπίσκοπος καταστάς (Linus, Anacletus, Clemens). Rufini præf. in recognitionibus Clementis: Linus et Cletus fuerunt quidem ante Clementem episcopi in urbe Roma, sed superstitè Petro, videlicet ut illi episcopatus curam gererent, ipse vero apostolatus impleret officium. Epiphanius also has the correct opinion respecting the episcopate of the apostles, Haer. xxvii. 6: Ἐν Ῥώμῃ γὰρ γεγόνασι πρῶτοι Πέτρος καὶ Παῦλος οἱ ἀπόστολοι αὐτοὶ καὶ ἐπίσκοποι.—Peter is named the first bishop of Antioch, first of all by Chrysostom. ⁹ Thus the Spaniards pretend that James the elder was seen in their country (his body is said to be in Compostella since A.D. 816); the French claim Dionysius the Areopagite, Lazarus, Mary Magdalene, and others; the English, Simon Zelotes, and especially Joseph of Arimathea; the Germans, Maternus, Eucherius, and Valerius, as legates of Peter; the Russians, Andrew, &c. The real but later founders of churches have been frequently transferred to the times of the apostles by tradition.

RECEPTION OF CHRISTIANITY AMONG JEWS AND GENTILES.

(Comp. § 19.)

Neander's Kirchengesch. 2te. Auflage i. i. 117, ff.

With the Jews, their earthly expectations of the Messiah always presented a special obstacle to Christianity. When the Christians not only took into their society the Samaritans, but when Paul admitted the very heathen into it, without requiring of them circumcision, the fact appeared to the Jews to afford sufficient proof that the confessors of Christ could not be followers of a true Messiah; and Christianity now appeared to them only a form of Judaism profaned by a mutilated impartation of it to the heathen, as is expressed even in the appellation of the Christians, כִּרְיָנִים, which originated, perhaps, somewhat later. On this account Paul and his disciples were most violently hated by the Palestinian Jews (Gal. v. 11, Rom. xv. 31), who could even spread the report concerning him, that he had introduced heathen into the temple, the uproar arising from which caused his imprisonment (Acts xxi. 27, ff.). Among the Hellenistic Jews Paul found once and again much susceptibility of mind in relation to Christianity, as in Berea (Acts xvii. 11, 12), Ephesus (xviii. 19, 20), and Rome (xxviii. 17). In other places these very Jews were his most dangerous enemies, as in Thessalonica (xvii. 5, ff.), and Corinth (xviii. 12, ff.), partly from the usual national prejudice, and partly, also, perhaps, from fear lest the publication of their Messianic hopes might injure them in the eyes of the Romans (Acts xvii. 6–8).

In addition to the inward power of Christian truth on the human spirit, the miraculous origin of Christianity and the prevailing inclination to foreign superstitions, influenced the heathen in its favor. On the contrary, with the higher classes, and especially the philosophers (1 Cor. i. 18, ff.), its Jewish origin, the simple form in which it appeared (Acts xvii. 18, ff.), and the doctrine of the resurrection of the body (l. c. 32) hindered its reception. Christianity was looked upon at this time by the heathen only as a Jewish sect,¹ an opinion which from many indeed may have drawn upon it contempt, but which secured for it, notwithstanding, the protection of the civil government (Acts xviii. 12, ff.); for now, the Christian societies, like the Jewish, passed for Sodalitia licita (comp. § 12). The circumstance that even some heathens were drawn away from their own religion by means of these communities, served, indeed, to raise complaints against them (Acts xvi. 20, ff.; xvii. 18); these, however, were generally overlooked by the Roman magistrates, just as the circumstance of many heathens becoming proselytes of the gate had been formerly passed over, since, amid the general inclination to foreign superstitions,² the old religious laws were not strictly enforced. When Claudius, on account of a dispute between the believing and unbelieving Jews at Rome, expelled both parties from the city, this act can not naturally be reckoned a persecution of the Christians.³ As little were the Christians persecuted on account of their religion by Nero, when, to turn from himself the suspicion of setting fire to the city, he gave up the despised sectaries to all kinds of torture (64).⁴ Probably the Neronian persecution was confined to Rome,⁵ though it appears to have continued with some inter-

C. 69: Circa deos ac religiones negligentior: quippe addictus mathematicae, plenusque persuasionis, cuncta fato agi), and the historical relations; while the silence of the Roman historians in regard to it would be inexplicable. The less credit is to be given to Tertullian's single testimony, inasmuch as he falsely ascribes to his cotemporary Marcus Aurelius, partiality for the Christians, in a passage subsequent to the one in which he speaks of Tiberius. Yet the account is defended by J. W. T. Braun de Tiberii Christum in Deorum numerum referendi consilio comm. Bonnae. 1834. 8.

INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT OF CHRISTIANITY.

The assembly of the apostles and church at Jerusalem had allowed the Gentile Christians to neglect the Mosaic law, but in so doing they had tacitly recognized its binding force on the posterity of Abraham. Since, therefore, on this account the Jewish Christians must have avoided intimate intercourse with the Gentile Christians, for the sake of Levitical purity; and since the one party looked upon James, the Lord's brother, and on Peter, as their leaders, while the other took Paul for their head (Gal. ii. 9), a certain wall of partition necessarily stood between them, and perfect incorporation into one brotherhood was impossible. This must have been first felt in many churches gathered from among Jews and Gentiles by Paul out of Palestine (Gal. ii. 11, ff.). The very circumstance, however, contrib-

Martyr. sincera, § 3, still defended the opinion of Orosius. The inscription pretending to have been found in Spain or Portugal: Neroni ob provinciam latronibus et his qui novam generi humano superstitionem inculcabant, purgatum (Jan. Gruteri inscriptt. t. i. p. 238, n. 9), is spurious, and was forged perhaps by Cyriacus of Ancona. See Ferreras histoire d'Espagne, i. 192. Defended by J. E. J. Walch persecutionis Christianorum Neronianae in Hispania ex ant. monumentis probandae uberior explanatio. Jenae. 1753. 4. But compare especially the epistola Hagenbuchii, p. 31-60, there given.

⁶ Since the Christians constantly expected Antichrist, as the forerunner of Christ, to be near at hand, it is not to be wondered at that Nero, during his persecution, should appear to them as Antichrist, and that they entertained the opinion after his death that he had not actually died, but should soon return again to undertake a final persecution. Hence the Apocalypse (written about 69) xiii. 3; xvii. 10, 11, and the Sybilline oracles, iv. 116 (which verses, according to Bleek in Schleiermacher's, De Wette's, and Lücke's theol. Zeitschrift, i. 244, were composed about the year 50 A.D.) That the like report among the heathen originated in that sentiment of the Christians, is at once apparent from the form of it, comp. Sueton. Nero, c. 40: *Prædictum a mathematicis Neroni olim erat, fore, ut quandoque destitueretur. uted in no small degree, to lead that apostle to a more spiritual development of Christianity and one freer from the national prejudices of the Jews.¹ He attained, accordingly, to the inward perception of the truth, that spiritual communion with God by faith in Christ alone constitutes the essence of Christianity. In this conviction, he was not afraid to overstep those rules of the council at Jerusalem in a twofold manner, both by declaring the obligation of the Jews to observe the Mosaic law invalid (Romans vii. 1, ff.; 1 Cor. ix. 20, 21; Gal. ii. 15, ff.), since he regarded that law merely as preparatory to Christ (Gal. iii. 24); and also by denying the absolute binding force of the laws regarding food given to the Gentile Christians (1 Cor. viii. 10, 23, ff.), while with reference to all such external institutes he merely required some regard for the consciences of weaker brethren, and practiced himself such forbearance (1 Cor. viii. 9, ff.; x. 32; Acts xxi. 26). The other national prejudice of the Jewish Christians, viz. carnal millenarianism, likewise disappeared from his mind along with an overweening estimate of the Mosaic law. He thought, indeed, of the return of Jesus as near at hand (Phil. iv. 5), but he expected the triumph of God's kingdom in a state above the earthly (1 Thess. iv. 16, 17; 2 Cor. v. 1, 2). Christ himself was conceived of by Paul, who had seen him in the clouds of heaven, more in his spiritual and divine aspect; while the Jewish apostles, in consequence of the personal intercourse with him which they had enjoyed, dwelt more on his human appearance.

The Palestinian Christians might have overlooked the new development of doctrine, inasmuch as they had been accustomed to much more important doctrinal differences springing up in Judaism, without forfeiting the privileges of ecclesiastical fellowship. On the other hand, they attributed to Paul's loose view of the law, by which he drew away so many Jews from the observance of its precepts, in the Gentile-Christian churches, so much the greater mischief, because the other apostles conformed to the stricter view (Acts xxi. 20, ff.). Nor, on the other side, could the Palestinian appear to the Pauline Christians in any other light than as obtuse persons, who had not at all penetrated into the essence of Christianity (Heb. v. 11, 12).

The difference between these two parties is still more strongly manifested in the aberrations into which individuals fell from the respective positions of the parties. Among the Jewish Christians,² a party always continued, who asserted the absolutely-binding nature of the Mosaic law in relation to the Gentiles. By this means many belonging to Gentile-Christian churches were led astray, so that Paul felt the necessity of combating the error (Ep. to the Galatians; Phil. iii. 2). And when persecutions befell the Christians in Palestine, shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem, many of them were on the point of falling away entirely from Christianity (Hebrews vi. 4, ff.; x. 25, ff.),³ having been rendered impatient, partly by the long-continued disappointment of their millenarian expectations, partly because they could not decide upon a complete separation from Judaism, such as now appeared necessary.

Among the Gentile Christians, on the contrary, philosophy early began to mingle itself with Christianity. As far as we know, Apollos, a cultivated Alexandrian Jew, was the first who looked at Christianity from a more speculative point of view, and first preached it in this form with great eloquence at Corinth.⁴ Little as he desired to appear in an antagonist position to Paul, the latter declined in reputation, notwithstanding, among many of the Corinthians, and divisions arose in the church (1 Cor. i.—iv.).⁵ Paul wishes to leave it to time to disclose the value of such a philosophical system erected on the foundation of Christian faith (1 Cor. iii. 11, ff.); but he blames the divisions occasioned by it, agreeably to his manner of inculcating toleration even in regard to errors, provided they be not practically scandalous or claim for themselves exclusive adoption (Rom. xiv. 1, ff.). Afterward, however, there appeared among the Gentile Christians actual errors, and those, too, of an important moral bearing, which Paul was obliged to combat with all his might.

The Christians considered themselves, in opposition to the rest of the world (ὁ κόσμος, ὁ αἰὼν οὗτος, under the κοσμοκράτωρ, Eph. vi. 12, the θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, 2 Cor. iv. 4) hastening in their perversity to destruction, a chosen people dedicated to God, *ἄγιοι,*⁶ ἐκλεκτοί, κλητοί. In these appellations there was no claim to moral perfection, but a remembrance of their high calling in Christ. Though it is certain that Christianity in its first beginning imparted spiritual enlightenment to many of its adherents, and transformed them in a moral view, yet it could so much the less purify them all from the imperfections of the education belonging to their nation and time, because it is certain that many of them had been led to embrace it by superstitious or other interested motives.⁷ This explains the reason why Paul found that he had continually to contend with even gross vices among the Gentile Christians, particularly at Corinth (1 Cor. v. 6), and in Crete (Titus i. 10, ff.); why James saw himself obliged to condemn the moral abuse of the Pauline doctrine relative to the power of faith, as that alone which brings salvation (Ep. of James); and why the Apocalypse (written 69 A.D.) denounces seducers in Pergamus (the Nicolaitanes),⁸ who

As the names of sects were usually formed after the name of the founder, the fathers thought of Nicolaus, Acts vi. 5, who, according to Irenaeus, i. 26, iii. 11, and Tertullian de Praescr. haer. c. 46, is said to have been the founder of the party; but according to Clemens Alex. Strom. ii. p. 490, iii. p. 522, he was merely the unconscious cause of the appellation on paid no regard to the regulations respecting food enjoined on the Gentile Christians, nor even to the prohibition of lewdness (Acts xv. 29). But after a philosophical treatment of Christianity had procured friends in many churches of the Gentile Christians, the superstitious philosophy of the times also speedily crept in among the Christians, first of all, as it would appear, in Asia Minor, and threatened morality with still greater danger by recommending chimerical, mysterious doctrines, and an arbitrary asceticism, as the true mode of purifying the soul. Against such errorists as united a Jewish-heathen asceticism with a peculiar philosophy, Paul had first to warn the Colossians (Col. ii. 8, 16, ff.).⁹ The same tendency spread itself as far as Ephesus, where it manifested itself in high-flying speculations, in prohibitions of marriage and meats (1 Tim. i. 5–7; iv. 3, 7; vi. 20), and manifestly contributed to the immorality of that place (2 Tim. iii. 6). The attempt, also, of Hymeneus and Philetus to explain spiritually (2 Tim. ii. 18) the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, so offensive to the heathen (1 Thessal. iv. 13, ff.; 1 Cor. xv. 12, 35, ff.), an attempt that proceeded from the same tendency, was not destitute of a moral influence at this time, when the doctrine was most intimately connected with that of retribution.¹⁰ That Paul did not reject philosophy as such, he has proved in his conduct toward Apollos; the philosophy against which he warns his readers (Col. ii. 8) is that science, falsely so called (1 Tim. vi. 20) which, as Paul had be-account of his words which were misunderstood by others, ὅτι παραχρήσασθαι τῇ σαρκὶ δεῖ. (παραχρᾶσθαι is, 1. to abuse, used particularly, according to Suidas de concubitu immodico; 2. equiv. to διαχρᾶσθαι, to put to death, as Justin. Apol. maj. c. 49.)

In strong relief to these defects of the time, the brotherly love, the benevolence (2 Cor. viii. 1, ff.; Heb. vi. 10; xiii. 1, ff.), the patient endurance of the hostility of the unbelieving (Phil. i. 29; 1 Thess. i. 6; ii. 14; 2 Thess. i. 4, ff.; Heb. x. 32, ff.), and the holy zeal for Christianity, form the bright part of the picture presented by the first Christians. The church at Philippi, in its tender attachment to the apostle Paul, appears to us particularly attractive. (Comp. the Ep. to the Philippians.)

¹¹ The traces of Gnosis in the N. T. are exaggerated, particularly by Henr. Hammond diss. de Antichristo (in his diss. iv. quibus episcopatus jura adstruuntur. Lond. 1651), and in his Annot. ad N. T. (lat. per J. Clericum. Amst. 1698, fol.) But, on the other side, C. Chr. Tittmann (tract. de vestigiis Gnosticorum in N. T. frustra quaesitis. Lips. 1773. 8), goes too far. Comp. Joh. Horn über die biblische Gnosis. Hannover. 1805. 8.

¹ That both appellations are the same follows from Acts xx. 17, 28; Tit. i. 5, 7; Phil. i. 1; 1 Tim. iii. 1, 8. Acknowledged by Hieronymus Epist. 82, (al. 83) ad Oceanum: Apud veteres iidem episcopi et presbyteri, quia illud nomen dignitatis est, hoc aetatis. Epist. 101, ad Evangelium see below, § 34, note 2.—Idem ad Tit. i. 7: Idem est ergo presbyter, qui episcopus: et antequam diaboli instinctu studia in religione fierent, et diceretur in populis: ego sum Pauli, ego Apollo, ego autem Cephae, communi presbyterorum consilio ecclesiae gubernabantur. Postquam vero unusquisque eos, quos baptizaverat, suos putabat esse, non Christi: in toto orbe decretum est, ut unus de presbyteris electus superponeretur ceteris, ad quem omnis ecclesiae cura pertineret, et schismatum semina tollerentur. Putat aliquis non scripturarum, sed nostram esse sententiam, episcopum et presbyterum unum esse, et aliud aetatis, aliud esse nomen officii: relegat apostoli ad Philippenses verba, dicentis. Here follow the above cited passages; then: Haec propterea, ut ostenderemus apud veteres eisdem fuisse presbyteros, quos et episcopos: paulatim vero ut dissensionum plantaria evellerentur, ad unum omnem sollicitudinem esse delatam. Sicut ergo presbyteri sciunt, se ex ecclesiae consuetudine ei, qui sibi praepositus fuerit, esse subjectos: ita episcopi noverint se magis consuetudine, quam dispositionis dominicae veritate, presbyteris esse majores, et in commune debere ecclesiam regere. Augustini Epist. 82, ad Hieron. c. 33: Quamquam secundum honorum vocabula, quae jam ecclesiae usus obtinuit, episcopatus presbyterio major sit: tamen in multis rebus Augustinus Hieronymo minor est. Cf. Chrysostomi Hom. i. in Ep. ad Philipp. Theodoret. comm. in Philipp. i. 1. It is remarkable how long afterward persons maintained this view of the original identity of bishops and presbyters. Isidorus Hispal. Etymol. vii. c. 12, transcribes that passage from Hieron. Epist. ad Oceanum. Bernaldus Constantiensis (about 1088) the most zealous defender of rank, although, in many churches, individuals among them had a personal authority over the others.² Under the superintend-

Gregory VII. appeals on this subject, in his de presbyterorum officio tract. (in monumentorum res Allemannorum illustrant. S. Blas. 1792. 4. t. ii. p. 384, ss.), to the New Testament and Jerome, and then continues: Quum igitur presbyteri et episcopi antiquitus idem fuisse legantur, etiam eandem ligandi atque solvendi potestatem et alia nunc episcopis specialia habuisse non dubitantur. Postquam autem presbyteri ab episcopali excellentia cohibiti sunt, coepit eis non licere, quod licuit, videlicet quod ecclesiastica auctoritas solis pontificibus exequendum delegavit. Even a pope, Urbanus II., in Conc. Benevent. ann. 1091, can. 1: Sacros autem ordines dicimus diaconatum et presbyteratum. Hos siquidem solos primitiva legitur ecclesia habuisse: super his solum praeceptum habemus apostoli (pretty nearly the same words are found in Petri Lomb. Sentent. lib. iv. dist. 24, c. 8), Hence even Gratian receives the above passages of Jerome ad Tit. i. (dist. xc. c. 5), epist. ad Evangel. (dist. xciii. c. 24) u. Isidori Hisp. (dist. xxi. c. 1) without scruple. The same view is maintained by the Glossa ad Gratiani decret. dist. xciii. c. 24, Cardinalis S. Marci at the Costnit. Concilium 1414 (v. d. Hardt. Concil. Const. ii. 228), Nicolaus Tudeschus, archiepiscop. Panormitanus (about 1428) super prima parte Primi cap. 5 (edit. Lugdun. 1547. fol. 112, b.: Olim Presbyteri in commune regebant ecclesiam et ordinabant sacerdotes), Nicolaus Cusanus (about 1435) de Concordantia cath. lib. iii. c. 2, (in Schardii syntagma tractatum, p. 358), where he remarks, in opposition to the genuineness of the Pseudo-Isidore letters of Clement: Invenitur insuper in ipsis epistolis de episcoporum a sacerdotibus differentia, quae longo tempore post hoc, ut Hieronymo placet et Damaso, in ecclesia orta est. Even the papal canonist Jo. Paul Lancelottus, in his Institut. juris canon. lib. i. tit. 21, § 3, unfolds the same view (1563) with a sunt, qui affirmant, without adding any thing in refutation of it. Since no value was set, during the middle ages, on the distinction between the institutio divina and ecclesiastica, a distinction on which modern Catholics insist, that view could not disturb ecclesiastical practice. But after the Council of Trent, sess. xxiii. (July, 1563) cap. 4, had declared, episcopos, qui in apostolorum locum successerunt,—positos—a spiritu sancto, regere ecclesiam Dei, eosque presbyteris superiores esse etc., the old view became suspicious, although the council did not expressly or definitely maintain the institutio divina. Michael de Medina (about 1570) de Orig. sacr. homin. did not hesitate to declare, illos patres materiales fuisse haereticos, sed in his patribus ob eorum reverentiam hoc dogma non esse damnatum. But Bellarmin de Clericis, lib. i. c. 15, calls this sententiam valde inconsideratam, and would rather resort to the expedient of an interpretation. Although, afterward, among Catholic theologians, Edmundus Richerius (Defensio libelli de eccles. et polit. potest. t. ii. p. 52, ss.) defended the view of Jerome, and John Morin (de sacris ecclesiae ordinationibus, p. iii. Exerc. iii. c. 3) at least asserted, that the opinion was not heretical, episcopos non jure divino esse presbyteris superiores; yet, since the Tridentine council, the institutio divina of episcopacy, and its original distinction from presbyteratus became the general doctrine of the Catholic church, which the English Episcopalians also followed in this particular, while the other Protestant churches returned to the most ancient doctrine and regulation on the subject. The first leading works in favor of the modern Catholic view are Petavii de Ecclesiastica hierarchia, lib. v. and dissertatt. theologic. lib. i. in his Theolog. dogmat. tom. iv. p. 164. On the other side, Walonis Messalini (Claud. Salmasii) diss. de episcopis et presbyteris. Lugd. Bat. 1641. 8. Dav. Blondelli apologia pro sententia Hieronymi de episcopis et presbyteris. Amstelod. 1646. 4. Against these H. Hammond wrote dissert. iv. quibus episcopatus jura ex sacra scriptura et prima antiquitate adstruuntur. Lond. 1651. The controversy was still continued; on the side of the Episcopalians by Jo. Pearson, William Beveridge, Henr. Dodwell, Jos. Bingham, Jac. Usserius. The view of the Presbyterians was defended by Jo. Dallaeus, Camp. Vitringa; also the Lutherans, Joach. Hildebrand, Just. Henn. Boehmer, Jo. Franc. Buddeus, Christ. Matth. Pfaff, &c. *Jo. Phil. ence of these elders were the deacons and deaconesses (Rom. xvi. 1; 1 Tim. v. 9, 10).³ All these officers received their support, in so far as they needed, as well as the poor, from the free-will contributions of the church (1 Tim. v. 17; 1 Cor. ix. 13). The duty of teaching as an office was by no means incumbent on the elders,⁴ although the apostle wishes that they should be διδασκατικοί, apt to teach (1 Tim. iii. 2; 2 Tim. ii. 24). The capacity for instructing and edifying in the assemblies was rather considered as a free gift of the Spirit (χάρισμα πνευματικόν), which manifested itself in many Christians, although in different modes (προφήτης—διδάσκαλος—γλώσση λαλῶν, 1 Cor. xii. 28-31, c. xiv.). Still less was a distinct priestly order known at this time; for the whole society of Christians formed a royal priesthood (βασιλειον ιεράτευμα, 1 Peter ii. 9), God's peculiar people (κλήρος, ἡλη, 1 Peter v. 3; cf. Deut. iv. 20; ix. 29).⁵ The Christians met in private houses; in many cities the churches were divided into several smaller communities meeting in different places.⁶

Ambrosiaster (Hilarius Diaconus), about 380, in comment. ad Ephes. iv. 11: Primum omnes docebant et omnes baptizabant, quibuscumque diebus vel temporibus fuisset occasio; nec enim Philippus tempus quaesivit aut diem, quo ennuclium baptizaret neque jejunium interposuit.—Ut ergo cresceret plebs et multiplicaretur, omnibus inter initia concessum est et evangelizare et baptizare et scripturas in ecclesia explanare. At ubi omnia loca complexa est ecclesia, conventicula constituta sunt, et caetera officia in ecclesiis sunt ordinata, ut nullus de clericis [perhaps ceteris] auderet, qui ordinatus non esset, praesumere officium quod sciret non sibi creditum vel concessum. Et coepit alio ordine et providentia gubernari ecclesia, quia si omnes eadem possent, irrationabile esset, et vulgaris res et vilissima videretur. Hinc ergo est, unde nunc neque diaconi in populo praedicant, neque clerici vel laici baptizant, neque quocunque die credentes tinguntur, nisi aegri. Ideo non per omnia conveniunt scripta apostoli ordinationi, quae nunc in ecclesia est, quia haec inter primordia sunt scripta.

Archief voor Kerkerlijke Geschiedenis, Deel. 2, translated into German in Illgen's Zeitschrift für die hist. Theol. ii. 2, 54), thinks that these churches in houses, belonging to one town, were established by different teachers, and without a common government. Baur (Pastoralbriefe, S. 78, ff.) infers from Titus i. 5, that every church had but one elder, and that where several elders are represented as being in one city each governed independently a particular church. The analogy of the synagogue, however is in favor of the plurality of elders in a church; for the connection of the elders of one city into a college, and, consequently, of the churches in houses into one

In their assemblies, there was an interchange of reading out of the Old Testament, explanation of what was read, free discourse, singing,⁷ and prayer (Col. iii. 16 ; 1 Tim. iv. 13). The letters of Paul also were read, and sent from one church to another (Col. iv. 16 ; 1 Thess. v. 27). The covenant-supper of Jesus was solemnized in an actual evening meal (ἀγάπη, 1 Cor. xvi. 20).⁸ The kiss of charity was customary—the token of brotherly love in the assemblies (φίλημα ἀγάπης, φίλημα ἁγίου, Rom. xvi. 16 ; 1 Pet. v. 14). The other regulations of the churches were left free to each society, innocent national customs being observed (1 Cor. xi. 4) ; and therefore they differed in separate communities. While the Jewish Christians of Palestine retained the entire Mosaic law, and consequently the Jewish festivals, the Gentile Christians observed also the Sabbath and the passover (1 Cor. v. 6–8), with reference to the last scenes of Jesus' life, but without Jewish superstition (Gal. iv. 10 ; Col. ii. 16). In addition to these, Sunday, as the day of Christ's resurrection (Acts xx. 7 ; 1 Cor. xvi. 2 ; Apoc. i. 10, *ἡ κυριακὴ ἡμέρα*⁹), was devoted to religious services. All bodily asceticism was valued only as a means of virtue, and left to the free discretion of individuals. Thus, fasting was looked upon as a suitable preparation for prayer (Acts xiii. 2, 3 ; xiv. 23) ; celibacy was regarded by Paul desirable on account of the distressing times impending (1 Cor. vii. 26) ; but this very apostle requires that all these abstinences should be left to the free choice of every one (Romans xiv. 17 ; 1 Cor. viii. 7 ; 1 Tim. iv. 3). Immoral members were excluded from the church (1 Cor. v. 2–13), repentance and improvement forming the conditions of restoration (2 Cor. ii. 5–8).

⁷ On the nature of the singing see Isidor. ⁹ These passages furnish valid proof, when taken in connection with the fact, that the observance of Sunday is presupposed as an established custom, in Epist. Barnab. c. 15 : Ἀγομεν τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ὀγδόην εἰς εὐφροσύνην, ἐν ἧ καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνέστη ἐκ νεκρῶν καὶ φανερωθεὶς ἀνέβη εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοῦς. Cf. C. Chr. L. The idea set forth by Christ of the union of his people with himself, and with one another in one joint body (John x. 16; xv. 1, ff.), was kept alive by the apostles (σῶμα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Romans xii. 5; 1 Cor. x. 17; xii. 13; Ephes. ii. 16; iv. 4; xii.; xvi.; Col. iii. 15: ἐκκλησία, Acts ix. 31; xx. 28; 1 Cor. x. 32; xii. 28; Ephes. iii. 10).¹⁰ This unity did not, indeed, obtain, for a long time, the corresponding external form; but it had an external opposition in the unbelieving, and an external center-point in the apostles,¹¹ who exercised a general survey over all the churches (2 Cor. xi. 28), and were co-overseers in every single church (συμπρεσβύτεροι, 1 Peter v. 1). As they had themselves divided the large sphere of their activity by the separation into apostles of the Jews and of the Gentiles (Gal. ii. 7-9); so, again, did each one find in the churches he had himself founded, his narrower field of labor (Romans xv. 20), without, however, being prevented by this circumstance from being zealous for Christianity in other churches also. The first arrangement in the newly planted churches, even the appointment of elders in them, was made by the apostles themselves (Acts xiv. 23). Afterward, the officers belonging to societies of Christians were appointed by elders with the consent of the churches.¹² In the newly established churches, Paul was accustomed to transfer the first arrangement and superintendence to one of his assistants (Acts xvii. 14; 1 Tim. i. 3, ff.; Titus i. 5, ff.), who then had a routine of duties similar to those of the later bishops, though not bound to any particular church.¹³ They belonged rather to the class of teachers who, without being confined in one place, preached the gospel as opportunity offered (εὐαγγελισταί, 2 Tim. iv. 5). James, the Lord's brother, occupied a peculiar position. He stood in Jerusalem, where he continued to reside, at the head of the church, in equal esteem with the apostles, and with extensive influence and reputation, quite in the relation of a later bishop, but without the appellation.¹⁴

TIME OF THE JEWISH DISTURBANCES.

The Jewish expectations of the Messiah had constantly been most lively under the oppression of foreign rulers, and had expressed themselves among the Palestinian Jews in an Apocalyptic literature, shaped after the old Hebrew prophecies, but far surpassing these in definiteness and richness in imagery, viz.: *the book of Daniel*¹ (under Antiochus Epiphanes); *the book of Enoch*² (under Herod the Great). The times of oppression, in like manner, before and after the destruction of Jerusalem, furnished new nourishment to such expectations (4th book of Ezra).³ Alexandrian Jews, on the other hand, made use of the widely spread form of the sybilline oracles,⁴ in order to oppose idolatry, and to procure respect among the heathen for their people and their destiny. The more the Christians were inclined to see the beginning of the end in the oppressions of that time, the easier access to them did such writings obtain, and the more readily were they imitated (first Christian sybillines.)⁵

When Jewish fanaticism pressed severely on the Christians of Jerusalem immediately before its destruction, and even James, the Lord's brother (69 A.D.), fell a sacrifice to it;⁶ the most of

⁴ After the genuine sybillines had been burnt along with the capitol, 74 B.C., and persons began to collect new sybillines, they sprang up in so great numbers that the loss in the capitol was not only replaced very soon, but Augustus could even cause such writings to be deposited in the temple of Apollo on the Palatine (Sueton. Aug. c. 31). Although at that time the possession of all soothsaying books was forbidden, yet numerous sybilline predictions were constantly circulated among the people (Tacit. Ann. vi. 12). The first certain trace of Jewish sybillines is to be found in Joseph. Ant. i. 4, 3 (cf. orac. Sybill. iii. 35). The sybillines now extant (Sybillinorum oraculorum lib. viii. ed. Jo. Opsopoeus. Huet conjectured their authors to be the Gnostics; Cave, Alexandrian Christians; Semler, Tertullian. Grotius regarded them as Jewish productions, afterward interpolated by Christians. G. J. Vossius, however, perceived that they proceeded from several authors at different times. Birger Thorlacius (libri Sybillistarum veteris ecclesiae crisi, quatenus monumenta christiana sunt, subjecti, Hann. 1815. 8, and Conspectus doctr. christ. qualis in Sibyllistarum libris continentur, 1816, also in F. Münter Miscellanea Hafniensia 1, i. 113) assumed that they had been for the greater part composed between 100 and 170 A.D., in Phrygia—some of them, too, by Alexandrians. According to Bleek (über die Entstehung u. Zusammensetzung d. sib. Or. in Schleiermacher's, De Wette's u. Lücke's theol. Zeitschrift, i. 120, and ii. 172) the oldest of them are Jewish oracles belonging to the second century before Christ; the youngest, Christian oracles of the fifth century after Christ. The greatest part of the third book, and several sections in the fifth (l. c. i. 198, ii. 182, 194), proceed from Alexandrian Jews. Gröfner (Philo. ii. 121) agrees with him in this opinion, and points out Jewish-Alexandrian dogmas in these sections.

the members of the church fled to Pella.⁷ About this time also John repaired to Asia Minor, and there, full of the impressions which he had taken along with him from Palestine, and perceiving in these oppressions the beginning of the last events, wrote the Apocalypse (69 A.D.).⁸ This was the commencing point of a rich apocalyptic literature among the Christians.

of the people to Christ, and stood generally in the highest repute as the righteous one. Hence the scribes and Pharisees demanded of him a solemn denial of Christ: Ἔσθισαν οὖν τὸν Ἰάκωβον ἐπὶ τὸ περὺγιον τοῦ ναοῦ, καὶ ἐκραζον αὐτῷ καὶ εἶπον· δίκαιε, ὡ πάντες πείθεσθαι ὀφείλομεν, ἐπεὶ ὁ λαὸς πλανᾷται ὀπίσω Ἰησοῦ τοῦ σταυρωθέντος, ἀπάγγειλον ἡμῖν, τίς ἡ θύρα Ἰησοῦ τοῦ σταυρωθέντος. (θύρα as in Rabbinic $\Psi\Psi$ estimate, value. See Credner in the new Jena A. L. Z. August, 1843, S. 795. "What is the disclosure, the truth of Christ?") Καὶ ἀπεκρίνατο φωνῇ μεγάλῃ· τί με ἐπερωτᾶτε περὶ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; καὶ αὐτὸς κἀθηται ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἐκ δεξιῶν τῆς μεγάλης δυνάμεως, καὶ μέλλει ἔρχεσθαι ἐπὶ τῶν νεφελῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Since now many agreed with him, the scribes and Pharisees resolved to put him to death. Ἀναβάντες οὖν κατέβαλον τὸν δίκαιον—καὶ ἤρξαντο λιθάζειν αὐτόν. He was not, however, killed instantaneously, but still prayed for his murderers: Καὶ λαβὼν τις ἅπ' αὐτῶν εἰς τῶν κναφῶν τὸ ξύλον, ἐν ᾧ ἀπέπιξε τὰ ἰμάτια, ἤνεγκε κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ δικαίου. καὶ οὕτως ἐμαρτύρησεν. Καὶ ἔθαψαν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τῷ τόπῳ παρὰ τῷ ναῷ, καὶ ἐτι αὐτοῦ ἡ στήλη μένει παρὰ τῷ ναῷ. Καὶ εἰθὺς Οὐεσπασιανὸς πολιορκεῖ αὐτούς. In opposition to Josephus, who places the death of James in the year 63, there agree with the designation of time by Hegesippus, agreeably to which the siege of Jerusalem took place immediately after James's death, Eusebius, iii. 11 (Symeon was chosen successor to James, μετὰ τὴν Ἰακώβου μαρτυρίαν καὶ τὴν αὐτίκα γενομένην ἄλωσιν τῆς Ἱερουσαλήμ), although in his chronicle he places the death of James and the inauguration of Symeon, after Josephus, in the seventh of Nero; the Clementines (so far the Ep. Clemen. Rom. ad Jacob, c. 1, in Cotelieri Patres ap. i. 611, and Clementina Epitome de gestis S. Petri, c. 147, l. c. p. 798, announce that Peter died before James), and the Paschal Chronicle, which (ed. Bonn. i. 460) places the death of James in the first year of Vespasian's reign. Comp. ⁸ This time is specified by Ewald Comm. in Apoc. p. 48, and Lücke Einleit. in d. Offenbar. Joh. S. 244. I can not, however, bring myself to refuse to the apostle John the authorship of the book. The author designates himself as the apostle; the oldest witnesses declare him to be so. Had the book been forged in his name thirty years before his death, he would certainly have contradicted it, and this contradiction would have reached us through Irenaeus from the school of John's disciples. On the contrary, the later contradictions of the apostolic origin proceed from doctrinal prepossession alone. The internal difference in language and mode of thought between the Apocalypse, which John, whose education was essentially Hebrew, and his Christianity Jewish-Christian of the Palestinian character, wrote, and the gospel and epistles which he had composed after an abode of from twenty to thirty years among the Greeks, is a necessary consequence of the different relations in which the writer was placed, so that the opposite would excite suspicion. There is much at the same time that is cognate, proving continuousness of cultivation in the same author. Comp. F. THIRD CHAPTER.

AGE OF JOHN: FROM 70-117.

FATE OF THE JEWISH CHRISTIANS IN PALESTINE.

Although a Jewish Christian church soon formed itself among the ruins of Jerusalem,¹ and again selected a relative of Jesus, Symeon,² to be its head, yet, after the judgment which had befallen Judaism,³ this church could no longer continue to be a model mother-church, and the center of Christendom. We have a proof that these Christians were continually hated by the Jews, in the composition of the work called הַבְּרִית הַיְהוּדִי,⁴ and in the crucifixion of Symeon at the age of 120⁵ (107). After the

² Euseb. iii. 11. See § 31, note 6. Hegesippus apud Euseb. iv. 22: Καὶ μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι Ἰάκωβον τὸν δίκαιον—πάλιν ὁ ἐκ θείου αὐτοῦ Συμεὼν ὁ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ καθίσταται ἐπίσκοπος ὃν προέθεντο πάντες, ὄντα ἀνεψιὸν τοῦ Κυρίου, δεύτερον. Clopas, the father of Symeon, was, according to Hegesippus in Euseb. iii. 11, a brother of Joseph. (Sophron. in app. ad Hieronymi Catal. § 6, represents this Symeon as Judas, the brother of James, and moreover the apostle Simon Zelotes. In opposition to this, see Sam. Basnage Annales politico-ecclesiastici ad ann. 31, no. 72.) These Jewish Christians generally preferred to choose relatives of our Lord as presidents of their churches. So Hegesippus relates (in Euseb. iii. 20) that the grandchildren of Judas, a brother of Christ, after they had been set free by Domitian, ἠγγήσασθαι τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν, ὡς ἂν δὴ μάρτυρας ὁμοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ γένους ὄντας τοῦ Κυρίου.

³ The feeling of this is plainly expressed in the writings of this period. Barnabae Epist. c. 9: ἡ περιτομὴ, ἐφ' ἣ πεποιθασι, καθήρηται even for the Jews. The law of Moses had only a typical meaning, particularly the laws regarding meats (c. 10); the Jews are not heirs of the promises, but the Christians (c. 13, 14); the Jewish Sabbaths are not agreeable to the Lord, but Sundays are (c. 15); in place of the destroyed Jewish temple appears a spiritual temple (c. 16).

death of this man, there also arose an internal division among them. An opposition in the church, which had existed since the apostolic council at Jerusalem (Acts xv.), but had been hitherto restrained, now broke out openly (Thebuthis);⁶ and from the Nazaraeans,⁷ who remained steadfast in the apostolic faith, a party separated which held the Mosaic law to be binding in all cases, and Jesus to be the son of Joseph and Mary. To them the name Ebionites was afterward for the most part applied—an appellation originally given by the Jews, in derision, to the Christians generally.⁸ A new party also arose among the Jew-

Συμεῶνος τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, ὡς ὄντος ἀπὸ Δαβὶδ καὶ Χριστιανοῦ. These heretics can only have been the adherents of the seven Jewish αἵρέσεις, of which Hegesippus in Euseb. ii. 23, and iv. 22, speaks. In the Chronographia of Jo. Malala (about 600—ed. Oxon. 1691, 2vo, p. 356) is the following Relatio Tiberiani, or Relation of Tiberianus, a president of Palestine, communicated to Trajan, which, if it be genuine, must belong to this time: Ἀπέκταμον τιμαρῶμενος καὶ φωνεύων τοὺς Γαλιλαίους, τοὺς τοῦ δόγματος τῶν λεγομένων Χριστιανῶν, κατὰ τὰ ἡμέτερα θεσπίσματα· καὶ οὐ παύονται ἑαυτοὺς μνημόνους εἰς τὸ ἀναρεῖσθαι. ὄθεν ἐκοπίασα τοῦτοις παραίνων καὶ ὑπειλάν, μὴ τολμᾶν αὐτοὺς μνηνῆν μοι ὑπάρχοντας ἐκ τοῦ προειρημένου δόγματος· καὶ ἀποδιωκόμενοι οὐ παύονται. Θεσπίσαι μοι οὖν καταξιώσατε τὰ παριστάμενα τῷ ἡμετέρῳ κράτει τροπαιοχίρ. But Dodwell Dissert. Cypr. diss. xi. § 23, and Tillemont, note 2, sur la persécution de Trajan (in the Mémoires, ed. Bruxelles. 8, tom. ii. p. ii. p. 433, s.) have sufficiently proved the spuriousness of this relation.

⁶ Hegesippus, in Eusebii, iii. 32, says that the church enjoyed a profound peace from the death of Symeon, till the time of Trajan, and continued to be παρθένος καθαρὰ καὶ ἀδιάφθορος. When he designates Thebuthis as the person who corrupted it (Euseb. iv. 22), the connection does not render it necessary to understand the death of James as the point of time at which Thebuthis appeared; and we must therefore refer to the point of time which was before announced in obvious terms. Least of all can the opinion of Schliemann (Clementinen, S. 460) be justified, according to which, iv. 22 should be understood of the first beginnings of heretical views immediately after the death of James; iii. 32 of the open breaking out of these heresies in the second century. The influence of a Thebuthis, because he was not a bishop, can only have been an open opposition. The first beginnings of heretical views among the Jewish Christians are to be found long before the death of James in the opponents of Paul. It is still more remarkable that Schleiemann, p. 488, f. did not farther consider this point of time given by Hegesippus as that in which the sects arose, but places the separation of the Ebionites from the Nazaraeans in the year 136. Comp. my treatise on the Nazaraeans and Ebionites in Stäudlin's and Tzschirner's Archiv. iv. ii. 320. Θέβουθις, according to Credner (Einl. in d. N. T. i. ii. 619), is not a person, but a collective idea, Chald. אַבְרָהָמָא אַבְרָהָמָא, opposition, reluctance, especially abhorrence of the stomach, nausea, hence vomitus, and then generally filth, dirt, much the same as σπιλάδες, Jude 12; σπιλοι καὶ μῦμοι, 2 Peter ii. 13.

ish Christians about the time of Trajan, in the countries lying eastward of the Dead Sea, by means of the diffusion of Essenism, which united with the asceticism of the Essenes the peculiar opinion that the Spirit of God associated himself differently with man, that, as the true prophet (Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Jesus), he might announce the same truth, and restore it when obscured.⁹ This party became Gnostic and the common Ebionites. He has himself shown, p. 207, that the former could not think of a birth of Christ by a virgin; Origen also calls them Elcesaites; see below, note 10. They are the Nazaraeans and Ebionites whom even Eusebius, H. E. iii. 27, groups together under the common appellation Ebionites, and at the same time obviously draws a distinction between them. The Ebionites, in a stricter sense, arose, according to Epiphanius Haer. xxx. 2, at Cocabe, and lived in his day (l. c. c. 18), in Nabathea, Paneas, Moabitis, and Cocabe. Respecting their adherents in Asia Minor, Rome, and Cyprus, of which he also speaks, see below, note 10. The derivation of the name from one Ebion, occurs first in Tertullian de Praescript. haeret. c. 33. In the Talmud. Hierosolymit. tract. Joma, fol. 4, col. 3, appears no יְבִיֹן , as Lightfoot Parergon de excid. urbis, Opp. t. ii. p. 148, asserts, but a יְבִיֹן . Comp. my treatise, p. 297, ff. 306, ff.

⁹ Comp. Credner "On the Essenes and Ebionites, and a partial connection between them," in Winer's Zeitschrift f. wissensch. Theol. i. 211, 277. A. Schliemann's die Clementinen nebst den Verwandten Schriften, und der Ebionitismus. Hamburg. 1844. According to Epiphanius, the Ἐσσηνοί (Haer. x.) lived in Samaria; on the other hand, the Ὀσσηνοί (Haer. xix.) in Nabathea, Iturea, Moabitis, and Areilitis. Hence he takes the former as a Samaritan, the latter as a Jewish sect. Doubtless the names were different merely by provincial pronunciation. The Essenes had withdrawn into these districts during the Jewish wars, in order to avoid the importunity of the Jews insisting on their carrying arms along with them. To the Ossenes, i. e. the Essenes living to the east of the Dead Sea, Ἠλξαι , Ἠλξαιος attached himself in the reign of Trajan (Epiphan. Haer. xix. 1); and remains of the party which he modified were still existing in the time of Epiphanius as a Christian sect, under the name of Σαμφαῖτοι , living in Nabathea and Moabitis (l. c. c. 2), also in Iturea. They were also called Ἐλκεσαῖτοι (Haer. liii. 1); and by Origen (in Euseb. H. E. vi. 38) Ἐλκεσαῖται . That Elxai also attached himself to the Ebionites, and a part of them followed him (Epiphan. Haer. xxx. 3). Epiphanius professes even to have read the prophetic book left by Elxai (Haer. xix. 1, 3); and he had heard besides of another writing, belonging to a brother of Elxai (Haer. liii. 3) called Ἰεζέος (Haer. xix. 1). The name Ἠλξαι signified, according to his followers, $\text{δύναμις κεκαλυμμένη}$, from ἦ and בָּקַח (Haer. xix. 2). Modern writers have conjectured that this name first originated from the name of the party, and have declared the name Elcesaites equivalent to אֶלְכֵסַיִת (from שָׁחַט , to deny), apostate. Baumgarten's Geschichte der Religionspartei, pag. 271; from אֶלְכֵסַיִת , Nitzsch de Testamentis xii. patriarcharum, p. 5. But according to Scaliger, $\text{Ἠλξαι Ἰσραὴλ ὁ Ἐσσαιος}$ (Petauii comm. ad Epiphan. Haer. xix.) According to Delitzsch (in Rudelbach's and Guericke's Zeitschrift, 1841, i. 43), the Elcesaites derived their name from the town Elcesi, in Galilee. I believe that בָּקַח is an appellation of the Spirit of God which made the true prophet, and which is also called in the Clementines, Hom. xvii. 16, δύναμις ἄσακρος . The Elcesaites praised this secret power as their teacher; hence arose the error of Epiphanius. If the title of the work which he possessed was בָּקַח , and he heard of another בָּקַח , the latter treating of the concealed deity as the former did of his concealed power, he may have made out of this two brothers. That this development proceeded from a confounding of the Essenes with Jewish Christians is shown by Credner, l. c. p. 312. When Schliemann denies this, because the similarity of known beyond their own country by means of the Clementines, toward the end of the second century ;¹⁰ and they were called sometimes Elcesaites or Sampsaeans, sometimes Ebionites ; which latter was the general appellation of heretical Jewish Christians.

EXTERNAL FORTUNES OF THE CHRISTIANS IN THE OTHER PROVINCES OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

(COMP. § 16.)

After the destruction of Jerusalem, the heathen Christians were every where so numerous that it was no longer possible to mistake the distinction between Christianity and Judaism. Still, however, the Christians were looked upon as a Jewish sect.¹ All the prejudices entertained against the Jews, and the hatred of the heathen, which had been strengthened against them since their rebellion, were transferred in like manner to the the Essene creed to the Elcesaites can not be demonstrated, he forgets that the former is completely unknown to us, since it was guarded as a mysterious doctrine under the sanction of an oath, a thing which the Elcesaites had also to do (Credner's Beiträge zur Einl. in d. bibl. Schriften, i. 369). When Schliemann, on the other hand, designates this tendency as Gnostic Ebionitism, no objection can be made to the assertion, if Gnosis be taken as synonymous with theosophy generally. In this sense the Essenes, too, were Gnostics. But that theosophy which is in historical possession of the name Gnosis was opposed by the Elcesaites, as Schliemann, p. 539, himself shows. When, moreover, this same writer refers to the incorporation of the old oriental elements into Judaism, in order to explain Gnostic Ebionitism, and quotes Neander, he lays claim to the same source for it as that from which Neander derives Essenism (see above § 15, note 9). Regarding the name of the party, I do not believe with Credner (Beiträge, S. 367) that Ossenes, Sampsaeans, and Elcesaites were the names of the three highest classes of the Essenes. The Ossenes were the Essenes east of the Dead Sea, who by degrees became Christians. These Essene Christians were styled Elcesaites from the עֲלֵסַיִתִּים, which they confessed ; Sampsaeans (Epiphanius, Haer. liii. 2 : Σαμψαῖοι ἐρμηνεύονται Ἡλιακοὶ from שֶׁמֶשׁ), probably because they turned while praying toward the rising sun, as did the Essenes. The name Ebionites which was given to them, if we may rely on the authority of Epiphanius, is with him the general appellation for all heretical Jewish Christians, and is therefore least of all adapted for a strict description.

Christians. At the same time Christianity appeared far more dangerous than Judaism, inasmuch as it was not confined, like it, to one people, but propagated itself every where with immense rapidity.² Yet the persecutions which the Christians had to suffer from individual emperors were only partial. Vespasian (70-79) did not at all persecute the Christians as such, although they may have been harassed under his reign and that of Titus his successor (79-81) by the demand of the tax imposed on every Jew. This was still more the case under Domitian (81-96),³ who caused some Christians to be put to death even in Rome,⁴ and search to be made in Palestine for the posterity of David.⁵ Under Nerva (96-98), all these provocations ceased.⁶ At the time of Trajan (98-117), appear the first traces of that popular rage against them to which, in succeeding times, so many must frequently have fallen sacrifices (Eusebius iii. 32). Pliny the younger, governor of Bithynia, where the Alii ab indice nominati, esse se Christianos dixerunt, et mox negaverunt: fuisse quidem, sed desisse, quidam ante triennium, quidam ante plures annos, non nemo etiam ante viginti quoque. Omnes et imaginem Tuam, Deorumque simulacra venerati sunt: ii et Christo maledixerunt. Affirmabant autem, hanc fuisse summam vel culpae suae, vel erroris, quod essent soliti stato die ante lucem convenire, carmenque Christo, quasi Deo, dicere secum invicem: seque sacramento, non in scelus aliquod obstringere, sed ne furta, ne latrocinia, ne adulteria committerent, ne fidem fallerent, ne depositum appellati abnegarent; quibus peractis morem sibi discedendi fuisse, rursusque coeundi ad capiendum cibum, promiscuum tamen et innoxium (non singularem maleficae superstitionis); quod ipsum facere desisse post edictum meum, quo secundum mandata Tua hetaerias esse vetueram. Quo magis necessarium credidi, ex duabus ancillis, quae ministrae dicebantur, quid esset veri, et per tormenta quaerere. Sed nihil aliud inveni, quam superstitionem pravam et immodicam: ideoque dilata cognitione ad consulendum Te decurri. Visa est enim mihi res digna consultatione, maxime propter periclitantium numerum. Multi enim omnis aetatis, omnis ordinis, utriusque sexus etiam, vocantur in periculum, et vocabuntur. Neque enim civitates tantum, sed vicos etiam atque agros superstitionis istius contagio pervagata est. Quae videtur sisti et corrigi posse. Certe satis constat, prope jam desolata templa coepisse celebrari, et sacra solemnia diu intermissa repeti, pastumque venire victimarum, cuius adhuc rarissimus entor inveniebatur. Ex quo facile est opinari, quae turba hominum emendari possit, si sit poenitentiae locus.

(This text is after the edition of J. C. Orelli, prefixed to the Zürich Lectionscataloge. Mich. 1838.) Even Tertullian (Apologet. c. 2) and Eusebius (Hist. Eccl. iii. 33) mention these letters. Against the doubts of Gibbon, Semler, and Corodi, concerning their genuineness, see H. C. Haversaat's Vertheidigung der Plinischen Briefe über die Christen. ⁸ Euseb. H. E. iii. 36. Trajan's conduct toward Ignatius is not inexplicable, as Baur (Ursprung des Episcopats, S. 149) supposes, but was well considered. He sent him to be executed at Rome, partly for the sake of not provoking the fanaticism of the Christians at Antioch, by looking upon his martyrdom; partly because he thought that the tedious hardships endured on the way to the place of execution might effect a change of mind, for the apostasy of this head of the Christians must have been of the greatest consequence; partly for the purpose of terrifying the Christians on the way when they saw the sufferer. Among the various texts of the Acta martyrii Ign., that of the old Latin version is the most ancient (Cotelerii Patr. apost. ii. 171); the Greek is (l. c. p. 161) a revision, which first proceeded, perhaps, from Simeon Metaphrastes. Both may also be found in Ruinart Acta mart. selecta.

Ephesus. While the latter superintended the churches of Asia Minor, and laid the foundation of a peculiar development of doctrine, by instructing able disciples and by his writings, the churches of other countries lost that superintendence which they had hitherto enjoyed, by the death of the apostles and their immediate disciples. The need of unity required something to compensate for this loss; it was presented in the episcopate,²

² Comp. § 30, not. 1. Hilarius Diaconus (usually called Ambrosiaster), about 380, in comment. ad 1 Tim. iii. 10: Episcopi et presbyteri una ordinatio est. Uterque enim sacerdos est; sed episcopus primus est; ut omnis episcopus presbyter sit, non tamen omnis presbyter episcopus: hic enim episcopus est, qui inter presbyteros primus est. The traces of this relation were longest preserved in Alexandria. Hieronym. Epist. 101 (al. 85) ad Evangelum (in the old editions falsely styled ad Evagrium, also in Gratianus dist. xciii. c. 24): Apostolus perspicue docet eisdem esse presbyteros, quos episcopos.—Quaeris auctoritatem? Audi testimonium. Then Phil. i. 1, Acts xx. 28, &c., are cited. Quod autem postea unus electus est, qui caeteris praeponeretur, in schismatis remedium factum est, ne unusquisque ad se trahens Christi ecclesiam rumpere. Nam et Alexandriae a Marco evangelista usque ad Heraclam et Dionysium episcopos (about 240 A.D.) presbyteri semper unum ex se selectum, in excelsiori gradu collocatum, episcopum nominabant. Quomodo si exercitus imperatorem faciat, aut diaconi eligant de se, quem indurium noverint, et archidiaconum vocent (comp. on this letter Chr. Waechtler, acta eruditorum ann. 1717, p. 484, ss. 524, ss. With a Catholic bias P. Molkenbuh, and after him Binterim Denkwürdigk. d. christkath. Kirche, ii. i. 78, ff., have pronounced the letter spurious). Hilarius Diac. comm. ad Ephes. iv. 11: Primum presbyteri episcopi appellabantur, ut uno recedente sequens ei succederet. Denique apud Aegyptum presbyteri consignant, si praesens non sit episcopus. Sed quia coeperunt sequentes presbyteri indigni inveniri ad primatus teneudos, immutata esse ratio, prospiciente concilio, ut non ordo, sed meritum crearet episcopum, multorum sacerdotum iudicio constitutum, ne indignus temere usurparet, et esset multis scandalum.—Pseudo-Augustini (probably also Hilarii Diaconi) Quaestiones vet. et nov. testamenti (in the appendix tom. iii. p. ii. of the Benedictine edition), quaest. 101: *Presbyterum autem intelligi episcopum probat Paulus apostolus, quando Timotheum, quem ordinavit presbyterum, instruit, qualem debeat creare episcopum (1 Tim. iii. 1). Quid est enim episcopus, nisi primus presbyter, hoc est summus sacerdos? Nam in Alexandria et per totam Aegyptum, si desit episcopus, consecrat [Ms. Colb. consignat] presbyter. In like manner, Euty chius (Said Ibn Batrik about 930) patriarcha Alex. in Ecclesiae suae origg. (ed. Joh. Selden p. 29): Constituit Marcus evangelista xii. presbyteros, qui nempe manerent cum patriarcha, adeo ut cum vacaret patriarchatus, eigerent unum e xii. presbyteris, cuius capiti reliqui xi. manus imponent, eique benedicerent, et patriarcham eum crearent (comp. 1 Tim. iv. 14).—Neque desit Alexandriae institutum hoc de presbyteris, ut scilicet patriarchas crearent ex presbyteris duodecim, usque ad tempora Alexandri patriarchae Alexandrini, qui fuit ex numero illo cccxviii. Is autem vetuit, ne deinceps patriarcham presbyteri crearent. Et decrevit, ut mortuo patriarcha convenirent episcopi, qui patriarcham ordinarent. In this account the part, at least, which contradicts the later discipline has certainly not been interpolated in later times (but still Gulielmus Autissiodorensis, about 1206, Comm. ad sent. l. iv. qu. 1, de sacram. ord. sub finem, says: Quod si non essent in mundo nisi tres simplicis sacerdotes, oporteret quod aliquis illorum consecraret alium in episcopum et alium in archiepiscopum), and so far it has a historical value. Attempts to remove from the passage what is offensive to preconceived opinions have been made by Morin, Pearson, Le Quien, Renaudot, Petavius, especially by Abrah. Echellensis Euty chius patriarcha Alex. vindicatus et suis restitutus orientalibus, s. responsio ad Jo. Seldeni origines, &c. Romae. 1661. 4. Mamachii *Origg. et antiquit. which had been adumbrated for a considerable time in the mother-church of Jerusalem, by the position of James and his successors.³ This example was imitated especially in the neighboring churches, at Antioch in particular.⁴ It is true, that in the more remote churches the chief presbyters, as presidents of the college of presbyters, occupied a similar position; but they had not been as yet elevated above the other presbyters by independent privileges peculiar to themselves.⁵ Ignatius, through patriarcharum Alexandrinorum saec. i. et ii. Specim. iii. Lips. 1759. 4. p. 28, s.—On the accounts of Jerome and Hilary rests the usual Protestant view of the origin of episcopacy, which is developed among the moderns (for the older literature see § 30, note 1), with different modifications by Zeigler Gesch. d. Kirchl. Verfassungsformen, p. 7. Gabler de Episcopis primae eccl. Christ. eorumque origine diss. Jenae. 1805. 4to. Neander K. G. i. i. 324. Episcopacy is said to have been established as a point of union between the ἐκκλησῖαι κατ' οἶκον, which may have stood independently of each other in towns (see § 30, note 6), by J. F. Gruner de Origine episcoporum exerc. Halae. 1764. 4to. Münscher Dogmengeschichte, ii. 376, and especially by N. Chr. Kist. über den Ursprung der bisch. Gewalt (in Illgen's Zeitschrift für d. hist. Theol. ii. ii. 47). See on the other side Rothe die Anfänge d. christl. Kirche and ihrer Verfassung, i. 194. According to Rothe (p. 392) episcopacy was introduced as an instrument of Christian unity by the still remaining apostles at the council of Jerusalem, at which they chose Symeon bishop of Jerusalem (Euseb. iii. 11). But when the memory of this synod is preserved how can its most important transaction be forgotten? According to Baur (über d. Ursprung des Episkopats. Tübingen. 1838. 8), the heresies which first appeared in full power under the Antonines, which brought the idea of the Catholic church into a clear point of view, gave rise to the outward manifestation of this idea by establishing the episcopate, which was looked upon as a matter of pressing necessity. The Petrine and Pauline parties were united on this point; and in the endeavor to realize the measure, the influence of the Clementines, which proceeded from the Petrine party, as well as the Acts of the Apostles, the pastoral epistles, and the later Ignatian letters, which now proceeded from the Pauline party, were working in the one direction.

the instrumentality of his epistles, recommended episcopacy universally, as a condition of unity, and that, too, in the most urgent terms;⁶ and thus the first presbyters soon generally moved up to the higher step as ἐπίσκοποι,⁷ although they retained besides, for a long time, the title πρεσβύτεροι.⁸ When the attempt was made, at a later period, to carry up the series of bishops, as the successors of the apostles, to the apostles themselves, the most distinguished presbyters of the earlier times were reckoned as the first bishops.⁹ In this way we explain the different accounts of the order of the first Romish bishops.¹⁰ The universal right to teach in the public assemblies having occasioned improprieties very early (James iii. 1), it seems to have been already in this period so limited by custom, that usually

⁹ In Alexandria: (Marcus) Annianus, Abilius, Kerdon (Euseb. ii. 24, iii. 14, 21). In Antioch: Evodius, Ignatius, Heros (Euseb. iii. 22, 36).

¹⁰ Comp. § 27, note 6. First of all, Irenaeus adv. Haer. iii. 3, followed by Eusebius, iii. 2, 13, 14, 31, gives it thus: Linus (2 Tim. iv. 21?) † 80, Anacletus, Anacletus or Cletus † 92, Clemens (Philipp. iv. 37) † 102, Evarestus † 110. According to the Clementines, on the contrary, Clement, the constant attendant of Peter, was consecrated by that apostle bishop of Rome. This opinion is followed by Tertullian de Praescr. c. 32. Accordingly, the Apostol. constitutt. vii. 46, give the following order: Linus nominated by Paul, Clement by Peter, &c. In like manner, Optatus Milev. de schism. Donatist. ii. 2. Augustini Ep. 53, ad Generosum. On the other hand, Epiphanius, xxvii. 6, represents Clement as ordained bishop by Peter, but not as having entered on his office till after the death of Linus and Anacletus. Rufinus praef. in Recognit. says that Linus and Cletus were bishops in the lifetime of Peter; and that after the death of the latter, Peter appointed Clement, shortly before his own death. According to Jerome (Catal. c. 15), most of the Latins looked upon Clement as the immediate successor of Peter. The modern Romish church assumes the following order: Peter, Linus, Clemens, Cletus, Anacletus, Evarestus. Comp. Jo. Pearsonii and Henr. Dodwellii Diss. de successione primorum Romae episcoporum, in Pearsonii opp. posthum. Lond. 1688. 4. J. Ph. Baraterii Disquisitio chronol. de successione antiquissima episcoporum Rom. ¹ The epistle of Barnabas, which was regarded even by Clement of Alexandria, Origen, and Jerome, as genuine, remained entirely unknown till, after Ussher's edition had been burned in the printing-office at Oxford, 1643, it was first published by Hugo Menardus, Paris, 1645, 4to, and with a corrected text by Iss. Vossius appended to the epistles of Ignatius. Amstel. 1646. 4to. For a long time the predominant opinion was against its authenticity, see especially Tenzel ad Hieron. Catal. cap. 6, in Fabricii Bibl. eccles. p. 38, ss. Yet Isaac Vossius, Cave, Grynaeus, Gallandius, declared it genuine. Since J. E. Chr. Schmidt K. G. 437, Münscher Dögmengesch. i. 111, Rosenmüller Hist. interpret. libb. sacr. i. 42, decided in its favor, this became almost the prevailing opinion, and has been defended with ingenuity, particularly by D. E. Henke de epistolae quae Barnabae tributur authentia, Jenae. 1827. 8vo; Bleek Brief a. d. Hebräer, i. 416; and J. Chr. Rördam Comm. de authentia epist. Barnabae. Partic. I. Hafn. 1828. 8vo. Gu. H. Haverkorn von Rysewyk Diss. de Barnaba, Arnhemiae. 1835. 8vo, has also declared in favor of the genuineness. Recently, however, certain important voices have been raised again in opposition to the epistle, as Neander (K. G. i. ii. 1133), Twisten (Dogmatik, i. 104), Ullmann (theol. Studien u. Kritiken, i. ii. 382), and Hug (Zeitschrift für d. Geistlichkeit d. Erzbisth. Frieberg. ii. 132, ff.; iii. 208, ff.). Dan. Schenkel (über d. Brief d. Barn. in d. theol. Stud. u. Kritik. 1837, iii. 652) believes that § 1-6, 13, 14, 17, constitute the genuine original letter, and that § 7-12, 15, 16, were afterward inserted by a therapeutic Jewish Christian. On the other hand, C. J. Hefele, in the Tübing. theol. Quartalschr. 1839, i. 50, affirms the integrity of the epistle, but denies the authenticity of it in the work entitled, "das Sendschreiben des Apostels Barnabas aufs neue untersucht, übersetzt und erklärt, Tübingen. 1840. 8."—The chief ground urged against the genuineness, that the absurd mystical mode of interpretation could not have proceeded from a companion of the apostle Paul, seems to me untenable. That Barnabas was not a man of spiritual consequence, is clear even from the Acts of the Apostles. There he is at first the more prominent by virtue of his apostolic commission, in company with Paul (Acts xi. 22; xii. 2, Barnabas and Saul), but he soon falls entirely into the background behind Paul, after a freer sphere of activity has commenced (xiii. 13, 43, Paul and Barnabas). The epistle was written soon after the destruction of Jerusalem, according to chapters iv. and xvi.; and the ancient testimony of Clement, that Barnabas was the author, can not be derived from a partiality of the Alexandrian in favor of a production of kindred spirit, because the millennarianism of the letter (c. 15) could not have pleased the Alexandrian, and besides, all the interpretations do not agree with Clement, who in his Paedag. ii. p. 221 refutes one of them, and in his Stromata, ii. p. 464 prefers another view of Psalm i. 1 to that given in the epistle before us.

§ 34, note 10),² to whom, in later times, many writings were falsely ascribed,³ and Hermas, whose work (ὁ ποιμήν)⁴ inculcates moral precepts in visions and parables, in order to promote the

² His epistle to the Corinthians, which was usually read in the religious assemblies at Corinth, as early as the second century (Dionys. Corinth. in Euseb. H. E. iv. 23, 6. Iren. iii. 3), is called in question without reason by Semler (histor. Einleit. zu Baumgarten's Unters. theol. Streitigkeiten. Bd. 2. S. 16) and Ammon (Leben Jesu, i. 33), but it has been looked upon as interpolated, by H. Bignon, Ed. Bernard, H. Burton, Jo. Clericus (see Patrum apost. Cotelieri ed. Clerici, ii. p. 133, 478, 482, and in the notes to the letter), Ittig, Mosheim, and Neander. It seems to belong to the end of the first century. In opposition to Schenkel (theol. Studien und Krit. 1841, i. 65), who places it between 64 and 70, see Schlicmann's Clementinen, p. 409. The so-called second epistle, a mere fragment, is spurious (Euseb. iii. 38). These two letters, preserved only in the Cod. Alexand., were first published by Patricius Junius, Oxon. 1633. 4to, and his incorrect text has been repeated in most editions. After a careful comparison of the MS., a more correct text was given first of all by Henr. Wotton, Cantabr. 1718.

nothing but fragments are extant. The compositions attributed to Dionysius the Areopagite (Acts xvii. 34) are spurious.⁸

DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINE IN THIS PERIOD.

While the stricter party of Jewish Christians maintained the Jewish particularism, and therefore constantly endeavored to impose on the Gentile Christians the observance of the Mosaic law,¹ that speculation which strove to comprehend Christianity in its peculiar nature was always becoming more powerful in other quarters. Inasmuch as a speculative basis was not yet firmly established, great freedom was allowed for it; but as soon as it trenchd upon the moral and religious interests of Christianity, it was resisted, and not till then.² It was principally with the wonderful person of Christ, which it endeavored to understand, that speculation occupied itself. Even here the most different tendencies were indulged in, as long as they left unimpaired the divine and human in Christ, by the union of which the atoning and model character of the life of Jesus was necessarily constituted. Hence, the Shepherd of Hermas, with its peculiar Christology, gave no offense.³ On the contrary, the doctrine of νοῦν.—πλὴν καὶ τοῖς μετ' αὐτὸν πλείστοις ὄσοις τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν τῆς ὁμοίας αὐτῶ δόξης παραίτιος γέγονε—ὡσπερ οὖν Εἰρηναῖος κ. τ. λ. With what right Eusebius, who in his Chronicon (Olymp. 220) allows Papias without hesitation to have been a disciple of the apostle John, declares in this work that he was only the pupil of a certain presbyter John, is examined by Olshausen, die Echtheit der vier kanon. Evangelien. Kōnigsb. 1823. S. 224, ff.

the Docetae was rejected, which represented Christ's humanity as a mere appearance, in the way that the Jews conceived of the manifestations of angels (δοκηταί).⁴ In the mean time, however, speculation relative to the higher nature of Christ and the essence of Christianity, attached itself to the more general questions respecting the creation of the world and the origin of evil. Here the Alexandrine Jewish philosophy presented itself as a pattern. The idea of the λόγος in particular was borrowed from it for the purpose of explaining the higher nature of Christ.⁵ John followed this speculation in his gospel, in order to divert it from the region of a fruitless hyper-naturalism into a consideration of the moral efficacy of the Logos.⁶ It went astray, how-veste sua. Quicumque nomen filii Dei portat, harum quoque nomina portare debet: nam et Filius nomina portat eorum. Respecting the person of Christ, iii. 5, 2: A master intrusts a faithful servant with the care of a vineyard, praecipiens, ut vitibus jungeret palos. The servant does for him still more than he had been ordered. The master consults about rewarding him adhibito filio, quem carum et haeredem habebat, et amicis, quos in consilio advocabat, and concludes: volo eum filio meo facere cohæredem. The explanation, c. 5: The master is God, Filius autem Spiritus sanctus est: servus vero, ille Filius Dei est. Vineæ autem populus est, quem servat ipse. Pali vero Nuncii (angels) sunt, qui a Domino praepositi sunt ad continendum populum ejus. C. 6: Quare autem Dominus in consilio adhibuerit Filium de haereditate et bonos Angelos? Quia Nuncius (Christ) audit illum Spiritum sanctum, qui infusus est omnium primus, in corpore, in quo habitaret Deus. Cum igitur corpus illud paruisset omni tempore Spiritui sancto; placuit Deo—ut et huic corpori—locus aliquis consistendi daretur, ne videretur mercedem servitutis suae perdidisse. A useful application, c. 7: Corpus hoc tuum custodi mundum atque purum; ut Spiritus ille qui inhabitabat in eo, testimonium referat illi, et tecum fuisse judicetur. The eternal Son of God is here the Holy Spirit, and there is no account of a personal union of him with the man Jesus. ever, even at that time, falling into that false Gnosis which denies the fundamental principles of Christianity, and which the apostle Paul had already predicted in its germs. The first Christian-Gnostic system was that of Cerinthus, in which, however, the Gnosis did not yet attain a consistent development, but was obliged to accommodate itself to many Jewish opinions.⁷

⁷ According to him, the God of the Jews (δημιουργός) is separated from the highest God by a series of Aeons, and the highest God was first revealed by the Aeon Christ. STATE OF PAGANISM.

P. E. Müller de hierarchia et studio vitæ asceticæ in sacris et mysteriis Græcorum Romanorumque latentibus. Hafn. 1803. 8, in the second section (translated in the Neue Biblioth. der schönen Wissenschaften. Bd. 69. S. 207, ff.). Tzschirner's der Fall des Heidenthums. Bd. 1. S. 124-164.

Although the emperors of this time preserved to the Roman empire external security, maintained internal order and justice, and favored the sciences,¹ yet the old Roman morality and religious sobriety could not be restored among the degenerate people. The propensity to theosophic mysteries, consecrations, and purifications (§ 14), produced new institutions which ministered to superstition. They were no longer satisfied with the wandering priests of Isis and Cybele, the Chaldeans and Magic. In the second century, many secret rites or mysteries were spread abroad over the Roman empire in addition to the former (those of the Dea Syra, of Isis, of Mithras). Besides these, the old Eleusinian and Dionysian mysteries also came again into greater repute, though it would appear that they were variously accommodated to the spirit of the time. Abstinence from sensual pleasures was a universal condition of initiation, by which it was supposed that the people obtained a nearer communion with the deities as they passed through the different gradations of the mysteries. This period was conscious of its godless condition, but mistaking the religious moral way, it sought to obtain purity by magic, with the aid of all kinds of external observances. We have a proof, in the horrible Taurobolium and Kriobolium which now appeared, of the extreme ingenuity of superstition. The prevailing philosophy continued to be that Platonic eclecticism which adopted and defended all superstitions,² although by it a certain monotheism was elevated above polytheism, even in the view of the people generally.³ Among the Platonics of this time, the most distinguished are Plutarch of Chaeronea [† 120], Apuleius of Madaura [about 170] and Maximus of Tyre [about 190]. In opposition to this dogmatic philosophy, skepticism, too, was always rising to a higher degree of strength. Sextus Empiricus.

The hatred of the Jews against the Romans was still more increased by the destruction of Jerusalem, and the great oppression that followed, and soon began to manifest itself in new acts of rebellion. An insurrection first broke out in Cyrenaica (115), which spread over Egypt also, and raged longest in Cyprus. Another was kindled simultaneously in Mesopotamia. Even Hadrian found relapses of these rebellions, which required to be combated, and appears to have been led by them to entertain the idea of doing away the dangerous and exclusive nationality of this people, by prohibiting circumcision.¹ As he resolved, at the same time, to restore Jerusalem by means of a Roman colony, a pretended Messiah soon made his appearance, who, under the title of Bar Cochab (Numb. xxiv. 17),² obtained many adherents, especially by the recognition of Rabbi Akiba, elevated the fortress Bether to be the seat of his kingdom, and endeavored from it to drive the Romans out of the land (132). His conquests had already extended beyond Syria, when Julius Severus appeared, and, after a bloody war, put an end to the insurrection by taking possession of Bether (135). Palestine became a complete wilderness. The colony of Aelia Capitolina rose on the ruins of Jerusalem, but access to it was prohibited to the Jews on pain of death. Hadrian's prohibition of circumcision was first abolished by Antoninus Pius.³

EXTERNAL HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY.

ITS DIFFUSION.

Although the Christian writers of this time manifestly speak in exaggerated terms of the spread of Christianity,¹ yet the extraordinary progress it made can not be mistaken. In the west, it extended from Rome to western Africa, where Carthage was its chief seat.² In Gaul, we find churches at Lyons and Vienne, immediately after the middle of the second century (Euseb. V. c. 1). From this country Christianity may have spread into Ger- many (Cisrhenana)³ and Britain, but only by the efforts of individuals. In the east, we find it firmly established in Edessa, so early as the middle of the second century;⁴ and from this city it had also extended itself, as it seems, into the countries lying eastward.⁵ In northern Arabia,⁶ there must likewise have been Christians so early as this period. About 180, Pantaenus went from Alexandria to India,⁷ to preach the gospel in that region (Euseb. H. E. v. 10).

OPPOSITION TO CHRISTIANITY BY WRITERS.

The principal opponent of Christianity at this period was the Epicurean Celsus (about 150), who, in a work styled "ἀλλοθής λόγος," and perhaps in others now lost, collected all that could be said against it with any appearance of probability.¹ The thums, i. 325. According to F. A. Philippi de Celsi, adversarii Christianorum, philosophandi genere. Berol. 1836. 8, he was an eclectic with a special leaning to Epicurus. According to C. W. I. Bindemann (über Celsus u. seine Schrift gegen die Christen, in Illgen's Zeitschr. für d. hist. Theol. 1842, ii. 58), he was a Platonic philosopher of a more liberal tendency, who agreed with Epicurus in many points. According to Origen, i. p. 28, Celsus lived κατὰ Ἀδριανὸν καὶ κατωτέρω. It is certain that he wrote in the second half of the second century, for he recognizes the whole of the Gnostic sects, and even the Marcionites (v. p. 272), as parties completely formed. Probably he is the same Celsus to whom Lucian dedicates his Alexander, as is assumed by the ancient scholiast (see Luciani Alexander ed. C. G. Jacob, Colon. 1828, p. 8. Fenger p. 40, ss. Bindemann, l. c. 99). Origen does not know (i. p. 53, iv. p. 186) whether he is the same Celsus who wrote several books against magic, and two other books against the Christians.

more must it have appeared, when viewed from the position of a heathen citizen, as a hostile threatening power, whose rapid diffusion was highly suspicious. The Christians saw only evil demons in the gods of the heathen; and since the worship of the gods had pervaded all forms of life, they were compelled entirely to withdraw themselves from the public and the domestic life of the heathen, from their amusements, and their works of art.¹ Hence Christianity appeared to the heathen in the light of a misanthropic superstition.² But the Christians refused even to the emperors the usual marks of divine honor paid them.³ They cherished among them the expectation that a near destruction was impending over all the kingdoms of the earth;⁴ and many would not assume the civil and military offices to which they were called.⁵ It was natural, therefore, that they should be looked upon as bad citizens; and however solemn was their asseveration that Christianity demanded still greater obedience

. Hence from the games (cf. Tertulliani de Spectaculis liber), festivities, and banquets (even the wearing of garlands was not permitted. Tertull. de Corona militis. ² Minucii Felicis Octavius, c. 12, the heathen Caecilius says: Vos vero suspensi interim atque solliciti honestis voluptatibus abstinētis; non spectacula visitis, non pompis interestis; convivia publica absque vobis; sacra certamina, praeceptos cibos et delibatos altaribus potus abhorretis. Sic reformidatis deos, quos negatis. Non floribus caput necitis, non corpus odoribus honestatis: reservatis unguenta funeribus, coronas etiam sepulcris denegatis, pallidi, trepidi, misericordia digni et nostrorum deorum. C. 8: Latebrosa et laefuga natio, in publicum muta, in angulis garrula.

to the powers under which they lived,⁶ it appeared, notwithstanding, in the eyes of the heathen, accustomed as they were to a religion subordinate to political objects, a circumstance so much the more suspicious, that the Christians were constantly obliged to annex a condition, viz., that the commands of the magistrate should not contradict the Divine law.⁷ The moral impression which the doctrine and customs of the Christians must have made on the unbiased, was weakened by prejudices. The Jews, in whom an accurate knowledge of Christianity was presupposed, contributed to increase the disposition which was adverse to it.⁸ Many of the heathen recognized in the Christian doctrine much that was true, but believed that they possessed it still purer in their philosophy,⁹ and took offense at its positive doctrines.¹⁰ Credulous persons allowed themselves to be deceived by ridiculous fabrications respecting the objects which the Christians wor-

Cf. contra Gnosticos, c. 14.

⁸ Justinus M. Dial. c. Tryph. 17 and 108, speaks of Jewish emissaries, who had gone out from Jerusalem into all the world, in order to calumniate Christ and the Christians. Accordingly, the Jews were particularly active about the execution of Polycarp, Epist. eccl. Smyrn. ap. Euseb. iv. 15, 11: Μάλιστα Ἰουδαίων προθύμως, ὡς ἔθος αὐτοῖς, εἰς τοῦτο ὑπουργούντων. Respecting the cursings of the Christians in the synagogues, see Justinus Dial. c. ⁹ Celsus, in particular, often reverts to this (Orig. c. Cels. v. p. 274): Βουλόμενος τὰ καλὰ—καὶ βέλτιον καὶ τρανότερον εἰρῆσθαι παρὰ τοῖς φιλοσοφοῦσιν. (vi. p. 275): Καὶ χωρὶς ἀνατάσεως καὶ ἐπαγγελίας τῆς ὑπὸ θεοῦ, ἢ νιοῦ θεοῦ. So he remarks (vii. p. 370) regarding the Christian prohibition of revenge, Matth. v. 39: Ἀρχαῖον καὶ τοῦτο εἶ μάλα πρόσθεν εἰρημένον, ἀγροικότερον δ' αὐτὸ ἀπεμνημόνευται· ἐπεὶ καὶ Πλάτωνι πεποιήται Σωκράτης Κρίτωνι διαλεγόμενος τάδε κ. τ. λ. He assumes, in plain terms, that the Christians had borrowed these doctrines from the Greek philosophers, particularly from Plato (vi. p. 283–288). Tertull. Apolog. c. 46.

interpreting that love, by representing it as being of an impure character, and several Christian practices as crimes,¹⁹ just as they had appeared in their own mysteries, and other secret societies.²⁰ The steadfastness of the martyrs must, indeed, have invited every unbiased mind to a nearer acquaintance with the source of this lofty spirit;²¹ but yet an unfavorable opinion was ¹⁹ Tertull. Apologet. c. 39: Sed ejusmodi vel maxime dilectionis operatio notam nobis inurit penes quosdam. Vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant; ipsi enim invicem oderunt: et ut pro alterutro mori sint parati; ipsi enim ad occidendum alterutrum paratiores. Sed et quod fratrum appellatione censemur—infamant. The heathen Octavius ap. Minucius Felix, c. 9: Occultis se notis et insignibus (according to c. 31, § 9, notaculo corporis: the Carpocratians actually marked themselves on the ear, Iren. i. 24. Epiph. Haer. xxvii. 5) noscunt, et amant mutuo paene ante quam noverint: passim etiam inter eos velut quaedam libidinum religio miscetur: ac se promiscue appellant fratres et sorores, ut etiam non insolens stuprum, intercessione sacri nominis, fiat incestum. Ita eorum vana et demens superstitionis sceleribus gloriatur. Nec de ipsis, nisi subsisteret veritas, maxime nefaria et honore praefanda sagax fama loqueretur. Audio, eos turpissimae pecudis, caput asini consecratum inepta nescio qua persuasione venerari: digna et nata religio talibus moribus. Alii eos ferunt ipsius antistitis ac sacerdotis colere genitalia, et quasi parentis sui adorare naturam: nescio an falsa, certe occultis ac nocturnis sacris apposita suspicio: et qui hominem, summo supplicio pro facinore punitum, et crucis ligna feralia, eorum caerimonias fabulatur congruentia perditis sceleratisque tribuit altaria, ut id colant, quod merentur. Jam de initiandis tirunculis fabula tam detestanda, quam nota est. Infans farre contactus, ut decipiat incautos, apponitur ei, qui sacris imbuitur. Is infans a tirunculo, farris superficie quasi ad innoxios ictus provocata, caecis occultisque vulneribus occiditur: hujus (proh nefas!) sitienter sanguinem lambunt: hujus certatim membra discerpunt: hac foederantur hostia.—Et de convivio notum est (passim omnes loquuntur, id etiam Cirtensis nostri testatur oratio; ad epulas solempni die coeunt, cum omnibus liberis, sororibus, matribus, sexus omnes homines et omnis aetatis. Illic post multas epulas, ubi convivium caluit, et incestae libidinis fervor ebrietate exarsit, canis, qui candelabro nexus est, jactu offulae ultra spatium lineae, qua vinctus est, ad impetum et saltum provocatur: sic everso et extincto conscio lumine impudentibus tenebris nexus infandae cupiditatis involvunt per incertum sortis, &c. (Cf. Tertull. Apolog. c. 8, ad Nationes, i. 16: also Apulejus Metam. ix. p. 223, ed. Elmenhorst, alludes to the same subject. Clemens Alex. Strom. iii. c. 2, relates the same thing of the Carpocratians, from whom it was falsely transferred to all Christians, cf. Euseb. H. E. iv. 7, 5). According to Athanasius Apol. c. 4, the heathen brought three charges in particular against the Christians: ἀθεότης, Θυέστεια δείψνα and Οἰδιποδείους μίξεις.

²¹ Justinus M. Apol. ii. c. 12, speaks of the impression which they had made upon him. Tertull. entertained regarding that, too, even by the cultivated, agreeably to preconceived notions.²² The Jews were still protected by their peculiar national character.²³ But the Christians were looked upon merely as ignorant and wild fanatics, who wished to destroy all established order. The cultivated laughed contemptuously at them on account of the confidence and obstinacy of their religious faith; ²⁴ the goetae (impostors) were inimical to them as opponents of their interest; ²⁵ the people hated them as despisers of their gods (ἄθεοι, ἀσεβεῖς), and in the public misfortunes saw nothing but admonitions from heaven to exterminate them.²⁶

PERSECUTIONS OF CHRISTIANITY.

The laws against religiones peregrinae and collegia illicita still remained in force, even in reference to the Christians; ¹ but they were by no means universally and uniformly enforced. The persecutions of this period were rather the effects of the people's hatred, to which the magistrates gave way, and also of personal malevolence in those possessing official power. Hence all the persecutions of the period were confined merely to single cities or provinces. Under Hadrian (117–138) the people first began to clamor for the execution of some Christians at the public festivals. But at the representation of Serenius Granianus, proconsul of Asia Minor, Hadrian issued a rescript to the successor of the proconsul, interdicting such tumultuous proceedings.² The tradition regarding this emperor, that he caused temples to be dedicated to Christ, is the more improbable, because he entertained very erroneous and unfavorable notions of the Christians.³ Under Antoninus Pius, the Christians were

⁴ Dionysius Corinth. ap. Euseb. iv. p. 23, concerning a persecution in Athens, in which Bishop Publius, the predecessor of Quadratus, suffered. Melito in Apolog. ad Marc. Aurel. ap. Euseb. iv. c. 26, § 5: 'Ο δὲ πατήρ σου—ταῖς πόλεσι περὶ τοῦ μηδὲν νεωτερίζειν περὶ ἡμῶν ἔγραψεν· ἐν οἷς καὶ πρὸς Λαρισσαίους, καὶ πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς καὶ Ἀθηναίους, καὶ πρὸς πάντας Ἑλλήνας. This writing may have given rise to the opinion that the Edictum ad commune Asiae proceeded from Antoninus, although it is manifestly spurious. This edict has been appended by a later hand to Justinian Apol. i. c. 70, and has been communicated in a different text by Eusebius, iv. c. 13, with a reference to Melito (probably to the above passage, which he misunderstood). All that can be said with plausibility in defense of that edict may be seen in T. G. Hegelmaier Comm. in edictum Imp. Ant. P. pro Christianis. Tubing. 1767. 4. The spuriousness of it, before asserted by J. J. Scaliger, Moyle, Thirlby, has been convincingly proved by Is. Haffner de edicto Antonini Pii pro Christianis ad commune Asiae. Argentor. 1781. 4. Cf. Eichstädt exercitatio Antoniniana v. in the Annales acad. Jen. i. 286. The edict contains that explanation of the edict issued by Hadrian, which had arisen among the Christians. They believed that the expression adversus leges quidquam agere should not be referred to the exercises of Christian worship, and accordingly this edict explains it as an ἐπὶ τὴν ἡγεμονίαν Ῥωμαίων ἐγγεγραμμένον. From this, therefore, it followed that whoever accused a Christian as such, without being able to prove against him such a crime, was liable to punishment as a false accuser.

⁵ Modestinus (Dig. lib. xviii. Tit. 19, l. 30): Si quis aliquid fecerit, quo leves hominum animi superstitione numinis terrentur, Divus Marcus hujusmodi homines in insulam relegari rescripsit. Euseb. iv. 26: Τὸ γὰρ οὐδὲ πώποτε γενόμενον, νῦν διώκεται τὸ τῶν θεοσεβῶν γένος, καινοῖς ἐλαυνόμενον δόγμασι κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν· οἱ γὰρ ἄναιδεῖς σκοποφάνται καὶ τῶν ἄλλοτρίων ἐρασταί, τὴν ἐκ τῶν διαταγμάτων ἔχοντες ἀφορμὴν, φανερώς ληστεύουσι, νύκτωρ καὶ μεθήμεραν διαρπάζοντες τοὺς μηδὲν ἄδικούοντας.—εἰ δὲ καὶ παρὰ σοῦ μὴ εἴη ἡ βουλή αὕτη καὶ τὸ καινὸν τοῦτο δόγμα, —δέομέθ' ἡμῶν, μὴ περιδεῖν ἡμῶν ἐν τοιαύτῃ δημῶδει λεηλασίᾳ. Neander K. G. i. i. 184, is of opinion that this διάταγμα was certainly issued by the emperor, and is preserved in in the Acta Symphoniani apud Ruinart, p. 69. But the very inscription, Aurelius Imp. omnibus administratoribus suis atque rectoribus, throws suspicion on the law there given. The emperor could not open his proclamation with the name Aurelius. See Semisch, in the Theol. Studien u. Kritiken, 1835, iv. 934; administrators is not an official designation of the governors, and the emperor could not call them administratores suos. The emperor could have issued no edict against Christians before 177. See Semisch, l. c. S. 935, ff.

(167) fell a sacrifice,⁷ while Justin (166) became a martyr at Rome.⁸ But the recently formed churches at Lyons and Vienne (177)⁹ suffered most. The supposed miracle of the legio Melitina (κεραυνοβόλος, fulminatrix) (174) could have had the less influence on the emperor in favor of the Christians, since so many parties ascribed the merit of it to themselves.¹⁰ Under the barbarous Commodus (180–192), the Christians lived in peace.¹¹

¹⁰ The heathen writers ascribe the phenomenon partly to the conjurations of the Aegyptian Amnuphis (Dio Cassius in excerpt. Xiphilini, lxxi. 8. Suidas s. v. Ἰουλιανός), partly to the prayer of Marcus (Capitolinus in vita Marc. Aurel. c. 24. Themistius in Orat. xv. p. 191, ed. Harduini). The emperor himself expresses his opinion on a coin on which Jupiter is represented hurling his lightning against the barbarians lying on the ground (Eckhel Numism. iii. 61). Cf. Claudianus de sexto consulatu Honorii, v. 342. Similar occurrences are related of Alexander, Curt. iv. 7, 13; of Marius, Orosii Hist. v. 15; and Hosidius, Dio Cass. ix. § 9. The Christians, in like manner, ascribed the merit to themselves, cf. Claudius Apollinaris ap. Euseb. v. 5. Tertullianus ad Scapul. c. 4, and especially Apologet. c. 5: At nos e contrario edimus protectorem, si litterae M. Aurelii—requirantur, quibus illam Germanicam sitim, Christianorum forte militum praecognitionibus impletato imbri, discussam contestatur. Qui sicut non palam ab ejusmodi hominibus poenam dimovit, ita alio modo palam dispersit, adjecta etiam accusatoribus damnatione, et quidem tetriore. This writing, falsely ascribed to M. Aurelius, was afterward annexed to Justin Martyr's Apolog. i. In it all accusation of the Christians is forbidden under punishment of death by fire. The same thing is found in Edictum ad commune Asiae, note 4.

The Jewish Christians in Palestine were severely persecuted by Bar Cochab (§ 38), because they would not attach themselves to him;¹ and they must afterward also undergo the same oppression as the Jews generally, from whom they were not externally distinguished. These circumstances caused many of them, now that a church of heathen converts had been collected in Jerusalem, where they were forbidden to remain, to separate themselves entirely from Judaism, and to join the Christian community.² Still, however, the different parties of Jewish Christians³ continued down to the fourth century, and even later. In what way the Nazarenes and the Gentile Christians still looked upon one another as orthodox, is evident from the expla-

excepted, yet then the punishment of the slaves also was remitted, if they had made a well-grounded accusation (Cod. Justinian. lib. ix. tit. 2, l. 20). Comp. on all these laws, Gothofredus in comm. ad Cod. Theodos. lib. x. tit. 10, c. 17. J. A. Bachii D. Trajanus, sive de legibus Trajani Imp. Lips. 1747. 8. p. 73, ss. According to these principles of law, therefore, either Apollonius only, or his slave only, could have been put to death, but in no case both. Jerome does not say either that Severus was the slave of Apollonius, or that he was executed; and since Eusebius grounds this execution expressly on a supposititious law, it may have belonged only to the oriental tradition, which may have adduced this instance in support of the alleged law.

nations of Hegesippus on his journey to Rome, whither he arrived under bishop Anicetus (157–161).⁴ But since the Gentile Christians looked upon the Nazarenes as weak Christians, on account of their adherence to the Mosaic law,⁵ the connection between them became less and less intimate, the knowledge of their creed more indistinct; but at the same time, since they did not keep pace with the progressive development of doctrine in the catholic church, the actual difference between the two parties was greater, until at length Epiphanius (about 400) went so far as to include the Nazarenes in his list of heretics (Haer. xxix.).

Jahrg. 1830, ii. 374.*) According to Möhler (Vers. über d. Ursprung d. Gnosticismus, in his Schriften u. Aufsätzen, i. 403), Gnosis proceeded directly and entirely from Christianity, and from a practical motive, viz. from an exaggerated contempt of the world, which afterward endeavored to lay a speculative foundation for itself, and for this purpose applied all that was useful in the older systems of philosophy, theosophy, and mythology. According to Baur (Gnosis, S. 36), Gnosis, has borrowed its material substance from the religions which were given historically, its chief object being to inquire into and define the relation in which those historical elements stood to one another. Its first elements were formed among the Alexandrian Jews. Persian dualism, platonism, and Alexandrian philosophy of religion, have had their influence in originating the Christian Gnosis. It is an attempt to conceive the entire course of the world as a series of elements in which the absolute spirit becomes objective to himself, and is reconciled with himself, and has therefore nothing more similar than the Hegelian philosophy of religion. (Comp. this author's Krit. Studien über d. Begriff d. Gnosis, in the theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1837, iii. 511.) [An Inquiry into the Heresies of the apostolic age. By E. Burton, D.D. ³ Even according to Plato (Timaeus p. 41), only the divine in man was created by the highest God, who then leaves it to the τοῖς νέοις θεοῖς ἀθανάτω θνητὸν προσυφαινεῖν. So also Philo (de mundi opif. p. 16, de ling. conf. p. 346, de profug. p. 460), in speaking of the creation of man, makes the τὸ ἄλογον, τὸ θνητὸν ἡμῶν τῆς ψυχῆς μέρος be created by angels. the evil from an evil principle.⁵ Among the speculating Christians, these ideas obtained some hold from the Christian view taken of Christianity, Judaism, and heathenism, as the complete, the incomplete, and the evil. These three religions appeared as revelations of three corresponding principles, which were first perceived in their true light from the position of Christianity. Matter (ἔλλη) was the evil principle, which had revealed itself in heathenism, and was there conceived as having sometimes an undeveloped, sometimes a developed consciousness.⁶ The creation of the world belonged, according to Gen. i., to the God of the Jews, who, commonly regarded as the first of the seven planet-princes,⁷ proceeded from the highest God only at an infinite distance, and was as incapable of willing the perfect as of restraining the opposition of matter.⁸ On the other hand, Christ revealed the highest divinity, which, elevated above all being, had produced out of himself only the world of light, a world of blessed spirits. Human spirits, πνεύματα, are rays of light proceeding from this blessed spirit, whose object is consequently to free themselves from the fetters of the Demiurgus and matter, in order that they may return into the world of light. To effect this was the object of Christ, who was thought by most Gnostics to be one of the highest spirits of light. As the means of doing so, he left behind to his genuine disciples, the γνώσις. These general ideas were carried out in special ways in the separate schools, on which account they received different forms and modifications. Among the Alexandrian Gnostics, traces of the Platonic philosophy are most obvious; ⁹ among the Syrian, the influence of Parsism was superadded. Among the former, the emanation doctrine was pre-eminent; among the latter, dualism.¹⁰ In all the schools, however, there remained a wide field for the play of fancy in making vivid to the perception the internal relations of the world of light, the origin of the Demiurgus from it, and the creation of the world. For this purpose the Alexandrian Gnostics employed, but only as an insecure guide, a representation which was borrowed from the Platonic doctrine of ideas, that the visible world, with its germs of life, is only an image and impression of the world of light.¹¹ With this view the allegorical

⁸ Origen de Princ. l. iv. (Philocalia, ed. Spencer, p. 6): Οἱ τε ἀπὸ τῶν αἰρέσεων ἀναγνώσκοντες τό· πῦρ ἐκέκτανται ἐκ τοῦ θυμοῦ μου (Jer. xv. 14, then: Exod. xx. 5, 1 Reg. xv. 11, Es. xlv. 8, Am. iii. 6, Mich. i. 12, 1 Reg. xvi. 15), καὶ μυρία ὄσα τούτοις παραπλήσια, ἀπιστήσαι μὲν ὡς θεοῦ ταῖς γραφαῖς οὐ τετολμήκασι, πιστεύοντες δὲ

interpretation of holy scripture already current could be readily united, and employed in an arbitrary manner. Moreover, all the Gnostics appealed particularly to a secret doctrine handed down to them from the apostles. The principle of the gnostic morality, freedom from the fetters of the Demiurgus, and of matter, led to rigid abstinence, and a contemplative life. But when the pride of dogmatism among the later Gnostics had stifled the moral sense, a part of them fell upon the expedient of giving out the moral law to be only a work of the Demiurgus, for the sake of indulgence in sensual excesses.¹²

(CONTINUATION.) 1. ALEXANDRIAN Gnostics.

I. Basilides of Alexandria (about 125) represented seven δυνάμεις in particular, as emanating from the great original (θεὸς ἄρρητος), viz., νοῦς, λόγος, φρόνησις, σοφία, δύναμις, δικαιοσύνη, εἰρήνη. These composed the first kingdom of spirits (οὐρανός). From this emanated a second, and so on until there were 365 kingdoms of spirits, each of which was successively an imperfect impression of the preceding. The total idea of these spiritual kingdoms, i. e., God so far as he has revealed himself, in contradistinction from God in himself, he called 'Αβρασαῶξ.¹ The seven angels of the lowest heaven, and especially the first among them, ὁ ἄρχων, the God of the Jews, are the creators of the world. To effect the return of human spirits to the world of Good impressions of many Abraxas-gems are appended to Matter's Hist. du Gnosticisme; but many of them are not of Gnostic origin. See theol. Studien u. Kritiken, 1830. Heft. 2. S. 403, ff. 'Αβρασαῶξ appears as a powerful incantation-name of God, as well as the Jewish Jao, Sabaoth, Adonai, even in magical formulæ whose origin is obviously heathen-Egyptian, see C. J. C. light (ἀποκατάστασις), the νοῦς united itself with the man Jesus at his baptism. Hence the followers of Basilides celebrated the festival of the baptism as the epiphany (τὰ ἐπιφάνια, on the 11th Tybi, the 6th of January).² The man alone endured the sufferings, which, like all human sufferings, were expiations of guilt contracted, though in a former period of existence. The ἄρχων of Basilides is not evil, but only circumscribed; and therefore he subjects himself to the higher arrangement of the world, as soon as it is made known to him. The later followers of Basilides,³ on the contrary, conceived him to be an open adversary of the world of light, and thus rejected Judaism entirely; in which, however, Basilides could perceive types and preparations for something higher. In like manner, they received into their system the views of the Docetae, and contrived by sophisms to make their moral doctrine more loose. They rendered themselves particularly odious, by supposing that they could deny the crucified One; thus they escaped persecution. The party was still in existence about 400.⁴

II. Still more ingenious is the system of Valentinus, who came from Alexandria to Rome about 140, and died in Cyprus about 160.⁵ From the great original (according to him βυθός, προπάτωρ, προαρχή), with whom is the consciousness of himself (ἐννοια, σιγή) emanate in succession male and female *aeons*⁶ (νοῦς

² According to Jablonski de origine festi nativitatit Christi diss. ii. § 8, ss. (Opuscul. ed. to Water, iii. 358), they borrowed this day from the Egyptians, who celebrated on it the inventio Osiridis. This application of the Egyptian festival, however, rests on an unfortunate alteration of the text in Plut. de Isis et Osir. c. 39. The festival of the inventio Osiridis occurred in November. See Wytttenbach. animadvvers. in Plut. Moralia, ii. i. 225. Wieseler's Chronolog. Synopse der Evang. S. 136. In like manner Jablonski incorrectly infers from Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 340, that the followers of Basilides celebrated not only the baptism, but also the birth of Jesus, on the Epiphany.

³ The genuine system of Basilides is given in Clemens Alexandrinus; that of his later adherents in Irenaeus, see Neander gnost. Systeme, S. 31.

or μονογενής and ἀλήθεια, λόγος and ἀλήθεια, λόγος and ζωή, ἄνθρωπος and ἐκκλησία, &c.), so that 30 aeons together (distinguished into the ὀγδοάς, δεκάς and δωδεκάς) form the πλήρωμα.⁷ From the passionate striving of the last aeon, the σοφία, to unite with Bythos, itself, arises an untimely being (ἡ κάτω σοφία, ἐνθύμησις, Ἀχαμῶθ, i. e., Ἰουρρη), which, wandering about outside the pleroma, communicates the germ of life to matter, and forms the δημιουργός of psychical material, who immediately creates the world. In this three kinds of material are mixed—τὸ πνευματικόν, τὸ ψυχικόν, τὸ ὑλικόν. The goal of the course of the world is, that the two first should be separated from the last, and that τὸ πνευμ. should return to the pleroma, τὸ ψυχικόν into the τόπος μεσότητος, where the Achamoth now dwells. In the mean time, two new aeons, Christ and the Holy Spirit, had arisen, in order to restore the disturbed harmony in the pleroma; then there emanated from all the aeons, Jesus (σωτήρ), who, as future associate (σύζυγος) of the Achamoth, shall lead back into the pleroma this and the pneumatic natures. The σωτήρ united itself at the baptism with the psychical Messiah promised by the Demiurgus. Just so is the letter of the doctrines of Jesus for psychical men. On the other hand, the spirit introduced by the Soter or Saviour, is for the spiritual. These theosophic dreams were naturally capable of being molded in many different ways; and, accordingly, among Valentinus's disciples are found many departures from their teacher. The most important of his followers were Heracleon,⁸ Ptolemy,⁹ and Marcus.

III. To the system of Valentinus was nearly allied that of the Ophites,¹⁰ who, perhaps, existed as a party in Egypt even before the Valentinians.¹¹ Their pleroma is simpler than that of οὖν τὸν ἐνεστώτα εἰ τις ἐθέλει καλεῖν αἰῶνα, κἀγὼ συμβούλομαι. (I have believed it necessary to place the μὴ, which stands in the usual text before γένηται, before ὀρισμένῳ). Thus among the Gnostics αἰῶνες are developments of the Divine Being, who, as such, are elevated above the limitations of time.

⁸ Of his Commentary on John there are numerous fragments in the commentary of Origen.

Valentinus. From the Bythus emanate the first man, the second man or the son of man, the Holy Spirit. The last gives birth, by means of the first two, to the perfect masculine light-nature, the Christ, and the defective female σοφία, Ἀχαμῶθ, προύνεικος. The creator of the world (Ἰαλδαβαῶθ, probably אֱלֹהֵי הַחַיָּה, son of chaos), the first of the seven planet princes, is ambitious and malevolent, and is therefore involved in continual strife with his mother Sophia, who endeavors to deprive him of the pneumatic natures. The Ὀφιόμορφος, the ruler of Hyle, and the cause of all evil, is an image of him. The christology of the Ophites is altogether like that of Valentinus, with this difference, that Jesus is the psychical, Christ the pneumatic Messiah.¹² The Ophites were divided into various sects (ex. gr. Sethians, Cainites). One of them looked for the Sophia in the serpent of Genesis, and hence the name of the whole party. This continued the longest of all the Gnostic sects. (So late as 530 A.D. Justinian enacted laws against them, Cod. lib. i. tit. v. 1, 18, 19, 21).

IV. Carpocrates struck out an entirely different way.¹³ In his view, Jesus was a mere man, like Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle, who had set an example of the mode in which the Gnostic must free himself from the Demiurgi (ἄγγελοι κοσμοποιοί), and unite with the highest divinity (μονάς). As the Carpocratians had portraits of those Grecian philosophers and of Jesus in their sanctuaries, so they built in Cephallenia a temple to Epiphanes,¹⁴ a youth seventeen years old, the son of

(CONTINUATION.) 2. SYRIAN GnostICS.

The Syrian Gnostics developed the doctrine of dualism more decidedly than the Egyptian, to which the neighborhood of Persia may have largely contributed. With this was connected their fanatical asceticism, in which they exceeded the Egyptians, and their Docetic views.¹ Saturninus in Antioch, a cotemporary of Basilides, taught that by the original cause (πατήρ ἄγρωστος) the world of spirits was created by successive steps, and placed in the lowest gradation the spirits of the seven planets (ἄγγελοι κοσμοκράτορες). In opposition to them stood the evil principle (ὁ Σατανᾶς), who set in antagonism to the race of men of light animated by the highest divinity, a race of evil men, so that both kinds of men are continued beside one another. In order to avoid all contact with the evil principle, the followers of Saturninus abstained from marriage and the eating of flesh. The wide diffusion of the Gnostic opinions in Syria and the countries lying eastward of it may be seen in the case of Bardesanes in Edessa (about 172),² who, although he believed ¹⁶ The inscriptions which, as pretended, were found in Cyrene, and brought to Malta, were regarded at first as Carpocratian (cf. G. Gesenius, l. c.), but were afterward shown to be recent fabrications, like many other spurious productions, particularly Eumali Cyrenaiçi Hist. Libycae, lib. vi., all of which were made known by the Marquis Fortia d'Urban in Avignon. They were meant to confirm the hypotheses which this person had formerly put forth respecting an island, Atlantis, in the Mediterranean Sea, which was sunk at the flood, in which island a St. Simonian community of goods and wives is said to have prevailed. See Boeckh preface to the Berlin Lectiōnskataloge, Easter, 1832. Gesenius in the Hallische A. L. Z. 1835, August, S. 462. When M. J. R. Paris. 1827. 4. p. 128, believed that he had found in a pit at Lameloudèh, in Cyrenaica, traces referring to a place where the Carpocratians assembled, he was led astray by the opinions at first pronounced on those inscriptions. A cross with a serpent is a common Christian symbol, according to John iii. 14; and Catholic Christians may as well have used that pit as a place of meeting, like those at Massakhit, p. 114.

Cotemporary with him was the Assyrian Tatian,³ who had been a disciple of Justin Martyr, but after his death had returned to his native land, and founded there a Gnostic sect, which was chiefly distinguished by abstinence (Ἐγκρατίται, Ὑδροπαραστάται, Aquariv),⁴ and continued till after the fourth century.

(CONTINUATION.) 3. MARCION AND HIS SCHOOL.¹

The Gnosis of Marcion, the son of a bishop of Sinope, who attached himself to the Syrian Cerdo at Rome (between 140 and 150), and developed there a system of his own, has a character quite peculiar. He assumed three moral principles (ἀρχαί), viz., the θεὸς ἀγαθός, the δημιουργὸς δίκαιος, and the ὕλη (ὁ πόνηρός, ὁ διάβολος). To free men—who had only to expect from praep. Evang. vi. 10, has preserved a fragment (republished in Alexandri Aphrodisiensis, Ammonii, Plotini, Bardesanis et Gemisti Plethonis de fato quae supersunt graece, rec. et notas adjecit J. C. Orellius. Turici. 1824. 8. p. 202, ss.). He gained over many adherents by his hymns. The fifty-six hymns of Ephraem Syrus against heretics are important for the knowledge of his system. Cf. ⁴ These names, as well as the appellation Docetae, certainly designate a heresy, which was common to many parties; but they appear to have been specially given to the followers of Tatian, because a particular sect-name for them does not appear.

the Demiurgus, according to the principles of strict justice, either condemnation or at most a limited happiness—to free them, I say, from such a yoke, Christ suddenly descended into Capernaum with the appearance of a body, and proclaimed to men the good deity hitherto unknown. Those who believe in Christ, and lead a new, holy life, from love to the good deity, will be blessed with happiness in his heavenly kingdom, while others are left to the strict justice of the Demiurgus. Marcion required of the perfect Christians a strictly ascetic life, abstinence from marriage, avoidance of all earthly pleasures, and restriction to a few simple articles of diet. But all the disciples of this school were not “faithful” (fideles); many continued catechumens for a long time. Marcion’s gospel (εὐαγγέλιον) was that of Luke, mutilated according to his system; in addition to which, he used ten of the Pauline epistles (ὁ ἀπόστολος), not, however, without corruption.² In a work entitled “Antitheses,” he endeavored to prove the different characters of Judaism and Christianity, by means of positions from both set over against one another.

Respecting metaphysical relations, as far as they do not affect the moral interests of men, no declarations are found in Marcion. His disciples, therefore, borrowed such principles partly from the Syrian Gnostics, partly, like Apelles, from the Valentinians, so that the school of Marcion was afterward divided into many branches.³

² The adulteration was first doubted by J. S. Semler in his paraphrasis epist. ad Galatas. Hal. 1779. 8. Prolegom. § 2, 3. Then by Chr. F. J. Loeffler Diss., qua Marcionem Pauli epistolae et Lucae evangel. adulterasse dubitatur Traj. ad. Viadr. 1788. 4 (reprinted in the Commentatt. theol. coll. a Kuinoel et Ruperti, vol. i. p. 180, ss.). On this the hypothesis was built upon by H. Corodi, J. G. Eichhorn, and J. E. Ch. Schmidt. Of another opinion is Dr. Gratz krit. Untersuchung über Marcion’s Evangel. Tübing. 1818. 8. Comp. especially Hahn’s Evang. Marcion’s, &c. Ejusd. Diss. de canone Marcionis. P. i. Regiom. 1824. 4. Ejusd. Evang. Marcionis ex auctoritate vett. monumentorum descriptum, in J. C. ³ Even Rhodon (ap. Euseb. v. 13) says: Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ παρ’ ἑαυτοῖς ἀσύμφοροι γεγόνασιν, ἀπὸ γὰρ τῆς τούτων ἀγέλης Ἀπελλῆς μὲν—μίαν ἀρχὴν ὁμολογεῖ—ἔτεροι δὲ, καθὼς καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ ναυτῆς Μαρκίων, δύο ἀρχὰς εἰσηγοῦνται—ἄλλοι δὲ πάλιν ὑπ’ αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τὸ χεῖρον ἐξοκειλαντες, οὐ μόνον δύο, ἀλλὰ καὶ τρεῖς ὑποτίθενται φύσεις. Comp. A. I. Z. l. c. S. 226, ff. The thoroughly practical tendency of the true Marcionites is expressed particularly in what Apelles said to Rhodon (l. c.): Μὴ δεῖν ὄλως ἐξετάζειν τὸν λόγον, ἀλλ’ ἕκαστον ὡς πεπίστευκε διαμένειν. σωθῆσεσθαι γὰρ τοὺς ἐπὶ τὸν ἑστανρωμένον ἠλπικώτας ἀπεφαίνετο, μόνον ἔν ἐν ἔργοις ἀγαθοῖς εὐρίσκονται. τὸ δὲ πάντων ἠσαφέστατον ἐδογματιζέτο αὐτῷ πρᾶγμα—τὸ περὶ τοῦ θεοῦ. Thus it is not incredible that, as Tertullian, de Praescr. c. 30, relates, Marcion at the close of his life wished to return to the catholic Church. He may have perceived that the practical interests of Christianity were more

As a peculiar impress is stamped on Christianity in all countries by the national character, so also in Phrygia it could not but experience the influence of the popular tendency to a sensuous, enthusiastic worship of deity. The doctrines of supernatural gifts of the Spirit,¹ the renunciation of the earthly, and the millennial reign, were susceptible of such development.² These subjects appear to have been peculiar favorites in Phrygia very early,³ where the oppression of persecution, and opposition to the speculations of the Gnostics, may have accelerated their one-sided development. Accordingly, Montanus,⁴ at Pepuza (about 150),⁵ in an ecstatic state,⁶ began to announce, that the injured than promoted by his opposition, and that they had a sufficient support even in the catholic Church.

² As far as Montanism proceeded out of these doctrines, Schwieger designates it as a development of Ebionitism, which had been prevalent up to that time in the church; but he arbitrarily understands by Ebionitism the entire Jewish basis of Christianity.

⁴ According to Didymus de Trin. lib. iii. cap. penult., he had formerly been ἱερεὺς εἰδώλου. Jerome Ep. 27 ad Marcellam calls him abscissum et semivirum. He appears accordingly to have been a priest of Cybele, a circumstance which must have become of importance in respect to his conception of Christianity. Schwieger, S. 243, would have Montanus to be a mythic personage, but younger contemporaries, the anonymous writer in Euseb. v. 17, and Apollonius, l. c. v. 18, mention him.

Paraclete had imparted itself to him for the purpose of giving the church its manly perfection. Two fanatical women, Maximilla and Priscilla, attached themselves to him as prophetesses; and thus a party was formed, the adherents of which, vainly presuming that they alone possessed the last revelations of the Spirit,⁷ as πνευματικοί, full of spiritual arrogance, looked down upon other Christians as ψυχικοί. These new prophets did not wish to alter the received creed, but to confirm it anew.⁸ On the other hand they prescribed new and rigorous fasts,⁹ forbade second marriage, attributed extraordinary value to celibacy and martyrdom, manifested profound contempt for every thing earthly, and taught that incontinence, murder, and idolatry, though they did not exclude from the grace of God (Tertullian de pudic. c. 3), shut a person out forever from the church.¹⁰ At the same time, they were not afraid to proclaim latter (Legat. p. 9) compares them in the same sense to a flute (Schwegler, S. 100). In like manner the Holy Spirit, through Montanus, describes the ecstacy of the Montanist prophets, apud Epiphani. Haer. xlvi. 4: Ἴδοὺ ἄνθρωπος ὡσεὶ λύρα, καὶ ὡ ἵπταται ὡσεὶ πλῆκτρον· ὁ ἄνθρωπος κοιμᾶται, καὶ ὡ γρηγορῶ· ἰδοὺ κύριός ἐστιν ὁ ἐξιστάνων καρδίας ἀνθρώπων, καὶ δίδου καρδίας ἀνθρώποις. Tertullian calls the ecstasis which he explains by amentia (lib. de anima c. 11) Sancti Spiritus vis, operatrix prophetiae. That which he describes bears a striking resemblance to magnetic clairvoyance (l. c. c. 9): Est hodie soror apud nos revelationum charismata sortita, quas in Ecclesia inter dominica solemnia per ecstasin in spiritu patitur, conversatur cum angelis, aliquando etiam cum Domino, et videt et audit sacramenta, et quorundam corda dinoscit, et medicinas desiderantibus submittit, &c. A similarity also to the speaking with tongues among the Corinthians (1 Cor. xiv.) can not be noticed. Schwegler, S. 83.

⁷ The Montanists had not an uninterrupted series of prophets. The Anon. ap. Euseb. v. 17, wrote in the 14th year after the death of Maximilla, and says that since then none had boasted of the gift of prophecy. But in the time of Tertullian there was again a Montanist prophetess in Africa, see note 6.

⁹ At first there were two yearly, each one continuing a week, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday (Tertullian de jejun. c. 15) afterward three (Hieron. Ep. 27 ad Marcellam), in case the third be not the usual ecclesiastical quadragesimal fast, as Valesius ad Euseb. v. 18, and Schwegler suppose, and which, therefore, Tertullian has not reckoned.

¹⁰ Tertull. de virginibus velandis c. 1: Regula quidem fidei una omnino est, sola immobilis, et irreformabilis.—Caetera jam disciplinae et conversationis admittunt novitatem correctionis:—cum propterea Paracletum miserit Dominus, ut, quoniam humana mediocritas omnia semel capere non poterat, paulatim diregeretur et ordinaretur et ad perfectum perduceretur disciplina ab illo vicario Dei Spiritu Sancto. From John xvi. he draws the conclusion that the administratio Paracleti is, quod disciplina dirigitur, quod scripturae revelantur, quod intellectus reformatur, quod ad meliora proficitur. Just as in nature every thing ripens gradually, sic et justitia—primo fuit in rudimentis, natura deum metuens. Dehinc per legem et prophetas promovit in infantiam. Dehinc per Evangelium effebuit in juventutem. Nunc per Paracletum componitur in maturitatem. aloud the end of the world, and the millennial reign as near at hand.¹¹ By this means they excited first of all dislike and opposition in their vicinity. Their opponents were satisfied for the most part with disputing their prophetic gift as not genuine;¹² and on this ground alone they were excluded from communion by the churches of Asia Minor.¹³ Some, however, led on by opposition to farther inquiry, began to reject even the support which Montanism had in the doctrines of the church at that time.¹⁴ In this respect, those afterward called Alogi went

¹² Eusebius, iv. 27, and v. 16-19, mentions the polemic writings of Claudius Apollinaris, Miltiades, an anonymous person (who, according to Jerome, Cat. c. 37 and 39, was Rhodon; by several modern authors incorrectly supposed to be Asterius Urbanus, cf. Wernsdorf de Montanistis, p. 4), Apollonius, and Serapion, and gives extracts from the last three.—The ἔκστασις of the Montanist prophets gave special offense. It was asserted in opposition that all ἔκστασις is an inspiration proceeding from demons, cf. Anonymus apud Euseb. v. 16, 3, and Miltiadis σύγγραμμα περὶ τοῦ μὴ δεῖν προφήτην ἐν ἔκστασει λαλεῖν (Euseb. v. 17, 1). Tertull. adv. Marcion. iv. c. 22: Defendimus, in causa novae prophetiae, gratiae ecstasium, id est amentiam, convenire. In spiritu enim homo constitutus, praesertim cum gloriam Dei conspicit, vel cum per ipsum Deus loquitur, necesse est excidat sensu, obumbratus scilicet virtute divina: de quo inter nos et Psychicos quaestio est. According to Jerome, Cat. c. 53, Tertullian wrote de ecstasi libros vi.

farthest, who not only denied the continuance of charismata in the church, and millenarianism, but rejected the Apocalypse, and even the gospel of John.¹⁵

This very mode of opposition, against which, even in Asia Minor, Melito, bishop of Sardis, presented himself as an antagonist,¹⁶ contributed largely, perhaps, to procure Montanism many friends in the west.¹⁷ The western churches never declared themselves exclusively in favor of any of the conflicting parties in Asia;¹⁸ and thus the principles of the Montanists, which were, after all, only the carrying out of orthodox doctrines, could be diffused there,¹⁹ without the necessity of a Montanist party separating itself from the rest of the church.

The Montanists in Asia, who had their peculiar ecclesiastical

¹⁵ Compare especially the above cited work of Merkel, whom also Olshausen (Aechtheit der vier canon. Evang. S. 254, ff.) follows. Irenaeus, iii. c. 11 : Alii vero, ut donum Spiritus frustrentur, quod in novissimis temporibus secundum placitum patris effusum est in humanum genus illam speciem non admittunt, quae est secundum Joannis evangelium, in qua Paracletum se missurum Dominus promisit ; sed simul et evangelium et propheticum repellunt Spiritum. Infelices vere, qui pseudoprophetae [leg. pseudoprophetas] quidem esse volunt, prophetiae vero gratiam ab ecclesia repellunt ; similia patientes his, qui propter eos, qui in hypocrisi veniunt, etiam a fratrum communicatione se abstinere. Datur autem intelligi, quod hujusmodi neque apostolum Paulum recipiant. In ea enim epistola, quae est ad Corinthios, de prophetis charismatibus diligenter locutus est, et seipsum viros et mulieres prophetantes. Per haec igitur omnia peccantes in Spiritum Dei, in irremissibile incidunt peccatum. The name Ἄλογοι appears first in Epiphanius Haer. li. adv. Alogos, comp. especially the passage cap. 33, according to the following correction of the text (so Merkel, S. 35, ff.) : Ἐνοικησάντων γὰρ τούτων ἐκέισε (εἰς Θνάτειρα) καὶ τῶν κατὰ Φρύγας, [οἱ μὲν] δίκην λύκων ἀρπαζάντων τὰς διανοίας τῶν ἀκεραίων πίστων, μετήνεγκαν τὴν πᾶσαν πόλιν εἰς τὴν αὐτῶν αἵρεσιν· οἱ δὲ ἀρνούμενοι τὴν Ἀποκάλυψιν, τοῦ λόγου τούτου εἰς ἀνατροπὴν, κατ' ἐκείνου καιροῦ ἐστρατεύοντο.

constitution,²⁰ continued down to the tenth century.²¹ Besides their usual names, Montanistae, Cataphryges (οἱ κατὰ Φρύγας), other appellations were applied to them, some of which may have referred to particular sections, while others were mere names of derision.²²

THIRD CHAPTER.

INTERNAL HISTORY OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The internal development of the orthodox church depended in a great degree on its external relations, the persecution of the heathen, and the attacks of heretics. Christian literature had been confined till now solely to didactic and admonitory letters, seven of which in this period also, proceeded from the pious bishop of Corinth, Dionysius;¹ but now it developed itself in other directions, particularly in defending Christianity against the heathen, and in combating heretics. It was corrupted, however, by a mass of spurious writings. Those external relations could not be without an influence on the formation of doctrines, since they led of necessity to the exhibition and support of particular dogmas. In like manner, ecclesiastical usages received from them a more definite character. At the same time, it was a circumstance of great importance, that several Platonic philosophers had now come over to Christianity, by means of whom Platonism continued to gain more friends among the Christians. Besides, the Greek language was almost the only ecclesiastical tongue.² Although several Latin translations of the Bible were made,³ yet the writers even of the western church wrote in Greek. But Christian ideas had a freshness of life only in the people who spoke the language of the New Testament. In the west, they merely received what the east produced.

The following are mere corruptions of words : Tascodrocitae (Cod. Theod. xvi. 5, 10), Ascodrogitae (Philastr. c. 75), Ascodrogi (Theodos. jun. novella iii. in fine), Ascodrutae, Ascodrupitae, (which, however, are enumerated among the Marcosians by Theodoret Haer. fab. comp. i. 10), Ascitae (Augustin de Haer. 62), cf. Gothofredus ad novellam iii. Theodosii jun. From such corrupted names, however, new heresies have been etymologically deduced.

APOLOGIES FOR CHRISTIANITY AGAINST HEATHEN AND JEWS.

J. A. Fabricii Delectus argumentorum et syllabus scriptorum, qui veritatem relig. christ. asseruerunt. Hamb. 1725. 4. H. G. Tzschirner's Geschichte der Apogetik. Leipz. Th. 1. 1805. 8. The same author's Fall des Heidenthums, i. 202, ff. A list of apologetic works may be found in Danz de Eusebio Caes. p. 93, ss.—The best edition of all the apologists is given by Prudentius Maranus. Paris. 1742. fol.

The pressure of circumstances gave rise at this time to various apologies for Christianity, which are supposed in part to have been presented to emperors;¹ the first to Hadrian (126), in Athens, by Quadratus and Aristides (Euseb. iv. 3; Hieron. Catal. 19, 20).² The first apology of Justin Martyr († 166)³

² At this period originated the custom of the Roman Church, which continued down to the middle ages, of requiring those who were to be baptized to recite the creed first in Greek then in Latin. Cf. Edm. Martene de antiquis eccl. ritibus, cd. 2, t. i. p. 88; A. Gavanti Thesaurus sacr. rituum ed. G. M. Meratus, t. i. p. 42, and the other works quoted in Walchii Biblioth. symbol. vetus, p. 57.

³ According to Dr. A. Stieren in Illgen's Zeitschr. für d. hist. Theol. 1842, i. 21, the year is addressed to Antoninus Pius (138 or 139), the second and smaller belongs, according to the usual opinion, to Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus (161-166).⁴ The other apologetic writings designed for the heathen, which are attributed to him, are of more doubtful origin.⁵ To Marcus Aurelius, Athenagoras addressed his πρεσβεία περὶ Χριστιανῶν;⁶ and Melito, bishop of Sardis,⁷ and Claudius Apollinaris, bishop of Hierapolis,⁸ their apologies since lost (Euseb. iv. 26; Hieron. Cat. 24, 26). At the same time appeared the apology of Miltiades (Euseb. v. 17; Hieron. Cat. 39); of Theophilus, bishop of Antioch, in three books to Autolycus;⁹ and of Tatian, the λόγος πρὸς Ἕλληνας.¹⁰ On the other hand, the epistle to Diognetus is older.¹¹ Per-of Justin's death was 161. On the credibility of the ancient narrative of Justin's death, see Semisch Justin d. M. i. 16.

⁴ So according to Pagi, Tillemont, Mosheim, and Semisch. On the other hand, according to Valesius, Longuerue, and Neander (K. G. i. ii. 1144), it was also written under Antoninus Pius. F. Chr. Boll, in Illgen's Zeitschrift, 1842, iii. 3, assumes that both apologies made up originally one whole, which may have been written about 150. Apologiam primam ed. J. E. Grabe. Oxon. 1700, alteram H. Hutchin. ib. 1703, utramque C. Gu. Thalemann. Lips. 1755. J. W. J. Braunius. Bonnae. 1830. 8. In the older editions before Grabe the smaller apology is incorrectly placed first. Comp. Justin d. ⁵ The λόγος παραινετικός πρὸς Ἕλληνας was first denied to be Justin Martyr's by Oudinus, lately by Herbig (comm. de scriptis, quae sub nomine Justinii phil. et mart. circumferuntur. Vratisl. 1833), Arendt (krit. Untersuchungen über die Schriften Just. d. M. in the Tübinger theol. Quartalschr. 1834, ii. 256), and Moehler (Patrologie, i. 224), but it is defended by Semisch, i. 105. The λόγος πρὸς Ἕλληνας is pronounced unauthentic by most writers, even by Semisch, i. 163. On the fragment περὶ ἀναστάσεως opinions are divided. Herbig, l. c. p. 74, endeavors at great length to prove the spuriousness; Semisch, i. 146, the genuineness of it. There is also great difference of sentiment respecting the work περὶ μοναρχίας. Herbig, p. 69 and Semisch, i. 167, regard it as spurious. In the mean time, however, all these works belong to this period.

The most of them belong to Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea in the fourth century; but many might be referred even to the bishop of Hierapolis. See Schwegler's Montanismus, S. 203.

haps also M. Minucius Felix, a lawyer in Rome, who defended Christianity in a dialogue called Octavius,¹² belongs to the age of Marcus Aurelius, and is in this view the oldest Latin apologist. On the contrary, the διασυρμὸς τῶν ἔξω φιλοσόφων of Hermias must be placed in a later period.¹³

All these defenders aim principally to show the groundlessness of the accusations adduced against Christianity,¹⁴ the reasonableness of it contrasted with the absurdity and immorality of heathenism, and the nothingness of the heathen deities.¹⁵ While they refer to the fact that Christianity agrees with the wisest philosophers, they represent the latter again as having drawn their wisdom from the Old Testament. In proving the divine origin of Christianity, they attach special value to the predictions of the Old Testament, the miracles of Jesus and the apostles, the miraculous powers continuing among Christians,¹⁶

The earlier more prevailing opinion that Minucius belongs to the interval between Tertullian and Cyprian, 220–230, rested particularly on the testimony of Jerome, who Catal. cap. 53, says: Tertullianus presbyter nunc demum primus post Victorem et Apollonium Latinorum ponitur; and first mentions Minucius in cap. 58. On the other hand, Blondell (de l'Euchariste, p. 119), Dallaeus (against whom see Bayle's Dictionn. s. v. Fronton), J. D. ab Hoven (in Lindner's second edition, p. 261), Oelrichs (de scriptt. eccl. lat., p. 24) place him, from internal grounds, and because, cap. 9, Fronto (see § 49, note 2) is mentioned as still living, in the age of Marcus Aurelius. This view has been lately adopted by Kestner (Agape, S. 356), H. Meirer (comm. de Minucio Felice, Turici. 1824. 8), Russwurm, and v. Muralt l. c., and even Tzschirner (Fall des Heidenthums, i. 219), who had formerly defended the old opinion in the Geschichte der Apologetik, i. 279.

the rapid spread of Christianity, and the steadfastness of its followers in times of persecution. They demand, in fine, the same protection for Christians, which other philosophical sects enjoyed.

In defense of Christianity against Judaism, there appeared at this period two dialogues; under Hadrian the ἀντιλογία Παπίσκου καὶ Ἰάσονος, which was afterward, but certainly without reason, ascribed to Aristo of Pella;¹⁷ and διάλογος πρὸς Τρύφωνα Ἰουδαίου, of Justin Martyr.¹⁸

COMBATING OF HERETICS—CATHOLIC CHURCH—CANON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

The writings of the earlier opponents of heretics, the work of Justin Martyr against all heresies;¹ the books of Agrippa Castor (about 135), who wrote against Basilides; of Justin Martyr, Theophilus of Antioch, Rhodon, Philip bishop of Gortyna, and of Modestus, who all wrote against Marcion; of Miltiades, Claudius Apollinaris, Serapion bishop of Antioch, and Apollo-nius, who all wrote against the Montanists, have been lost, except a few fragments. On the other hand, we still possess the work of Irenaeus (bishop of Lyons, 177-202), ἔλεγχος καὶ ἀνα-

The discordant opinions of the philosophical schools (αἵρέσεις), which were to have been removed by the one, certain, Christian truth, had again appeared within the province of Christianity at this period, in the different parties. The ecclesiastical idea of αἵρεσις was formed from thence chiefly by the characteristics of separation from the unity implied in the true church, and of insecure subjective presumption;³ but since Christian truth appeared not likely to be mistaken without blame attaching to the individuals, it was generally believed that the sources of the heresies must be looked for in nothing else than self-will, pride, ambition, desire of rule, and want of love.⁴ To the opposition presented to unbelievers, in which alone the church had been engaged till the present time,⁵ there was now added the other opposition directed against heretics. By this means the idea of the church being farther developed, there arose the expression ἐκκλησία καθολικὴ,⁶ i. e., the only

The writers against heresies certainly went into the peculiar doctrines of the heretics, for the purpose of refuting them; but they particularly combated their pretensions in alleging that their doctrine was the genuine doctrine of Christ and the apostles, by proving, from the agreement of the apostolic churches, that the doctrine of the apostles had been preserved without alteration in the catholic church.¹⁰ The common interest which was felt against heretics, and the feeling of oneness, strengthened by the idea of a catholic church, led to a closer union, of which the apostolic churches were regarded as a center, though without the existence of an external subordination among them.

As the heretics appealed to apostolic traditions, and even used pretended apostolic writings in justification of their sentiments, the attention of catholic Christians was by this means more directed to the genuine writings of the apostles scattered among them. The apostolic epistles had always been read in the places to which they were addressed, and in the neighboring congregations; but there was no universally received collection of the necesse est omnem convenire ecclesiam, hoc est, eos qui sunt undique fideles, in qua semper ab his, qui sunt undique, conservata est ea, quae est ab apostolis, traditio. Irenaeus wishes to prove that the doctrine of the catholic Church is apostolic, preserved by the successors of the bishops ordained by the apostles. Since it is too prolix to point out this connection of the apostles with all churches, he wishes to limit his proof to the Church of Rome alone, and finally to represent the doctrine of the Roman Church as necessarily agreeing with that of the whole remaining church. Necesse est (ἀνάγκη) must not be confounded with oportet (δεῖ): the former expresses a natural necessity, the latter an obligation, duty. Potentior is ἰκανώτερος (cf. iii. 3, 3: potentissimas literas, ἰκανωτάτην γραφήν), principalitas probably πρωτεία (iv. 38, 3: πρωτεύει μὲν ἐν πᾶσιν ὁ θεός, principalitatem quidem habebit in omnibus Deus). Accordingly the Greek text may have been: πρὸς ταύτην γὰρ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν διὰ τὴν ἰκανωτέραν πρωτείαν ἀνάγκη πᾶσαν συμβαίνειν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τοὺς πανταχόθεν πιστοὺς, ἐν ᾗ μετ' οἷς πανταχόθεν συντηρήται ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων παράδοσις. "For with this church must the whole church, i. e., the believers of every place, agree, of course, on account of its more important pre-eminence." A pre-eminence belonged to all apostolic churches; to the Roman Church a more important pre-eminence, on account of its greatness, and its having been founded by the two most distinguished apostles. In the rest of the sentence, I conjecture that the Latin translator was mistaken. Supposing the Greek text to have stood as above, the translator took the words οἷς πανταχόθεν for ὑπὸ τῶν παντ. which was certainly grammatically correct; "in which the apostolic tradition was always preserved by believers from all places," referring to the many foreigners who constantly belonged to the Roman community, and who afforded a warrant for the uninterrupted agreement of the Roman tradition with that of the rest of the church. But Irenæus meant to say: "in which the apostolic tradition has been always preserved in fellowship with the believers of all places." Hence he adduces, in what follows, Clement's epistle to the Corinthians, and Polycarp's abode at Rome, as proofs of this uninterrupted fellowship. Many other explanations may be seen in Grabe and Massuet on the passage. Paulus, in Sophronizon, Heft 3. 1819. S. 141, ff. On the other side, Th. Katerkamp über den Primat. d. Apost. Petrus u. s. Thiersch in the Theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1842, ii. 525. J. Wolff in Rudelbach's and Guerike's Zeitschrift für d. luther. Kirche, 1842, iv. 7. Thiersch reads πᾶσαν ἐκκλησίαν, and refers to it the ἐν ᾗ in the sense: unaquaeque alia ecclesia idem testabitur de traditione apostolorum, dummodo in ea a fidelibus, cujusvis sint loci, pure conservata sit tradita ab apostolis veritas. On the contrary, Neander, K. G. i. i. 349, says that the expression, qui undique sunt fideles, is not synonymous with omnis ecclesia, if the latter mean "every single church," but only if it mean "every church," i. e., all churches: and in the single churches the tradition was not preserved ab his qui sunt undique.

evangelical narratives, and the existing ones (comprehending, besides our canonical gospels, also the gospel of the Hebrews, that of the Egyptians, &c.) served in their spheres only for private use. After the churches had now come into closer connection, they communicated to one another, in their common interest against heretics, the genuine apostolic writings; and thus the canon began to be formed, in the first half of the second century, in two parts (τὸ Εὐαγγέλιον or τὸ Εὐαγγελικόν, and ὁ Ἀπόστολος or τὸ Ἀποστολικόν), although in the different congregations there continued to be other writings, which were valued almost, if not altogether, as much as those which were universally received (ὁμολογούμενα, ἐνδιάθηκα).¹¹

Instigated by the bold speculation of the Gnostics, which sought to lay an entirely foreign basis under Christianity, the catholic Christians began to establish as the unalterable regula fidei,¹² that summary of doctrine which could be shown, as well in the consciousness of all Christian communities, as also in the apostolic writings, to be the essential basis of Christianity, and which must remain untouched by, and be necessarily laid at the foundation of, every speculation. Accordingly, even the originally simple statements of the baptismal confession (πίστις, σύμβολον)¹³ were secured by additions against misunderstandings and perversions; but as the different wants of the church required this or the other doctrine to be made more clear, or to be emphatically exhibited, so the form of the baptismal confession became longer or shorter in different places.¹⁴

DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINES—SPURIOUS WRITINGS.

A speculative treatment of Christian doctrine was generally indispensable, if Christianity was to be accessible to the philosophical culture of the times, and it was rendered unavoidable by the progress of the Gnostics. It could only proceed from Platonism, which of all philosophical systems stood the nearest to Christianity.¹ While many Platonic philosophers were brought over to Christianity by this internal relation, they received the latter as the most perfect philosophy,² and retained, with their philosophical mantle,³ their philosophical turn of mind also. They set out with these positions, both that the Logos has constantly communicated to men the seeds of truth,⁴ and that the truth taught by Plato was derived from Moses and the prophets.⁵ The arbitrary mode of interpretation then current furnished them with the means of proving their views even from numerous passages of the Old Testament, which they could use, indeed, only in the Septuagint version.⁶ Thus, then, they overvalued even the actual agreement of Plato with Christianity,⁷ and believed that they found many a Platonic idea in the latter, which in reality they themselves had first introduced into it.⁸ The Christian philosophers of this time with which we are acquainted are Aristides, Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Tatian, Pantaenus (§ 39), and Maximus (about 196).⁹ The questions with which they were chiefly occupied were the same as those the Gnostics set out with, respecting the origin of evil, and its overthrow by Christ, but especially regarding the divine in Christ.¹⁰ They found the latter designated by John as the λόγος, and in the development of this idea took Philo for their guide; since, like him, they thought the Logos was met with every where in the Old Testament.¹¹ Most difficult were the

⁵ So the Jews had already asserted, Josephus contra Apion, ii. 8; and Aristobulus apud Clemens Alex. Strom. i. p. 410, according to whom Plato is said to have employed even the Old Testament in an ancient version. The heathen philosopher Numenius (l. c.) goes so far as to say: Τί ἐστι Πλάτων, ἢ Μωσῆς ἀπικρίζων. The fathers derived all that was true and good in the Greek poets and philosophers from Moses and the prophets, Justin Apolog. i. 44, ii. 13. Coh. ad Græcos, c. 14. Theoph. ad Autol. ii. 37. Because they found most truth in Plato, they represented him especially as drawing from this source. Hence he is called in Clemens Alex. Paed. ii. p. 224, ὁ ἐκ Μωσέως φιλόσοφος, Strom. i. p.

¹¹ So particularly Proverbs viii. 22, ss., but also Psalm xxxiii. 6; xlv. 1; civ. 24. The doctrine that God created the world by the Logos was also naturally sought for in the Mosiac account of creation, where it was found: Gen. i. 1, ἐν ἀρχῇ is equivalent to διὰ τῆς ἀρχῆς, and ἀρχῆ is, according to Proverbs viii. 22, ἡ σοφία or ὁ λόγος. Theophil. ad Autol. ii. 10, 13. Tatian. Apol. c. 7. Tertull. adv. Hermog. c. 20. This explanation was repeated in later times by Origenes, Hom. 1, in Gen., Basiliius, Hom. 1, in Hexaëmeron, Augustinus de Genesi lib. i. Others believed that they might venture to presuppose the existence of that doctrine as still more obviously contained in the Hebrew original, which they did not know. According to the Alteratio Iasonis et Papisci, the original expressed questions respecting the essence of the Logos in relation to the Father, and his agency in relation to that of the Holy Spirit. With regard to the former point, there were several who did not assume a personal distinction of the Logos from the Father.¹² But the view was more generally adopted, that he was a divine person, less than the Father, and produced out of his essence according to the will of the latter.¹³ Agreeably to both views, the Logos was the God working all in the finite, so that no room appeared to be left for the agency of the Holy Spirit. Accordingly, the doctrine of the Holy Spirit still remained entirely undeveloped.¹⁴ These speculations, whose object was to this idea, in filio fecit Deus coelum et terram (see above § 50, note 17); or as others believe (Tertull. adv. Praxeam c. 5), in principio Deus fecit filium.

The Manichaeans believed this latter theory confirmed by the revelation of the Paraclete, l. c. c. ii. 8, 15. The Alogi, on the contrary, rejected the doctrine of the Logos. Epiphanius Haer. li. L. fathom the depths of the Godhead, might certainly at first wound the feelings of many, and Irenaeus openly expresses his disapprobation of the inconsiderate curiosity they manifest;¹⁵ but, on the other hand, ecclesiastical orthodoxy could still endure diversities in doctrine and customs, which did not injure the religious basis of Christianity.¹⁶

Notwithstanding this philosophical tendency, and although in other respects the Pauline mode of surveying Christianity predominated, yet the millenarianism of the Jewish Christians,¹⁷ presenting a sensuous counterpoise to the external pressure of persecution, which had been announced in so many apocalyptic writings,¹⁸ and for which the reputation of John (Apoc. xx. 4-6; xxi.) and his peculiar followers, afforded a warrant—this millenarianism became the general belief of the time, and met with almost no other opposition than that given by the Gnostics,¹⁹

Spirit σοφίαν, &c. Semisch, Justin. d. M. ii. 305, 311. Note.—Theophilus ad. Autol. ii. 23, gives the members of the Divine triad thus: Θεὸς, ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ σοφία αὐτοῦ, and says, ii. 14: Ἐχων οὖν ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον ἐνδιέθετον ἐν τοῖς ἰδίῳις σπλάγγχοις, ἐγέννησεν αὐτὸν μετὰ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ σοφίας ἐξερευζόμενος πρὸ τῶν ὄλων. Τοῦτον τὸν λόγον ἔσχεν ὑπουργὸν τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγενημένων καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ τὰ πάντα πεποίηκεν.—Οὗτος οὖν ὦν πνεῦμα θεοῦ, καὶ ἀρχή, καὶ σοφία, καὶ δύναμις ὑψίστου καθήρηχοτο εἰς τοὺς προφῆτας, καὶ δι' αὐτῶν ἐλάλει τὰ περὶ τῆς ποιήσεως τοῦ κόσμου, καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν ἀπάντων. οὐ γὰρ ἦσαν ὁ προφῆται, ὅτε ὁ κόσμος ἐγένετο, ἀλλὰ ἡ σοφία ἣ ἐν αὐτῷ οὐσα ἣ τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος ὁ ἅγιος αὐτοῦ ὁ εἰς συμπάρων αὐτῷ. Here the Holy Spirit is the immanent wisdom of God, but the Logos the revealed God, who emanated from the Father.

¹⁵ Irenaeus adv. Haer. ii. 28, 6: Si quis itaque nobis dixerit: quomodo ergo Filius prolatus a Patre est? dicimus ei, quia prolationem istam, sive generationem, sive nuncupationem, sive adaptationem, aut quolibet quis nomine vocaverit generationem ejus inenarrabilem existentem, nemo novit, non Valentinus—neque Angeli—nisi solus qui generavit Pater, et qui natus est Filius. Inenarrabilis itaque generatio ejus cum sit, quicumque nituntur generationes et prolationes enarrare, non sunt competes sui, ea quae inenarrabilia sunt, enarrare promittentes. Quoniam enim ex cogitatione et sensu verbum emittitur, hoc utique omnes sciunt homines: non ergo magnum quid invenerunt, qui emissiones excogitaverunt, neque absconditum mysterium, si id quod ab omnibus intelligitur, transtulerunt in unigenitum Dei Verbum: et quem inenarrabilem et innominabilem vocant, hunc, quasi ipsi obstetricaverint, primae generationis ejus prolationem et generationem enunciant, adsimilantes eum hominum verbo emissionis (λόγω προφορικῷ). ¹⁶ This doctrinal latitudinarianism is shown in the fact of the Nazarene Hegesippus, being recognized as orthodox in the churches of Corinth and Rome, these churches agreeing with his orthodoxy. See above § 43, note 4. The same latitudinarianism may be seen in Justin's declaration respecting those who denied the personality of the Logos (above note 12), in the estimation in which the Shepherd of Hermas was held. In reference to the advancement of the various Christian interests, and in like manner also to the confirmation of those developments of doctrine already mentioned, the spurious literature which had arisen and continually increased among Jews and Christians, was of great importance. The Christians made use of such expressions and writings as had already been falsely attributed by Jews, from partiality to their religion, to honored persons of antiquity,²⁵ and altered them in part to suit their own

ECCLESIASTICAL LIFE.

As the prevailing desire was now to compare the Mosaic institute with the Christian, of which it was regarded as the type, and to trace out an analogy even in their individual features, the idea soon occurred to the mind, of comparing the Christian officers in the church with the Mosaic priesthood,¹ and of giving them the very same titles (summus sacerdos, sacerdotes, Levite). As a body, they were called, by way of eminence, κλήρος, viz., τοῦ θεοῦ, κληρικοί;² among the Latins, ordo;³ in opposition scientiæ sæculis prisca multa ex Chaldaeorum arcanis Bactrianus addidit Zoroastres: deinde Hystaspes rex prudentissimus Darii pater. The latter traveled into India to the Brahmins, eorumque monita rationes mundani motus et siderum, purisque sacrorum ritus quantum colligere potuit eruditus, ex his quae didicit, aliqua sensibus magorum infudit: quae illi cum disciplinis praesentiendi futura, per suam quisque progeniem, posteris aetatibus tradunt. Ch. G. F. Walch de Hystaspe ejusque vaticiniis apud Patres i. d. Commentationes Soc. Reg. Gotting. i. 3.—So early as in the Praedicatio Petri (which belongs to the beginning of the second century, see § 27, note 5) the Sybil and Hystaspes are recommended (cf. Clemens Alex. Strom. vi. p. 761), and by Justin Martyr several times quoted. According to Celsus ap. Orig. c. Cels. vii. p. 368, they were adulterated and used by a Christian party, whom he thence calls Σιβυλλισταί, lib. v. p. 272.

¹ The whole Christian world is called, in 1 Pet. ii. 5, ἱεράτευμα ἁγιον: v. 9, βασιλῆιον ἱεράτευμα. The passage in Clem. Rom. Ep. 1, c. 40, speaks of the Old Testament economy, and does not belong here. On the contrary, traces of a peculiar Christian priesthood appear in the Test. xii. Patr., cf. Nitzsch de Test. xii. Patr. p. 19. Also in Plyceratis Ep. ad Victorem apud Euseb. v. 24, § 1: Ἰωάννης, ὃς ἐγενήθη ἱερεὺς τὸ πέταλον πεφορηκώς, although πέταλον (cf. Exod. xxix. 6; Lev. viii. 9) stands here only tropically; cf. J. F. Cotta de lamina pontificali App. Joannis, Jacobi et Marci. Tubing. 1775. 4. The idea is first found in a distinct form in Tertullian,

to the λαός, plebs, λαϊκοί.⁴ The idea, however, of a universal Christian priesthood was still maintained.⁵ The influence of the bishop necessarily increased when synods began to be common,⁶ at which the bishop chiefly represented his congregation (παροικία),⁷ although the presbyters also had a voice along with him.⁸ All congregations were independent of one another, although some had a peculiar reputation more than others, on account of many circumstances, ex. gr. their apostolic origin, the importance of the city to which they belonged, or because they were mother churches. Many such circumstances united in procuring for Rome, particularly in the west, an especial reputation, even so early as the period of which we are speaking.⁹

Public worship was extremely simple. Without temples, altars, or images, the Christians assembled in houses appointed for the purpose, and, in times of persecution, in solitary places,¹⁰ sometimes even in the night, particularly on the night before Easter.¹¹ The members of the church brought with them voluntary offerings, from which was taken what was necessary for the solemnization of the Lord's supper (εὐχαριστία), and the agape,¹² which was still usually connected with it. The remainder belonged to the clergy and the poor, for whom also they provided by monthly contributions.¹³ After the clergy had become a priestly caste, it was the more necessary to look for a sacrifice in Christianity, because the ancient world generally could not conceive of divine worship without sacrifice. For this purpose the solemnity of the supper presented several points of comparison. First of all, the prayer, which, indeed, had always been considered spiritual sacrifice.¹⁴ But next, the gifts of the church members, as also the bread and wine set apart by the bishop by prayer as holy food, might be considered as offerings dedicated to God. Of both the same expressions were used, προσφέρειν, προσφορά, offerre, oblatio: both were compared with the Old Testament sacrifices and first fruits.¹⁵ As, accordingly, Et calicem similiter, qui est ex ea creatura, quae est secundum nos, suum sanguinem confessus est: et novi Testamenti novam docuit oblationem, quam Ecclesia ab apostoli accipiens, in universo mundo offert Deo, ei qui alimenta nobis praestat, primitias suorum munerum in novo Testamento, de quo in xii. Prophetis Malachias sic praesignificavit (Mal. i. 10, 11), &c. Cap. xviii. 1: Igitur Ecclesiae oblatio, quam Dominus docuit offerri in universo mundo, purum sacrificium reputatum est apud Deum, et acceptum est ei: non quod indigeat a nobis sacrificium, sed quoniam is qui offert glorificatur ipse in eo quod offert, si acceptetur munus ejus. This idea of oblations is expressed not only in the sacrificial prayers of the old liturgies (see Constitt. Apost. viii. c. 12, comp. Pfaffii Syntagma, p. 378, ss.), but also even now in the commencing words of the canon missae of the Romish church: Te igitur, clementissime pater—supplices rogamus ac petimus, uti accepta habeas ac benedicas haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata (i. e. the still unconsecrated bread and wine).

the Mosaic law of first fruits, and soon, in consequence, the law of tithes also, appeared to be still valid,¹⁶ the Christians obtained in them a rule for their oblations, without, however, any kind of external compulsion being used for enjoining the observance of them. The eucharist being considered the symbol of the intimate communion of the church with itself and with Christ, it was also sent to the absent as a token of this communion,¹⁷ and taken by those who were present to their homes.¹⁸

Baptism was preceded by instruction,¹⁹ fasting, and prayer. The baptism of children was not universal, and was even occasionally disapproved.²⁰ While Christians were supposed to be engaged in constant warfare with the world and the devil under the banner of Christ,²¹ they generally used the sign of the cross,²² and often exorcism,²³ as a powerful defense against the machinations of evil spirits. Probably they already began to apply the latter in the case of those persons who, renouncing the prince of this world, prepared themselves for baptism.²⁴ Many new usages were connected with baptism itself toward the end of the second century.²⁵

The concluding of a marriage was announced by the bishop of the church; and with this was very naturally connected the giving of his blessing on the new union.²⁶ Second marriages were condemned by many in all cases,²⁷ and began to be expressly disallowed in the case of the clergy.²⁸ But when the

On the last words see the Excursus in Heinichen. Euseb. t. iii. p. 377, ss. I am inclined to read τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτῶν. "Others measure off forty hours along with their day" (μετροῦσι σὺν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ), i. e., they fast the day which they celebrate as the passover, or the day of Christ's death (for in this there was a difference), and begin with the hour of the death (three o'clock, afternoon), a new forty hours' fast till the resurrection.—Cf. Jo. Dallaeus de Jejuniis et quadragesima. Daventr. 1654. 8.

³⁵ The most important in this festival was the passover day, the 14th of Nisan, which, after it had been probably spent in fasting, closed with a Christian paschal meal (love-feast and Eucharist). (Eriphan. Haer. l. 1, ἀπαξ τοῦ ἔτους μίαν ἡμέραν τοῦ πάσχα φιλο-νεϊκῶς ἄγουσι. Polycrates, bishop of Ephesus, who defended, in the year 196, this solemnity against the Romish bishop Victor, designates it in Euseb. v. 24, as a τηρεῖν τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς τεσσαρεσκαδεκάτης τοῦ πάσχα κατὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον. The whole day, therefore, was kept, but it might be observed merely by fasting. Comp. Tertull. de Orat. c. 14, see above, note 33). In favor of this they appealed to a passage of the law, (Eriphan. Haer. l. 1): ὅτι ἐπικατάρatos, ὅς οὐ ποιήσει τὸ πάσχα τῇ τεσσαρεσκαδεκάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ μηνός. They said (apud Hippolytus in chron. Pasch. p. 6): ἐποίησε τὸ πάσχα ὁ Χριστὸς τότε τῇ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ ἔφαθεν· διὸ καμὲ δεῖ ἂν τρόπον ὁ κύριος ἐποίησεν, οὕτω ποιεῖν. In it they ate unleavened bread, probably like the Jews, eight days through; they said (Chrysostomus contra Jud. Orat. iii. ed. Montfaucon, i. 610): ὅτι μετὰ τοῦ ἀζύμου τὸ πάσχα ἐστίν. On the contrary, there is no trace of a yearly festival of the resurrection among them, for this was kept every Sunday. Since the Christians of Asia Minor appealed in favor of their passover solemnity on the 14th Nisan to John, (Polycrates, l. c.), and yet, according to his gospel Christ partook of the last supper with his disciples so early as the 13th Nisan; an argument has been lately deduced from this fact against the authenticity of John's gospel, (Bretschneider Probabilia, p. 109, after him Strauss and Schwegler). To judge correctly of this matter we must set out with that which is remarked very truly respecting it by Socrates, Hist. eccl. v. 22: Οὐδαμοῦ τοίνυν ὁ ἀπόστολος, οὐδὲ τὰ εὐαγγέλια ζυγὸν δουλείας τοῖς τῷ κηρύγματι προσελθοῦσιν ἐπέθηκαν· ἀλλὰ τὴν ἑορτὴν τοῦ πάσχα καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἑορτάς τηρῶν, τῇ ἐγγνωμοσύνῃ τῶν εὐεργετηθέντων κατέλιπον.—σκοπὸς μὴν οὐν γέγονε τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, οὐ περὶ ἡμερῶν ἑορταστικῶν νομοθετεῖν, ἀλλὰ βίον ὀρθὸν καὶ τὴν θεοσέβειαν εἰσηγήσασθαι· ἔμοι δὲ φαίνεται, ὅτι ὡσπερ ἄλλα πολλὰ κατὰ χώρας συνήθειαν ἔλαβεν, οὕτω καὶ ἡ τοῦ πάσχα ἑορτὴ παρ' ἐκάστοις ἐκ συνηθείας τινὸς ἰδιάζουσαν ἔσχε τὴν παρατήρησιν, διὰ τὸ μηδένα τῶν ἀποστόλων, ὡς ἔφην, μηδεὶν νενομοθετηκέναι περὶ αὐτῆς. In the Christian assemblies the Jewish passover was at first kept up, but observed with up the recollection of the death and resurrection of Christ, as in every week, so with greater solemnity every year, at the passover festival, on the corresponding days of the week, so that the passover Friday was always regarded by them as dies paschae. When Polycarp visited Rome, about 160, he had a conference on this point with the Romish bishop Anicetus (Epist. Iren. ap. Euseb., v. 24). Both remained of the same opinion as before, but separated in perfect friendship. Among the Christians of Asia Minor themselves, there was a controversy in Laodicea respecting the passover, about 170; but the proper point debated is not certainly known.³⁶ reference to Christ, the true passover, (1 Cor. v. 7, 8). Thus John, too, found it in Ephesus and allowed it to remain unaltered. He corrected it in his gospel only so far as it proceeded on the supposition that Christ had eaten with the Jews the passover on the day before his death, by making it apparent that Christ was crucified on the 14th Nisan. But that solemnity needed not to have been changed on this account; on the contrary, if the 14th Nisan was the true Christian passover day, the fulfillment of the typical pasch took place on the same day with it.

³⁶ Melito περὶ τοῦ Πάσχα ap. Eusebius iv. 26, 2: 'Ἐπὶ Σερονίλιον Παύλου, ἀνθυπάτου τῆς Ἀσίας, ᾧ Σάγαρις καιρῷ ἐμαρτύρησεν, ἐγένετο ζήτησις πολλή ἐν Λαοδικείᾳ περὶ τοῦ πάσχα, ἐμπεσόντος κατὰ καιρὸν ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις· καὶ ἐγράφη ταῦτα. Eusebius adds, that Clement of Alexandria was induced to write his book on the passover by this work of Melito. Since now Melito is quoted by Polycrates (Euseb. v. 24, 2) as an authority for the custom as observed in Asia Minor, but since the Paschal Chronicle, p. 6, s., quotes the writings of the contemporaneous Apollinaris, bishop of Hierapolis, and Clement of Alexandria, on the passover, together in favor of the view that Christ had not eaten the Jewish passover on the day before his death, it has been inferred that Apollinaris had attacked the Asiatic practice, and that Melito defended it. But no trace of this is found in Eusebius; on the contrary, both writers are named by him beside one another as working together harmoniously, (iv. 26.) In the fragments of Apollinaris's work which remain, those persons are combated who said: ὅτι τῇ ἰδ' τὸ πρόβατον μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν ἔφαγεν ὁ Κύριος, τῇ δὲ μεγάλῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν ἁγίων αὐτὸς ἔπαθεν, and appealed to Matthew in their favor. This view, says Apollinaris, contradicts the law (so far as the passover, and consequently also Christ as the passover, must be offered the 14th) and the gospels, and he asserts in opposition to it: ἡ ἰδ' τὸ ἄλθινον τοῦ Κυρίου πάσχα, ἡ θυσία ἡ μεγάλη, ὅ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀμνοῦ παῖς θεοῦ, κ. τ. λ. Hence he does not combat the keeping of the 14th as the paschal day, but merely intends to vindicate the right significance of it against erroneous conceptions. This day was to be celebrated as the Christian passover, not because Christ had eaten on it the typical passover with the Jews, but because he himself, as the true passover, had offered himself to God.

After baptism only a public repentance was generally allowed.³⁸ In the African church they proceeded so far as frequently to exclude forever those who had been guilty of incontinence, murder, and idolatry. This was done in pursuance of Montanist principles.³⁹

Those persons were highly honored who endured persecutions for the sake of the Christian faith. The death of a martyr (μάρτυρ, Acts xxii. 20; Heb. xii. 1; Apoc. xvii. 6) was supposed, like baptism, to have the efficacy of destroying sin (lavacrum sanguinis, τὸ βάπτισμα διὰ πυρός, Luke xii. 50; Mark x. 39), supplied the place even of baptism (according to Matthew x. 39), and alone introduced the person immediately to the presence of the Lord in paradise (Matt. v. 10-12; Apoc. vi. 9: hence ἡμέρα γενέθλιος, γενέθλια τῶν μαρτύρων, natales, natalitia martyrum.⁴⁰ But the surviving confessors also (ὁμολογήται, confessores, Matt. x. 32; 1 Tim. vi. 12, 13) were held to be chosen members of Christ. People were zealous in visiting them in Manente concordiae vinculo et perseverante Catholicae Ecclesiae individuo sacramento, actum suum disponit et dirigit unusquisque Episcopus, rationem propositi sui Domino redditurus. Though this severity was afterward relaxed in reference to the Moechi (see below, § 59, note 4), yet they still remained at first united with the Montanists in asserting this principle, Tertull. de Pudic. c. 12: Quod neque idololatriae neque sanguini pax ab Ecclesiis redditur.

In this sense, families celebrated the remembrance of their departed members,⁴⁵ churches that of their martyrs yearly on the day of their death,⁴⁶ by prayers at the

CONDITION OF HEATHENISM.

While the Roman empire appeared hastening to its fall, the throne being occupied by soldiers, the provinces devastated by barbarians, and the government changed into the most arbitrary despotism, the kingdom of superstition, in which alone the men of that time sought for peace and security from the dangers that surrounded them, had established itself firmly. Not only were the emperors themselves addicted to this superstition, but they also openly confessed it, and in part introduced even foreign rites into Rome.¹ The Platonic philosophy, which had confined itself till now to a defense of the popular religions, and to securing for the wise a more elevated worship of deity, endeavored, since the beginning of the third century, to give to the people's religion a higher and more spiritual form, under the pretense of bringing it back to its original, purer state. This philosophy had been unquestionably forced to this by the spiritual preponderance of Christianity. With this view, Philostratus

The Jewish religion also was continually incorporated into this religious mixture (comp. above, § 17, note 9), see Commodiani (about 270) instructiones adv. gentium deos pro christiana disciplina (in Gallandii Biblioth. vett. Patr. T. iii.):

the elder composed the life of Apollonius of Tyana (220), in which the latter was represented as the reformer of heathenism.² But all the preceding tendencies of philosophy, and this also, were perfected in the so-called new-platonic school.³ The founder of it, Ammonius Saccas, Σακκάς (i. e., σακκοφόρος) of Alexandria († about 243), an apostate from Christianity to heathenism,⁴ appears to have borrowed the pattern of his heathenism defending philosophy principally from the Christian Gnostics. He communicated his system only as a secret; but by his disciple, the Egyptian Plotinus († 270), it was farther developed, and spread abroad with incredible rapidity. With no less renown, Plotinus was followed by his disciple, Porphyrus of Tyre (Malchus † 304), and he by Jamblichus of Chalcis († 333), who survived the overthrow of paganism.⁵

The leading principles of the theology of these philosophers, who wished to find the absolute, not by a process of thought, but by immediate intuition, like the Christian Gnostics, are the following: From the highest existence (τὸ ἔν) arises intelligence (ὁ νοῦς), and from this the soul (ἡ ψυχή). The highest world of intelligence or understanding (κόσμος νοητός), is the totality of all intelligences, of the gods as well as of human spirits. By the soul of the world (hence called the δημιουργός), the visible world was formed. The gods are divided into those dwelling above the world (ἄυλοι, νοητοί, ἀφανεῖς), and those inhabiting the world (περικόσμοι, αἰσθητοί, ἐμφανεῖς). To the latter the different parts of the world are intrusted for oversight (hence θεοὶ μερικοί, μέριστοι, ἐθνάρχει, πολιοῦχοι); and from them the various nations have derived their peculiar character. Lower than the gods stand the demons, some good, and others bad. While the people worship the highest god only in their national deities, and that with propriety, the wise man must, on the contrary, endeavor to attain to immediate union with the highest deity. While Neo-platonism endeavored in this way both to prop up heathenism, and to give it a higher and more spiritual character, it adapted itself, on the one hand, to the grossest popular superstitions, and, on the other, adopted the purest ideas respecting the supreme deity. Accordingly, it communicated, at the same time, the most excellent precepts regarding the moral worship of God, and recommended asceticism and theurgy,⁶ in order to elevate its votaries to communion with the deity, and to obtain dominion over the demons. It can not well be doubted, that Christianity influenced the development of the purer aspect of the neo-platonic doctrines, when we look at the striking agreement of many of these doctrines with those of Christianity.⁷ This source, however, was not acknowledged by the new Platonists, who wished that the root of their doctrine should be considered as existing only in the national philosophy, and, along with it, in the oldest Chaldean and Egyptian wisdom. In consequence of this view, neo-platonic productions appeared sometimes in the form of Chaldean oracles,⁸ and in the name of Hermes Trismegistus.⁹

On the other hand, Eusebius: τῷ Ἀμμωνίῳ τὰ τῆς ἐνθέου φιλοσοφίας ἠκέραια καὶ ἀδιάπτωτα καὶ μέχρις ἐσχάτης τοῦ βίου διέμενε τελευτήσας. Here Eusebius evidently refers to another Ammonius, probably to the author of the Gospel Harmony.

The philosophic portion of them belongs to the New Platonism: Asclepius and Poemander are the most important (*Opp. gr. lat. ed. Adr. Turnebus. Paris. 1554. 4. Colon. 1630. fol. FIRST CHAPTER.

EXTERNAL FORTUNES OF CHRISTIANITY.

DISPOSITION OF THE HEATHEN TOWARD IT.

Though the reports of secret abominations said to be practiced by the Christians in their assemblies vanished by degrees among the heathen people,¹ yet other prejudices against them remained unchanged. Every public calamity was continually regarded as a token of the wrath of the gods against the Christians, and excited fresh hatred and persecution.² The cultivated heathen held fast by the old view, that whatever truth they could not avoid perceiving in the Christian religion, was disfigured by a barbarous form, and the admixture of rude enthusiasm, and was found in a purer form in their national traditions. From this point of view began, from the commencement of the third century, the efforts which were made to reform the popular religion, that it might be elevated to the same height as Christianity. In this way either both religions might be blended together, or greater power would be given to heathenism to withstand Christianity. Philostratus, in his life of Apollonius of Tyana, might have had in view this syncretistic object,³ but Neo-platonism, on the contrary, appeared in an attitude decidedly hostile to Christianity.⁴ The new Plato-

² Comp. above, § 41, note 26. The constant reproach of the heathen may be found in Cyprianus lib. ad Demetrianum: Dixisti, per nos fieri, et quod nobis debeant imputari omnia ista, quibus nunc mundus quatitur et urgetur, quod dii vestri a nobis non colantur. nists, for the most part, regarded Christ as the most distinguished sage and theurgist. On the other hand, however, they asserted that the doctrine of Christ perfectly agreed with theirs at first, but that it had been in many ways corrupted by his disciples, especially by the doctrine of Christ's deity, and forbidding the worship of the gods.⁵ In this manner the Christians appeared to be a crowd of misguided enthusiasts who had strayed from their leader, in contrast with whom, the heathen in their philosophy, and in their purified popular worship, possessed the purer truth, and occupied a higher position. The contest of these philosophers with Christianity, which continued till the sixth century, had thus a more earnest character than the earlier attacks. In the works of Plotinus many passages are aimed at the Christians, without their name being introduced.⁶

See his Comment. in Plotini Ennead. ii. lib. iii. c. 7, p. 121, and frequently, and which is probably still preserved in some Florentine library) apud Augustin. de civ. Dei, xix. 23: Praeter opinionem profecto quibusdam videatur esse quod dicturi sumus. Christum enim Dii piissimum pronunciarunt et immortalem factum, et cum bona praedicatione ejus meminere (namely by oracles). Christianos autem pollutos et contaminatos et errore implicatos esse dicunt, et multis talibus adversus eos blasphemias utuntur.—De Christo autem interrogantibus si est Deus, ait Hecate: "Quoniam quidem immortalis anima post corpus ut incedit, nosti: a sapientia autem abscessa semper errat: viri pietate praestantissimi est illa anima, hanc colunt aliena a se veritate." The same in Euseb. Demonstr. evang. iii. c. 8:—

Γινώσκει σοφίη τετιμημένος. ἄλλάγε ψυχὴ

Direct attacks against them were the κατὰ Χριστιανῶν λόγοι, fifteen books of Porphry; ⁷ and the λόγοι φιλαλήθεις πρὸς Χριστιανούς, in two books of Hierocles, governor of Bithynia under Diocletian.⁸ The lives also of Pythagoras by Jamblichus and Porphry, had a hostile reference to Christianity.⁹

CONDUCT OF THE EMPERORS TOWARD THE CHRISTIANS.

After Christianity had been favorably regarded by several emperors in the first half of this period, and had been introduced into the general religious syncretism, there arose in the second half, not only new persecutions, but such as partook of a far more hazardous character than any of the earlier, since they were generally commanded by the emperors, and aimed at nothing less than the complete annihilation of Christianity. Septimus Severus (193 till 211) was, indeed, not unfriendly to the Christians at first (Tertull. ad Scapulam, c. 4); but they had much to suffer in the provinces from the popular rage¹ and the avarice of the governors.² These persecutions increased considerably after the emperor (203), changed, perhaps, by the excesses of the Montanists, had forbidden the adoption of Christ-

Dicebat praeterea, Judaeorum et Samaritanorum religiones, et christianam devotionem illuc transferendam, ut omnium culturarum secretum Heliogabali sacerdotium teneret. Baur's Apollonius v. Tyana u. ⁶ Origen was called by Julia Mamaea to Antioch, Euseb. vi. 21. On this account, later writers (first Orsius, vii. 18) make her a Christian.—Lampridius in Sev. Alex. c. 23 : Judaeis privilegia reservavit, Christianos esse passus est. C. 28 : Quodam tempore festo ut solent, Antiochenses, Aegyptii, Alexandrini laceraverant eum conviciolis, Syrum Archisynagogum eum vocantes, et Archiereae. C. 29 : Matutinis horis in larario suo, in quo et divos Principes, sed optimos electos, et animas sanctiores, in laeis et Apollonium, et, quantum scriptor suorum temporum dicit, Christum, Abraham et Orpheum, et hujusmodi caeteros habebat, ac majorum effigies, rem divinam faciebat. C. 43 : Christo templum facere voluit, eumque inter Deos recipere, quod et Hadrianus cogitasse fertur :—sed prohibitus est ab iis, qui consulentes sacra repererant omnes Christianos futuros, si id optato evenisset, et templa reliqua deserenda. (On the religious syncretism of the emperor see two dissertations in Heyne Opusc. acad. vol. vi. p. 169.) C. 45 : Ubi aliquos voluisset vel rectores provinciis dare, vel praepositos facere, vel procuratores, ad est rationales ordinare, nomina eorum proponebat, hortans populum, ut si quis quid haberet criminis, probaret manifestus rebus ; si non probasset, subiret poenam capitis : dicebatque grave esse, cum id Christiani et Judaei facerent in praedicandis sacerdotibus, qui ordinandi sunt, non fieri in provinciarum rectoribus, quibus, et fortunae hominum committerentur et capita. C. 49 : Cum Christiani quendam locum qui publicus fuerat, oc cupassent, contra popinarii decerent, sibi eum deberi, rescripsit, melius esse, ut quomodo cunque illic Deus colatur, quam popinariis dedatur.

Itaque hoc consilio salubri ac rectissima ratione ineundum esse credidimus, ut nulli omnino facultatem abnegandam putarem, qui vel observationi Christianorum, vel ei religioni mentem suam dederet, quam ipsi sibi aptissimam esse sentiret, ut possit nobis summa divinitas, cujus religioni liberis mentibus obsequimur, in omnibus solitum favorem suum benevolentiamque praestare. Quare scire dignationem tuam convenit, placuisse nobis, ut amotis omnibus omnino conditionibus (Euseb. τῶν ἀρρέτων), quae prius scriptis ad officium tuum datis super Christianorum nomine videbantur, nunc caveres, ut simpliciter unusquisque eorum, qui eandem observandae religionis Christianorum gerunt voluntatem, citra ullam inquietudinem ac molestiam sui id ipsum observare contendant. Quae solitudini tuae plenissime significanda esse credidimus, quo scires, nos liberam atque absolutam colendae religionis suae facultatem hisdem Christianis dedisse. Quod cum hisdem a nobis indultum esse pervideas, intelligit dignatio tua, etiam aliis religionis suae vel observantiae potestatem similiter apertam et liberam pro quiete temporis nostri esse concessam, ut in colendo, quod quisque delegerit, habeat liberam facultatem, quia [nolumus detrahi] honori neque cuiquam religioni aliquid a nobis. Et vel hi, qui emerunt, vel qui dono fuerunt consecuti, si putaverint, de nostra benevolentia aliquid vicarium postulent, quo et ipsis per nostram clementiam consulatur. Quae omnia corpori Christianorum protinus per intercessionem tuam ac sine mora tradi oportebit. Et quoniam iidem Christiani non ea loca tantum, ad quae convenire consueverant, sed alia etiam habuisse noscuntur, ad jus corporis eorum, id est ecclesiarum, non hominum singulorum, pertinentia: ea omnia lege, qua superius, comprehendimus, citra ullam prorsus ambiguitatem vel controversiam hisdem Christianis, id est corpori et conventiculis eorum, reddi jubebis; supra dicta scilicet ratione servata, ut ii, qui eadem sine pretio, sicut diximus, restituerint, indemnitatem de nostra benevolentia sperent. In quibus omnibus supra dicto corpori Christianorum intercessionem tuam efficacissimam exhibere debebis, ut praeceptum nostrum quantocius compleatur; quo etiam in hoc per clementiam nostram quieti publicae consulatur. have only isolated intimations and hints. His first religious sentiments, like those of his father, were essentially the new-platonic. He acknowledged one supreme God who had revealed himself in many ways among men,²⁶ and honored Apollo in particular, as the revealer of this Being.²⁷ As this idea of Apollo and the Christian idea of Christ were obviously similar,²⁸ so Constantine may have thought that he found in it very soon a point of union between Christianity and heathenism. That the phenomenon which appeared to him in the war against Maxentius, respecting which the accounts of his contemporaries are so different,²⁹ did not yet bring him over exclusively to Christian-

²⁹ Lactant. de Mort. persec. c. 44: Commonitus est in quiete Constantinus, ut coeleste signum Dei notaret in scutis, atque ita proelium committaret. Fecit, ut jussus est, et traversa x. littera, summo capite circumflexo, Christum in scutis notat. On the contrary, the heathen Nazarius in Panegy. ad Constantinum, c. 14: In ore denique est omnium Galliarum, exercitus visos, qui se divinitus missos prae se ferebant. Haec ipsorum sermocinatio, hoc inter audientes ferebant, Constantinum petimus, Constantino inus auxilio. Constantine, immediately after his entry into Rome, caused a cross to be put into the

ity, is proved by the edict of Milan, which breathes entirely the former syncretistic spirit. But he acted only in the spirit of this decree when he bestowed favors on the Christian church, such as the old religion had always enjoyed. Thus he released their clergy from the burdensome municipal offices (312;³⁰ made valid the manumission of slaves in the churches (prior to 316);³¹ hand of the statue erected to him, with the inscription, τούτω τῷ σωτηριώδει σημείῳ, τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἐλέγχῳ τῆς ἀνδρίας, τὴν πόλιν ὑμῶν ἀπὸ ζυγοῦ τοῦ τυράννου διασωθεῖσαν ἠλευθέρωσα (Euseb. H. E. ix. 9). It was not till he was an old man that he related to Eusebius the story of a cross, which appeared to him at clear mid-day, with the inscription, hac vince, τούτω νικά. Euseb. de vit. Const. i. 28-32. Sozomen, however, i. 3, and Rufin. ix. 9, suppose it to have been a mere dream. The heathen, of course, derided all these stories. See Gelasius Cyclic. Hist. Conc. Nicaeni, i. 4. Cf. Mosheim de rebus Christ. ante Const. M. p. 978, ss. Concerning the cipher of Christ's name, see Münster's Sinnbilder der alten Christen, Heft i. S. 33, ff. The imperial standard, bearing this cipher, was afterward called Labarum. See Du Cange Diss. de nummis infer. aevi, § 20. It is certain that Constantine, even before the battle, supposed that he was directed to the cross as to a propitious sign, and that this could not have happened in a way to attract general notice. If the later narrative of the emperor be not an invention, a light cross of clouds may have appeared to him while in a musing and hesitating mood, and have led him to decide; a phenomenon which was of importance, for this very reason, only to himself, and which remained unobserved by all others. Thus a purple cross, Christmas, 1517, was looked upon as a divine sign at Weimar, under the important circumstances of the time (Oratio de Joanne Duce Sax. in Melanthonis Opp. ed. Bretschneider, xi. 958). In like manner a white cross, which appeared at the entrance of John Frederick, the elector, into Weimar, when he returned from captivity (Hortleder vom deutschen Kriege, Th. 2, S. 966). Several like traditions owed their origin at this time to the feeling that the decisive struggle between heathenism and Christianity, between Christ and demons, was come. Thus it is related that a victory-bringing prayer was taught by an angel to Licinius before the battle with Maximin (Lactant. de Mort. persecut. c. 46). Thus, according to Gregory of Nazianzum, an army of demons accompanied Julian on his Persian expedition; but according to Libanius, it was an army of gods. See Ullmann's Pregor. v. Nazianz. S. 100.

³⁰ The first law ad Anulinum Procons. Africae apud Euseb. H. E. x. c. 7, confirmed by a second, Cod. Theod. xvi. tit. ii. l. 1, A.D. 313, and repeated in the third, l. c. l. 2, A.D. 319. The last: Qui divino cultui ministeria impendunt, i. e., hi qui Clerici appellantur, ab omnibus omnino muneribus excusentur, ne sacrilego livore quorundam a divinis obsequiis avocentur. Here Constantine merely transferred to the Christian clergy a privilege enjoyed by heathen priests. Cf. Symmachus, lib. x. Ep. 54: Insigne ducitur Sacerdotii vacare muneribus. Cod. Theod. xii. tit. 1, l. 75, and Gothofred. ad h. l. The presidents of the Jews also enjoyed this immunity. Cf. Cod. allowed legacies to be left to the catholic churches,³² and contributed a considerable sum himself to the support of the African clergy.³³ Other regulations in favor of the Christians owed their immediate origin to that syncretistic tendency of the emperor. ³⁶ The first law of March, 321, is in Cod. Justin. iii. tit. 12, l. 3: Omnes judices, urbanaeque plebes, et cunctarum artium officia venerabili die Solis quiescant. Ruri tamen positi agrorum culturae libere licenterque inserviant; quoniam frequenter evenit, ut non aptius alio die frumenta sulcis, aut vineae scrobibus mandentur (as agricultural labors of this kind had been permitted on festivals, according to a Roman custom, Virgil. Georg. i. v. 268, ss. Cato de Re rust. c. 2; cf. Erycius Puteanus de Nundinis Romanis, c. 10 in Graevii Thes. Antiquit. Rom. t. viii. p. 658). The second of June, in the same year, in the Cod. Theod. ii. tit. 8, l. 1, with the addition: Emancipandi et manumittendi die festo cuncti licentiam habeant, et super his rebus actus non prohibeantur. The Egyptian week, the seven days of which were dedicated to the planets, had been made known to the Romans by the astrologers even since the first century. In the second, the days were frequently named after the planets (Dio Cassius, xxxvii. c. 18. S. Mursinna de hebdomade gentilium et dierum a planetis denominatione in Jo. Oelrichs Germaniae literatae opuscula historico-philologica-theologica. Breae. 1772. i. 113). As Christ was often compared with Sol, or Apollo (see above, note 23), so Constantine believed, perhaps, that in the festival of the dies solis, as a festival of Christ and the sun at the same time, he found a point of friendly union between both religions, directly opposed though they were to each other. He transferred the Nundines to Sunday: comp. the stone inscription apud Erycius Puteanus de Nundinis Romanis, c. 26: Constantinus—provisione etiam pietatis suae Nundinas die solis perpeti anno constituit. Still the Nundines and weeks were both in use, and both are found in a calendar composed about 354 (in Graevii Thes. t. viii. p. 97) beside each other, until Theodosius I. made the law respecting the observance of Sunday strict, Cod. Theod. viii. tit. 8, l. 3. Eusebius de vit. Constant. iv. 18, and Sozomen, i. 8, relate that Friday was also observed, as well as Sunday, by order of Constantine.

allowed exactly the same freedom to heathenism, and not only so, but even, in his capacity of emperor, observed the heathen practices at the same time that he gave so many privileges to Christianity,³⁷ he should notwithstanding prejudice the minds of the heathen people by those very measures, inasmuch as he gained over the affections of the Christians toward himself. In the mean time, the successful issue of his undertakings must have strengthened him in the direction he took, in accordance with his peculiar mode of thinking; and it could not escape his political sagacity, that it would be most advantageous for him to have on his side even the smaller party, since it was the more closely united, and more animated by a living soul. In this manner the Christians formed the nucleus of Constantine's party when the relation between him and Licinius became looser. Hence, for this very reason, Licinius sought to obtain a more decided party by renewed attention to the religion of the pagans, and by persecution of the Christians.³⁸ Accordingly, the struggle that arose between Licinius and Constantine, A.D. 323, was at the same time a struggle between Christianity and heathenism. Licinius was defeated, and Constantine openly professed the Christian faith,³⁹ though he still put off baptism.⁴⁰

⁴⁰ Modern Catholic Church historians no longer maintain what was asserted as late as Baronius, Schelstraten, and others, that Constantine was baptized in Rome, by Sylvester, A.D. 324. Comp. Euseb. de vita Constant. iv. 61, 62. That Constantine made donations to Sylvester on this occasion is related first in the Acta Sylvestri, then by Hadrian I. A.D. 780 (see below, in volume second. Div. 1, § 5). In the ninth century an original document respecting a great gift of land came to light. The supposititious character of both authorities was perceived so early as 999, by Otto III., and in 1152 by the Romans (vol. ii.). The spirited attack of Laurentius Valla (about 1440, vol. ii. Div. 5, § 154) did not produce much effect till after the Reformation. Since then the investiture has been defended merely by some of the older Catholic scholars, especially the Jesuits J. Gretser and Nic. Schaten; but the deed of investiture has been generally given up as spurious.

The number of persecutions has been fixed at ten since the fourth century, agreeably to Exod. vii. 10, and Apoc. xvii. 1-14. Different calculations: Sulpicius Severus Hist. sacr. ii. 33: Sacris vocibus decem plagis mundum afficiendum pronunciatum est: ita quum jam novem fuerint, quae superest, ultima erit. On the other side, Augustine. *de civ. Τινὲς γοῦν ἔργον πεποιήνται ἐκπεριέρχεσθαι οὐ μόνον πόλεις, ἀλλὰ καὶ κόμας, καὶ ἐπαυλεις. Respecting the extension of Christianity about 300, see Arnobius, i. c. 16. Si Alamannos, Persas, Scythas (Dii) iccirco voluerunt devinci, quod habitarent et degerent in eorum gentibus Christiani; quemadmodum Romanis tribuere victoriam, cum habitarent et degerent in eorum quoque gentibus Christiani? Si in Asia, Syria iccirco mures et locustas effervescere prodigialiter voluerunt, quod ratione consimili habitarent in eorum gentibus Christiani: in Hispania, Gallia eorundem tempore horum nihil natum est, cum innumeri viverent in his quoque provinciis Christiani? Si apud Getulos, Tingitanos hujus rei causa siccitatem satis ariditatemque miserunt, eo anno cur messes amplissimas Mauris Nomadibusque tribuerunt cum religio similis his quoque in regionibus verteretur?

² Passio Saturnini Episc. Tolosani, c. 2, apud Ruinart: Postquam sensim et gradatim in omnem terram Evangeliorum sonus exivit, parique progressu in regionibus nostris Apostolorum prædicatio coruscavit: cum raræ in aliquibus civitatibus ecclesiæ paucorum Christianorum devotione consurgerent;—ante annos L. sicut actis publicis (Codd. alii: ante annos satis plurimos), i. e., Decio et Grato Consulibus (i. e., 250, A.D.) sicut fidei recordatione retinetur, primum et summum Christi Tolosa civitas s. Franc. i. c. 28: Decii tempore septem viri Episcopi ad prædicandum in Gallias missi sunt, sicut historia passionis s. martyris Saturnini denarrat. Ait enim: Sub Decio et Grato Consulibus, &c., as above. Hi ergo missi sunt: Turonicis Gratianus Episcopus, Arelatensibus Trophimus Episc., Narbonæ Paulus Episc., Tolosæ Saturninus Episc., Parisiacis Dionysius Episc., Arvernensibus Stremonius Episc., Lemovicinis Martialis est destinatus Episcopus. This is evidently an arbitrary combination of several traditions. Trophimus must have been first bishop of Arles even before Decius, for in 254 Marcian had been for a long time bishop of the place. See Cypriani, Ep. 67, Pearson Annales Cypriani ad ann. 254, § 7, ss. With this also agrees Zosimi P. Epist. i. ad Episcopos Galliae, A.D. 417 (apud Constant): Metropolitane Arelatensium urbi vetus privilegium minime derogandum est, ad quam primum ex hac sede Trophimus summus Antistes, ex cujus fonte totæ Galliae fidei rivulos acceperunt, directus est.

As Christianity had come to the west from the east, so the occidental church continued in the second century to be entirely dependent on the oriental. Without a peculiar development of doctrine and literature of its own, it merely received the product of the east; but in this way it also drew within itself the different parties of the east. Rome in particular, the capital of the empire and seat of a great church, presented an alluring field to all parties to call forth their activity. The different Gnostic sects,¹ like the Montanists, labored with emulation to gain over this important church to themselves; and all found in it more or less sympathy and adherence. Accordingly, Romish Christendom in the second century was internally divided in many ways; a condition which was calculated not only to lead many Christians astray, and to induce them to waver, but to lay open a dangerous unprotected side to the attacks of heathenism. There, a philosophically educated Christian of Rome,² toward the end of the second century, took up the idea that Christianity in its original state must be preserved among the Jewish Christians as the descendants of the oldest church. Probably he sought out this church in its isolation, and found it divided into several parties, but he also discovered among the *Elcesaites*³ a speculative doctrinal creed already formed, which seemed to him perfectly adapted both to vanquish heathenism and to remove the multiplicity of Christian sects. He received it, therefore as the original Christian doctrine which had obtained its central point in James,⁴ and in Peter its most important defender, and appropriated all the more readily the Elcesaitic rejection of Paul, who, inasmuch as he was not an immediate disciple of Christ, could not have been a genuine apostle,⁵ because the Pauline development of Christianity had run out into so great a state of disunion, and appeared to have attained its height in the Marcionite errors. Hence he composed the Clementines (τὰ Κλημέντια) consisting of three prologues and twenty (but now only 19) homilies, that he might be able to proclaim to Christendom at large the apostolic truth which had long been concealed, by apostolic lips also. The historical form in which he clothed the whole work, he took in part from the events of his own life. But he reckoned upon it also for the purpose of procuring apostolic authority to his doctrine, and obtaining an introduction for it into Rome in particular. As he himself prosecuted the search, so he represents the apostolic Clement (who was highly esteemed in the recollection of the Roman church, and who appears here in the character of a distinguished Roman, whose mind had received a philosophical culture)⁶ as journeying in the East, impelled by thirst for the truth long vainly sought,⁷ there meeting with Peter, and obtaining full satisfaction from him. Peter, the only one of the immediate disciples of Christ who had come to Rome, appears here in opposition to Paul, as the proper apostle of the Gentiles,⁸ as the founder of the Romish church, and the first bishop of Rome.⁹ He triumphantly refutes all kinds of error which had been advocated by different persons; not only the popular faith and philosophy of the heathen,¹⁰ but also the Christian aberrations of the second century. The Gnostics in particular are combated in the person of Simon Magus;¹¹ and in addition to them the Montanist prophesying,¹² the hypostatic doctrine of the Trinity,¹³ and millenarianism.¹⁴ On the other

Valerian (253–260), gave the Christians rest for some time, but was induced by his favorite Macrianus (257) to renew the persecution.¹³ Gallienus (260–268), first put a stop to it;¹⁴ and in the stormy times that now succeeded, the emperors had too much to do with antagonist emperors, rebellions, and barbarians, to think of persecuting the Christians. Only Aurelian (270–275) issued an edict against them, the execution of which was prevented by his murder that immediately followed. When the empire of Diocletian had received (284–305) four rulers (285, Maximian, Augustus of the west;—292, the Caesars, Galerius and Constantius Chlorus), the church was at first undisturbed, notwithstanding the enmity of Galerius. The Christians attained to the most important offices, and the church was raised to a condition externally prosperous (Euseb. viii. 1). The alleged persecution of Maximian in Gaul and Rome is very improbable.¹⁵ But in February 303, ¹⁴ The first laws of toleration. Two rescripts addressed on this subject to Christian bishops are quoted by Eusebius, vii. 13. The first is that by which Gallienus, after he had conquered Egypt (261), makes known to the bishops in that country the toleration which had been already announced to the rest of the empire: Τὴν εὐεργεσίαν τῆς ἐμῆς δωρεῆς διὰ παντὸς τοῦ κόσμου ἐκβιβασθῆναι προσέταξα. ὅπως ἀπὸ τῶν τόπων τῶν θρησκευσίμων ἀποχωρήσωσι. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡμεῖς τῆς ἀντιγραφῆς τῆς ἐμῆς τῷ τύπῳ χρῆσθαι δύνασθε, ὥστε μηδένα ἡμῖν ἐνοχλεῖν. The other he issued τὰ τῶν καλουμένων κοιμητηρίων ἀπολαμβάνειν ἐπιτρέπων χηρία.

The first mention of it is about 520, in vita S. Romani (Acta SS. Februar. t. iii. p. 740). Then by Avitus, archbishop of Vienne († 523), dicta in *Basilica SS. These Latin acta appear to have been transferred, with arbitrary alterations, by Simeon Metaphrasta (Acta SS. Februar. t. iii. p. 237) to a Greek martyr, Mauricius (Theodoret Graec. affect. curat. disput. viii. in fine), who, as tribunus milit. is said to have been executed along with seventy soldiers in Arpame, in Syria, by the command of Maximianus. Diocletian, moved by superstition¹⁶ and the persuasions of Galerius and Hierocles, caused the splendid church in Nicomedia to be destroyed, and then issued in succession three edicts against the Christians,¹⁷ which were finally succeeded by a fourth in 304, by virtue of which all Christians without exception were compelled to worship the gods.¹⁸ Thus there arose in the entire Roman empire, with the exception of Gaul, where Constantius Chlorus was even now well-disposed toward the Christians,¹⁹ the most violent persecution against them, abundant both in martyrs and in apostates (a new class called traditores). After the two Augusti had laid down their dignity (305), the persecution continued to rage in the east under the new Augustus, Galerius and his Caesar, Maximin.²⁰ In Gaul hand, Peter proclaims¹⁵ and supports by mighty miraculous deeds the following doctrine: God, a pure, simple being of light, has allowed the world to be formed in antagonisms, and so also the history of the world and of men runs off in antagonisms (συζυγίαι) connected by pairs, in which the lower constantly precedes the higher. From the beginning onward God has revealed himself to men, while his Holy Spirit (σοφία, πνεύς Θεοῦ, Θεῖον πνεῦμα, πνεῦμα ἅγιον) from time to time in the form of individual men (Adam, Enoch, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Jesus), as the true prophet (ὁ προφήτης τῆς ἀληθείας), constantly announced the very same truth, and in Jesus caused it also to be communicated to the heathen.¹⁶ According to the law of “syzygies,” false prophets also are always produced in addition to the true (γεννητοὶ γυναικῶν Matth. xi. 11),¹⁷ who corrupt the truth. Thus the original doctrines of Mosaism are perfectly identical with Christianity;¹⁸ though they have not been preserved in their purity in the Pentateuch,¹⁹ which was not composed till long after Moses; and in the present form of Judaism have been utterly perverted. In general, the truth has been constantly maintained in its purity only by a few by means of secret tradition.²⁰ Man is free, and must expect after death a spiritual continuation of life, with rewards and punishments. The conditions of happiness are love to God and man, and struggling against the demons which draw away to evil, through sensuality. For this last purpose these sectaries prescribed abstinence from animal food, frequent fastings and washings, recommended early marriage²¹ and voluntary poverty, but rejected all sacrifices.

The original unpersonal Holy Spirit united himself in Adam with a human person, which appeared, constantly the same, as the true prophet successively in different forms (Baur's Gnosis, S. 362), and is destined for the government of the everlasting kingdom. If one abides by this view, he will not have to assume with Schliemann, S. 142, that a variation prevails in the Clementines respecting the doctrine of the Spirit of God, because he is represented sometimes as an unpersonal energy, sometimes as an hypostasis.

While the author of the Clementines, from the position of the Elcesaitic doctrine, combats parties with which the Elcesaites had never come into contact, he must necessarily go into many new developments of doctrine. How free his movements were in these may be seen from the fact that he frequently used for his purpose our four gospels, unknown to the Elcesaites, with great critical and exegetical arbitrariness.²² On this very account we might indeed doubt whether he left the Elcesaitic doctrine itself entirely untouched.

Although the doctrine here presented could not calculate on any general dissemination, and found several adherents only in Rome and Cyprus,²³ yet many felt themselves attracted by the historical contents of the production, and its refutation of the heathens and the Gnostics; and since the author knew how to account for the late appearance of his work, which pretended to proceed forth from the apostolic age,²⁴ they rather thought of it as the corruption of a genuine writing by heretics than a forgery. Hence, another person was soon found, probably an Al-

²³ Epiphanius, Haer. xxx. 18, says, that Ebionites were in Cyprus (by this general appellation for all heretical Jewish Christians he here means this party). Origen (ap. Euseb. vi. 38) calls the heresy of the Elcesaites, νεωστὶ ἐπανισταμένην. Since no trace is found of it in the second century beyond Palestine, we may assume that it was first established in those places by the Clementines.

²⁴ Peter entreats James, in his letter prefixed to the Clementines, to communicate his sermons (τὰς βίβλους μου τῶν κηρυγμάτων) only to faithful persons under the seal of secrecy; and James guarantees the secrecy by a διαμαρτυρία added, according to which those books should be made known only to tried brethren, after they had agreed by an oath to keep the secret. *Comp. exandrian, who conceived the idea of purifying it from heretical depravations, by altering it entirely according to the standard of orthodoxy in his day. In this way arose the production which appears under different names among the ancients,²⁵ and which still exists, but only in the Latin translation of Rufinus, under the title Recognitiones Clementis, libb. x.²⁶ The requirements of a much later orthodoxy gave rise to the ἐπιτομή.²⁷

OPPOSITION AT ROME TO MONTANISM, AND THE ASIATIC TIME OF CELEBRATING EASTER.

About the time when the Clementines appeared, there was generally apparent at Rome a lively striving after unity by removing all elements whose tendency was to disturb it.

Montanism had not only obtained many friends in the western church, without giving rise to an external division,¹ but had even gained besides an important influence over the prevailing ecclesiastical principles.² The bishop of Rome was already on the point of entering into ecclesiastical communion with the Asiatic Montanists, who had been excluded from the churches of their native country, when Praxeas, a confessor, came from Asia to Rome (about 192), and so altered the disposition toward them, that all communion with them was renounced.³

According to him the composition of them took place in the period between 212 and 230. But the reasons adduced in favor of Rome, as the place of writing, can not be regarded as decisive. The Christology of the Recognitiones (Schliemann, S. 331) obviously points to Alexandria.

³ Tertull. adv. Praxeam, c. 1. Nam idem (Praxeas) tunc episcopum Romanum, agnoscentem jam prophetias Montani, Priscæ, Maximillæ, et ex ea agnitione pacem ecclesiis Asiæ et Phrygiæ inferentem, falsa de ipsis prophetis et ecclesiis eorum adseverando, et præcessorum ejus auctoritates defendendo, cœgit et literas pacis revocare jam emissas, et a proposito recipiendorum charismatum concessare. Victor is usually regarded as that Romish bishop (185-197); but Neander (Antignosticus, S. 485) and Schwegler (Montanismus,

Thus, then, there began in the west also a controversy concerning the distinguishing doctrines of Montanism, which was conducted with violence, especially in Africa.⁴ At the head of the Montanist party stood Quintus Septimius Florens Tertullianus, presbyter in Carthage, and the earliest Latin ecclesiastical writer of note—a man whose modes of thought were strict and severe, of a violent character, and of a rich though somewhat too sensuous imagination. In his writings it may be seen that he developed his Montanist tendency in a way increasingly rug-

S. 250) declare themselves in favor of Eleutherus (170-185), because an incipient yielding to the Montanists does not appear like the stiff hierarchical character of Victor. That character has been inferred merely from his conduct toward the Quartodecimani. But since experience shows that those who renounce certain views, become the most violent opponents of them, Victor's violent measures against every thing which appears to coincide with Montanism, may be best explained on the supposition that he was at first favorably disposed toward them. Chronology is in favor of Victor; for, by the supposition that Eleutherus was the person, there is too long an interval between the first appearance of Praxeas in Rome, and of Tertullian's, lib. adv. Praxeam (composed according to Noesselt 204 or 205).

⁴ An important particular of it is given by Tertullian de Pudicit. c. 1: Audio etiam edictum esse propositum, et quidem peremptorium: Pontifex scilicet Maximus, Episcopus Episcoporum, edicit: ego et moechiae et fornicationis delicta poenitentia functis dimitto Cap. 5: Quid agis mollissima et humanissima disciplina? Idololatram quidem et hominidam semel damnas, moechum vero de medio excipis? Comp. above, § 53, note 39 According to Petavius (not. ad Epiph. Haer. 59. p. 228), it is usually assumed that this Pontifex Maximus is the Romish bishop Zephyrinus (197-217). But the appellation in question does not refer to a real, but to an usurped dignity. It points ironically to the circumstance, that the bishop who had made the regulation arrogated to himself, by so doing, the prerogatives of the only high-priest, Christ. Most probably the allusion is to the bishop of Carthage. Particularly important for the history of the controversy is Tertullian. lib. de Velandis virginibus. In support of his demand, virgines nostras velari oportere, ex quo transitum aetatis suae fecerint, in order to set aside the argument brought against him from custom, cap. 2, Tertullian appeals to the consuetudo of the apostolic churches in Greece, and some barbarous countries: Non possumus respuere consuetudinem, quam damnare non possumus, utpote non extraneam, quia non extraneorum: cum quibus scilicet communicamus jus pacis et nomen fraternitatis. Una nobis et illis fides, unus Deus, idem Christus, eadem spes, eadem lavacri sacramenta. Semel dixerim, una ecclesia sumus. Hence this book was written before the division in the church, when both contending parties still belonged to the same church. Cap. 3 describes how the controversy sprung up from a peaceful living together, and how the parties gradually became more and more embittered. Tamen tolerabilis apud nos ad usque proxime: utrique consuetudini communicabatur. Arbitrio permessa res erat, ut quaeque voluisset aut tegi aut prostituti, sicut et nubere: quod et ipsum neque cogitur, neque prohibetur. Contenta erat veritas pacisci cum consuetudine, ut tacite sub consuetudinis nomine frueretur se vel ex parte. Sed quoniam coeperat agnitio proficere, ut per licentiam utriusque moris indicium melioris partis emergeret: statim ille adversarius bonorum multoque institutorum opus suum fecit. Ambient virgines hominum, adversus virgines Dei, nuda plane fronte, in temerariam audaciam excitatae, et virgines videntur.—Scandalizamus, inquit, quia aliae aliter incedunt: et malunt scandalizari quam provocari, etc. Soon after, a complete separation took place, adv. Praxeam, c. 1: Et nos quidem postea agnitio paraclati, atque defensio disjunctit a Psychicis.

god, being heated more and more by controversy (Spiritualium contra Psychicos).⁵ Others also followed him in the same spirit, till at length in the west also separate Montanist churches were formed.⁶ In the mean time, Montanism had become too deeply rooted in the western church; and now also the circumstance operated in its favor (comp. p. 143) that its most zealous opponents, as *Praxeas*⁷ and the Roman presbyter Cicins,⁸ fell into other serious errors. Thus, though from this time onward, Montanism was rejected in name even in the western church, yet all Montanist elements were by no means expelled from that church.⁹ Not only do we find remaining that

With the rejection of Montanism in Rome was probably connected Victor's opposition to the Asiatic mode of celebrating easter (see p. 166).¹² He called upon the bishops of Asia Minor pariter repromissas et agnoscimus et honoramus, &c. Cap. 4. Pastor (Christus)—de casco quod mulgebat dedit mihi quasi buccellam, et ego accepi junctis manibus, et manducavi, et univarsi circumstantes dixerunt Amen (cf. § 48, not. 22). The enigma, that those Montanizing martyrs should have been constantly considered as members of the catholic church, is accounted for by supposing, that although at the time of their death the controversy between the two parties had begun, yet the separation had not taken place. But, undoubtedly, the Montanist spirit must have been fostered in the church by the high estimation in which such writings were held.

In like manner Origen. comm. in Joh. tom. ii. c. 2, divides the εὐλαβουμένους δύο ἀναγορεῦσαι θεοῦ, καὶ παρὰ τοῦτο περιπίπτοντας ψευδέσι καὶ ἀσεβέσι δόγμασιν into two classes, ἴτοι ἀρνούμενος ιδιότητα νιοῦ ἑτέραν παρὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς ὁμολογούντας θεὸν εἶναι τὸν μέχρι ὀνόματος παρ' αὐτοῖς νιδὸν προσαγορευόμενον, ἢ ἀρνούμενος τὴν θεότητα τοῦ νιοῦ, τιθέντας δὲ αὐτοῦ τὴν ιδιότητα, καὶ τὴν οὐσίαν κατὰ περιγραφὴν τυγχάνουσαν ἑτέραν τοῦ πατρὸς.

⁴ Tertullianus adv. Praxean, c. 1: Nam iste primus ex Asia hoc genus perversitatis intulit homo.—Duo negotia diaboli Praxeas Romae procuravit: prophetiam expulit, et haeresin intulit, Paraclatum fegavit et patrem crucifixit.—C. 20: Nam sicut in veteribus nihil aliud tenent quam: Ego deus et alius praeter me non est (Es. xlv. 5): ita in Evangelio responsonem domini ad Philippum tuentur: Ego et pater unum sumus, et: Qui me viderit videt et patrem, et: Ego in patre et pater in me (Joh. x. 30, xiv. 9, 10). His tribus capitulis totum instrumentum utriusque testamenti volunt cedere.—C. 3: Itaque duos et tres jam jactitant a nobis praedicari, se vero unius Dei cultores praesumunt.—Monarchiam, inquit, tenemus (c. 10, vanissimi isti Monarchiani).—C. 5: Duos unum volunt esse, ut idem pater et filius habeatur.—C. 2: Itaque post tempus pater natus, et pater passus: ipse Deus, dominus omnipotens, Jesus Christus praedicatur. On the other hand, c. 27, aequae in una persona utrumque distinguunt, patrem et filium, dicentes filium carnem esse, id est hominem, i. e., Jesum: patrem autem spiritum, i. e., Deum, i. e., Christum, and c. 29: Ergo, inquit, et nos eadem ratione dicentes patrem, qua vos filium, non blasphemamus in Dominum Deum: non enim ex divina sed ex humana substantia mortuum dicimus. Baur (Lehre v. d. Dreieinigkeit, i. 246) and Meier (Lehre v. d. Trinität, i. 77) are of opinion that Praxeas held the view that God connected himself immediately with the flesh, without the medium of a rational human soul. But Tertullian, in express terms, explains carnem by hominem; and when Praxeas said, filium carnem esse, he could not possibly declare a body animated by a mere ψυχή to be filius Dei.—Comp. Neander's Antignosticus, S. 481.

notwithstanding the opposition of Tertullian, appears to have been unmolested in Rome on account of his doctrine.⁵ But Theodotus (ὁ σκυτεύς) who had come to Rome from Byzantium about the same time, was excluded from church-communion by Victor, when he declared Christ to be a mere man; and his disciples (Theodotus ὁ τραπεζίτης, Asclepiades, Natalius Confessor) continued to exist in Rome for some time separated from the church.⁶ By means of these Theodotians, however, the Monarchian doctrine generally became so notorious, that Artemon (Artemas) under bishop Zephyrinus, although he did not agree with the Theodotians, was included in the same class with them, and attacked in various writings.⁷ Hence this theory was rendered suspicious every where, even in Asia where it took its rise; and Noetus was excommunicated in Smyrna (about 230) on account of his doctrine, which harmonized with that of Praxeas.⁸ On the other hand, Origen succeeded in

App. l. de Praescr. 53: Post hos omnes etiam Praxeas quidam haeresin introduxit, quam Victorinus (Victor?) corroborare curavit. Cf. note 7.

¹⁰ His doctrine according to Basilus Epist. 210: Τὸν αὐτὸν θεὸν ἕνα τῷ ὑποκειμένῳ [τῇ ὑποστάσει, Ep. 214] ὄντα. πρὸς τὰς ἐκάστοτε παραπιπτούσας χρείας μεταμορφούμενον (μετασχηματιζόμενον, Ep. 235: προσωποποιούμενον, Ep. 214), υἱὸν μὲν ὡς πατέρα, υἱὸν δὲ ὡς υἱὸν, υἱὸν δὲ ὡς πνεῦμα ἅγιον διαλέγεσθαι. Cf. Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 11: Τὸν θεὸν σιωπῶντα μὲν ἀνερέγγον, λαλοῦντα δὲ ἰσχύειν). Theodoret. Haer. fab. comp. ii. 9, 'Ἐν μὲν τῇ παλαιᾷ ὡς πατέρα νομοθετήσαι, ἐν δὲ τῇ καινῇ ὡς υἱὸν ἐνανθρωπήσαι· ὡς πνεῦμα δὲ ἅγιον τοῖς ἀποστόλοις ἐπιφωτηθῆσαι.—(τρία πρόσωπα). Eusebio-Greg. Thaumast. ἡ κατὰ μέρος πίστις (in Ang. Maji Scriptt. vett. nova collectio. vii. 1, 171): 'Ἀποφεύγομεν τὸν Σαβέλλιον λέγοντα τὸν αὐτὸν πατέρα, τὸν αὐτὸν υἱὸν· πατέρα μὲν γὰρ λέγει εἶναι τὸν λαλοῦντα, υἱὸν δὲ τὸν λόγον ἐν τῷ πατρὶ μένοντα, καὶ κατὰ καιρὸν τῆς δημιουργίας φαινόμενον, ἔπειτα μετὰ τὴν ἰπάντων πλήρωσιν τὸν πραγματῶν εἰς θεὸν ἀνατρέχοντα. Τὸ αὐτὸ δὲ καὶ περὶ τοῦ πνεύματος λέγει. Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 12: 'Ἡ μονὰς πλατυθεῖσα γέγονε τριάς. Ib. 13: Συστέλλεσθαι καὶ πάλιν ἐκτείνεσθαι τὸν θεὸν, respecting this ἔκτασις καὶ συστολή, see the Clementinen und Philo above, § 58, note 13). Ib. 25: 'Ὡσπερ διαιρέεις χαρισμάτων εἰσὶ, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ πνεῦμα, οὕτω καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ὁ αὐτὸς μὲν ἐστὶ, πλατύνεται δὲ εἰς υἱὸν καὶ πνεῦμα. Arii epist. ad Alexandrum Alex. ap. Eriphan. Haeres. 69: Σαβέλλιος τὴν μονάδα διαιρῶν υἰοπάτορα εἶπεν. (Gregorius Nyss. contra Arium et Sabellium in Ang. Maji Scriptt. vett. nova coll. viii. ii. 1: 1: Οἱ κατὰ Σαβέλλιον—ἀναιρεῖν μὲν πειρῶνται τὴν ὑπόστασιν τοῦ υἱοῦ, αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν πατέρα ἕνα ὄντα ὁσὶν ὀνόμασι γεραίρονται οἰόμενοι, υἰοπάτορα προσαγορεύουσιν). According to Eriphanus Haer. lxii. 1, he compared the Godhead to the sun, ὄντι μὲν ἐν μιᾷ ὑποστάσει, τρεῖς δὲ ἔχοντι τὰς ἐνεργείας, namely, τὴς περιφερείας σχῆμα, οὐ τὸ εἶδος πάσης τῆς ὑποστάσεως, τὸ φωτιστικόν, and τὸ θάλαπον. The Monas is the divine essence in itself, in its concealed state, which reveals itself in the trias, by interchangeably assuming three characters (πρόσωπα) according to the nature of the revelations. These three πρόσωπα are ὁ πατήρ, ὁ υἱός, τὸ πνεῦμα. The Logos is never called a second prosopon, but it is the Logos which became man, and, as such, took the name ὁ υἱός (Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 22: 'Ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν λόγον

to refute him by personal interviews and letters, and in unfolding antagonist views, went so far as to make new and objectionable assertions. Sabellians were found so late as the fourth century, in Rome and Mesopotamia. Still greater offense was given by Paul of Samosata, who, being at the same time bishop of Antioch (from 265) and holding a civil office,¹¹ exhibited a vanity and love of display hitherto unexampled in a Christian bishop. While he maintained with strictness the unity of God, he declared Jesus to be a man begotten by the Holy Spirit, on whom the Divine wisdom descending exerted its influence in a peculiar manner.¹² Three councils ἀπλῶς· ὅτε δὲ ἐνηνθρόπησε, τότε ὠνομάσθαι υἱόν). Hence Baur's opinion (Dreieinigkeit, i. 261) is very probable that, in the sense of Sabellius, the Logos, in opposition to the Monas, is the manifested God generally, and that the three πόσωπα are to be considered as the changing forms of the Logos. If in some accounts the divine essence is styled ὁ πατήρ generally, this may have been done by Sabellius, as well as, according to the Catholic doctrine, ὁ πατήρ may even designate the triune God οὐσιωδῶς. Finally, with regard to the question whether Sabellius considered the πρόσωπον of the Son as a transitory appearance united to the earthly existence of Jesus (as Baur, l. c. p. 266, thinks), or whether he believed that the person of Christ should cease to be only with the final consummation (according to Neander, i. ii. 1031), Gregory of Nyssa decides in favor of the former view, contra Arium et Sabellium in Ang. Maji Coll. viii. ii. 4: Οἱ δὲ κατὰ Σαβέλλιον—εἰς τὴν μεγίστην τῆς ἀσεβείας ἐκπεπτόκασι πλάνην, οἴομενοι διὰ μὲν λειποταξίαν ἀνθρωπίνην προεληλυθέναι τὸν υἱὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς προκαιρῶς· αὐτὸς δὲ μετὰ τὴν διόρθωσιν τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων πλημμελημάτων ἀναλελυκὸτα ἐνδύναί τε καὶ ἀναμεμίχθαι τῷ πατρὶ.

¹¹ He was a Ducenarius, Euseb. vii. 30. We must not here think of the Ducenarii whom Augustus created as the fourth decuria of knights, so called because they must have property to the amount of duccena sestertia (Sueton. Octav. c. 32), but the ducenarii procuratores, officers of a higher rank, who had so much yearly revenue, to whom Claudius granted the ornamenta consularia (Sueton. Claud. c. 24), and who still continued under Constantine (Cod. Justin. x. 19, 1).

¹² His history is given in Euseb. vii. 27–30. Here also, cap. 30, is found the historical part of the circular letter of the last council of Antioch which was held against him. Doctrinal fragments of the same are given in Leontii Byz. contra Nestor. et Eutych. lib. iii. in the Greek original from a Bodleian MS. apud J. G. Ehrlich diss. de erroribus Pauli Samos. Lips. 1745. 4, p. 23. Among other original documents put together in the collection of councils (apud Mansi, i. 1033), the Epist. Episcoporum ad Paulum is still the most trustworthy. The others are partly suspicious, partly spurious beyond a doubt; such as the epistle of Dionysius Alex. ad Paulum.—Fragments of Paul himself are found in the Contestatio ad Clerum Constantinop. in the Acts of the council of Ephesus apud Mansi v. 393, ap. Leontius, l. c. In Greek from a Paris MS. in J. G. Feuerlini diss. de haeresi Pauli Sam. Gotting. 1741. 4, p. 10, and in Justiniani Imp. lib. contra Monophysitas in Ang. Maji Nova collect. vii. i. 299: The texts contain much that agrees word for word, and may be supplemented and improved by each other. Besides fragments of Paul ἐκ τῶν πρὸς Σαβιανὸν (or Σαβιτινὸν) λόγων from a Clermont MS. in Feuerlini diss. p. 15, more correctly from a Vatican MS. in Ang. Maji Nova coll. vii. i. 68.—The doctrine of Paul was, according to Eriphanus Haer. lxxvi. 1: Ἐν θεῷ αἱ ἐντα τὸν αὐτοῦ Λόγον, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ, ὡς περ ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ καρδίᾳ ἐ ὁ ἴδιος λόγος· μὴ εἶναι δὲ τὸν υἱὸν ἐνυπόστατον, ἀλλὰ ἐν αὐτῷ θεῷ (ἐπιστήμην ἀνυπόστατον, Epist. At the last of them (269), he was convicted of heresy, by Malechion, his opinion having been hitherto disguised under ambiguous expressions, and deposed from his office.¹³ But his newly elected successor, bishop Domnus, could not take possession of his office until Zenobia, the patroness of Paul, had been defeated by Aurelian (272).¹⁴ The party of Paul (Samosateniani, Pauliani, Paulianistae) existed till the fourth century.¹⁵

Since the Syrian Gnosis, which had spread even to Persia,² presented so many points of union with the doctrine of Zoroaster,³ it is not surprising that the Persian Gnostics should have been led to connect their Christianity still more closely with the Zend doctrine.⁴ After the spiritual aspect of the religion of Zoroaster had declined under the Arsacidae, and become a rude dualism and mere ceremonial worship, the Sassanides (from 227) did every thing in their power to restore its ancient splendor. In the assemblies of the Magi a supreme principle was acknowledged (Zeruane akerene); and, on the other hand, unqualified dualism with its adherents (Magusaeans, al thanavia) condemned. These commotions in the bosom of Parsism probably gave rise to the attempt of Manes to unite Christianity with the system of these Magusacans.⁵ Eastern and western writers differ from one another not only in the name of this sect-founder (Mani—Cubricus, Manes, Manichæus), but also in their accounts of him.⁶ They agree only in this, that he was hated by the Magi, persecuted by the Persian kings, compelled to flee, and lastly, at the command of a king (according to the orientals, Baharam or Bararanes I., from 272-275) barbarously put to death, as a corrupter of religion, in a fort or castle (according to the oriental writers, Dascarrah, according to the occidental, Arabion).

His system of religion rests on the assumption of two everlasting kingdoms coexisting and bordering on each other, the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness, the former under the dominion of God, the latter under the demon or Hyle. After the borders had been broken through by a war between the two kingdoms, and the material of light had been mixed with the material of darkness, God caused the world to be formed by the living spirit (ζῶν πνεῦμα, spiritus vivens) out of this mixed material, in order that by degrees the material of light here captured (anima and Jesus patibilis) might be again separated and the old boundaries restored. Two exalted natures of light, Christ (whom Mani calls in preference dextra luminis, τοῦ αἰδίου φωτὸς νιός, &c.) and the Holy Spirit, the former dwelling in the sun and moon (naves), the latter in the air, conduct this process of bringing back the material of light; while the demon and the evil spirits, fettered to the stars, endeavor to hinder them. In every man there dwells an evil soul besides the soul of light;⁷ and it is his commission to secure to the latter the sway over the former, to unite with it as many as possible of the elements of light, which are scattered in nature, especially in certain plants, and thus to free it from the fetters of the evil principle, and prepare the way for its return to the kingdom of light.⁸ After men had long been led astray by the demon, by means of false religions (Judaism and Heathenism), Christ descended from the sun to earth in the appearance of a body, to lead them to the worship of the true God, and by his doctrine to help the souls of light in their struggles for liberty. But his instructions were not fully understood even by the apostles, and after his death were still more falsified by the Christians.⁹ Hence he promised a still greater apostle, the παράκλητος, who should separate all that was false, and announce the truth in perfection and purity.¹⁰ This person appeared in Mani. The Manichaeans accordingly rejected entirely the Old Testament.¹¹ All that they thought they could make use of in favor of their doctrine belonging to the canonical and apocryphal writings of the New Testament, was regarded by them as a remnant of the original truth. Whatever was opposed to their views was supposed to be error which had been subsequently mixed up with the truth.¹² Thus, they appealed, where it served their purpose, to the canonical gospels¹³ and the epistles of St. Paul as well as to apocryphal gospels without entirely adopting these writings,¹⁴ but at the same time, without attempting to purge them from error, as Marcion did. Since they found least truth in the history of the apostles written by Luke, they confronted this canonical production with another, under the name of Lucius or Leucius.¹⁵ All these writings could not be canonical in their estimation, meaning by that term, absolutely authoritative. The works of Mani alone were canonical.¹⁶

¹⁰ Mani begins his Epistola fundamenti (ap. Augustinum contra epist. Manichaei, c. 5) thus: Manichaeus Apostolus Jesu Christi providentia Dei patris. Haec sunt salubria verba de perenni et vivo fonte, quae qui audierit et eisdem primum crediderit, deinde quae insinuant custodierit, nunquam erit morti obnoxius, verum aeterna et gloriosa vita fruetur, caet.—The Manichaeon Felix (Augustin. de Act. cum Felice, i. 9): Paulus in altera epistola dicit: “Ex parte scimus et ex parte prophetamus: cum venerit autem quod perfectum est, abolebuntur ea, quae ex parte dicta sunt.” (1 Cor. xiii. 9, 10.) Nos audientes Paulum hoc dicere, venit Manichaeus cum praedicatione sua et suscepimus eum secundum quod Christus dixit: “Mitto vobis spiritum sanctum.”—Et quia venit Manichaeus, et per suam praedicationem docuit nos initium, medium et finem: docuit nos de fabrica mundi, quare facta est, et unde facta est, et qui fecerunt: docuit nos, quare dies et quare nox: docuit nos de cursu solis et lunae: quia hoc in Paulo non audivimus, nec in caeterorum Apostolorum scripturis: hoc credimus, quia ipse est Paracletus. Itaque illud iterum dico, quod superius dixi: si audiero in altera scriptura, ubi Paracletus loquitur, de quo voluero interrogare, et docueris me, credo et renuntio.—Without doubt, Manes made a distinction between the Holy Spirit and the Paraclete, but was misunderstood by the Catholics (for example Euseb. H. E. 7, 31: Τοτὲ μὲν τὸν Παράκλητον καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ ἅγιον αὐτὸς εαυτὸν ἀνακηρύττων).

Their morality had for its object to procure for the good the ¹⁴ Cyrillus Hieros. Catech. iv. and vi. pronounces the gospel of Thomas to be a Manichaean production, and many have followed him; but the Manicheans may have quoted it for particular sentiments, without entirely adopting it (see Thilo Cod. apocr. N. T. Proleg. p. lxxx.). The gospel of Philip was of Gnostic origin, which document is said to have been used also by the Manichaeans, Trechsel, S. 59.—A catalogue of such writings, which in part at least may have been first used by the later Manichaeans, may be found in Timotheus (presb. There have been published Acta S. Thomae Apostoli ed. J. C. Thilo. Lips. 1823. 8. Comp. the Prolegomena to this work, p. lx. Respecting the person of Leucius, the most contradictory accounts are given (Trechsel, S. 61). It is highly probable that he is a mythic collective for all heretical histories of the apostles, and that the name was modeled after that of Luke.

These four works Manes is said to have appropriated from the remains of Scythianus. Besides these there are several letters of his: Epist. fundamenti (Augustini lib. contra epist. Manichaei, quam vocant fundamenti), Ep. ad filiam Menoch (Fragments in August. Opus imperfect. lib. iii.). Fragments of the letters ad Zebenam, ad Scythianum, ad Odan, ad Cudarum in Fabricii Bibl. dominion over the bad soul, by a rigid self-denial. It was divided into the signaculum oris, sign. manus, and sign. sinus. It imposed on the baptized members (electi, perfecti, τέλειοι) so great privations, that most adherents of the sect remained catechumens (auditores) as long as possible, for the sake of being released from the observance of the most stringent laws. The worship of the Manichaeans was very simple. They celebrated Sunday by fasting; the day of Mani's death by a yearly festival (βήμα). Baptism, which was administered with oil,¹⁷ and the Lord's Supper belonged to the secret worship of the electi.

Mani himself sent out twelve apostles to propagate his doctrine, in like manner afterward electi were constantly dispatched for this purpose. Hence the party remained in very close union. At the head of them was one person, to whom 12 magistri immediately, and next the 72 bishops of the churches, were subordinate. Many followers were attracted by the historical form in which Mani endeavored to explain so much that is incomprehensible,¹⁸ and by the asceticism of his adherents. Accordingly, the Manichaeans spread, soon after the death of their founder, into proconsular Africa, and even further in the Roman dominions, although they were opposed with vehemence, not only by the catholic church, but were also persecuted by heathen emperors,¹⁹ who enacted bloody laws against them as a sect derived from the hostile Persians.

ALEXANDRIAN SCHOOL.

J. G. Michaelis de Scholae Alexandrinae sic dictae catecheticae origine, progressu ac praecipuis doctoribus (Symbolae literariae. i. iii. 195. Breae. 1745). J. F. Hilscher de Schola Alexandrina. IN the present period, Christian theology was cultivated especially at Alexandria, at that time the seat of all the sciences, where the catholic teachers, even by their external relations to the heathen and Gnostics, were compelled to enter philosophically into the doctrines of Christianity.¹ Here began to be very soon felt the necessity of an instruction beyond the usual one given to catechumens, as well for the philosophical proselytes as for those who were to become teachers. After many persons thirsting for knowledge had been in this way collected about some distinguished man, the institution of the *Alexandrian catechetical school*² attached itself to those prior individual efforts

² Euseb. v. 10 (speaking of the time of Commodus): 'Ἡγεῖτο δὲ τῆνικαὐτὰ τῆς τῶν πιστῶν αὐτόθι (κατ' Ἀλεξάνδρειαν) διατριβῆς ἀνὴρ κατὰ παιδείαν ἐνδοξότατος, ὄνομα αὐτῷ Πάνταινος· ἐξ ἀρχαίου ἔθους διδασκαλείου τῶν ἱερῶν λόγων παρ' αὐτοῖς συνεστῶτος, ὃ καὶ εἰς ἡμᾶς παρατίθεται, καὶ πρὸς τῶν ἐν λόγῳ καὶ τῇ περὶ τὰ θεῖα σπουδῇ δυνατῶν συγκροτεῖσθαι παρεῖληφμεν. This account is given more fully by Jerome, in Catal. 36: Pantaeus, stoicae sectae philosophus, juxta quandam veterem in Alexandria consuetudinem, ubi a Marco Evangelista semper ecclesiastici fuerunt doctores, tantae prudentiae et eruditionis tam in Scripturis divinis, quam in saeculari literatura fuit, ut in Indiam quoque—mittereshortly before the present period. The height of its prosperity falls under this very time, and its distinguished teachers (κατηχήσεων magistri, Hieron. Cat. c. 38), Pantaenus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origenes, Heraclas, Dionysius,³ (Pierius and Theognostus?) are the only persons by whom Christian theology was now advanced. The Alexandrian school took its peculiar direction from its very first teachers. Pantaenus, a Stoic philosopher, is otherwise unknown; and we can only judge of him by his pupil Titus Flavius Clemens. The peculiarity of the Alexandrian school is already stamped on the writings of the latter, who was president of the catechetical institution from about 191 till 202, then fled in the persecution raised by Severus, and probably returned to Alexandria († about 220).⁴ But the characteristics of the school were completely developed and matured by the great Origen (ὁ χαλκέντερος, ὁ ἀδαμάντιος) the son of the martyr Leonides, who died in 202. When a youth of eighteen he was a catechist at Alexandria,⁵ and procured for himself a great reputation even in other places. But he displeased his bishop, Demetrius, by being consecrated presbyter at Caesarea (228), went thither in 231, and was then excluded from communion with the church by Demetrius on account of his peculiar opinions. The churches in Palestine, Arabia, and Achaia, paid no regard, however, to this excommunication; and Origen not only continued to fill the office of presbyter in Caesarea, but likewise gave instruction in the sciences. Besides this, the revision of the corrupted Septuagint (τὰ ἐξαπλᾶ) occupied him for twenty-eight years. During this time he was twice invited to synods which were held in Arabia against heretics; and both times he succeeded in convincing them of their errors (Beryllus of Bostra, 244—Arabici, 248). So distinguished a teacher of Christianity could not be overlooked in persecutions. He escaped from Maximin the Thracian by fleeing to his friend Firmilian, bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia. But in the Decian persecution he suffered so much ill usage in Tyre, that he died there some years after († 254).⁶

⁴ Writings: λόγος προτρεπτικός πρὸς Ἕλληνας—παιδαγωγός 3 books—στρώματα or στρωματίεις libb. viii. (cf. Photii. Cod. cx. λόγος, τίς ὁ σωζόμενος πλούσιος (c. comment. C. Segaar. Traj. ad Rh. 1816. 8). With others of his writings have been also unfortunately lost the ὑποτιπώσεις in 8 books, in which later orthodoxy found many ἄσεβεις καὶ μνῆδεις λόγους (See Photius Cod. 109). The fragments of it have been collected by Potter in his edition of Clement, vol. ii. p. 1006, ss. A small portion of it, Remarks on the Catholic epistles, has been preserved in a Latin translation under the title of Adumbrationes Clem. Alex. (best ed. Potter, l. c.); probably the same of which Cassiodorus de Institut. div. lit. c. 8, says, that he had prepared it ut exclusis quibusdam offendiculis purificata doctrina ejus securior possit hauriri. Comp. Lücke's Comm. über die Schriften Johannis, 2te Auflage, iii. 77. Kritik, for 1838, i. 157, and Redepenning's Origenes, i. 202.—According to Porphyry Origen was also a hearer of Ammonius Saccas (Euseb. vi. 19), which appears to be con

The Alexandrians set a very high value on philosophy, both because it was formerly among the heathen what the law was among the Jews, a preparation for Christianity, and because by it alone a deeper knowledge of Christian doctrine is opened up, (γνώσις, hence γνωστικοί, in Origen σοφία, ἡ θεία σοφία).¹ This γνώσις was certainly different from the ψευδώνυμος γνώσις of the errorists; since the received doctrines of the church (πίστις),² as molded and modified in express opposition to the Gnostics, were adopted as an immutable basis for the orthodox Gnosis. Yet these orthodox Gnostics were led by the connection of certain general philosophical principles and opinions with Christianity, to many speculations which were very like those of their heretical brethren. Like them too, they believed that their Gnosis³ had been handed down as a mysterious doctrine;⁴ and that it should be communicated only to the initiated.⁵ Hence Origen writes about such doctrines with visible hesitation, and warns in particular, against bringing them before the people.⁶ Toward the uninitiated, the Alexandrians regarded ὡς ἀνθρώπου, διὰ τῆς τῶν θεῶν ἐπιστήμης συμπληρουμένη, κατὰ τε τὸν τρόπον καὶ τὸν βίον καὶ τὸν λόγον σύμφωνος καὶ ὁμόλογος ἐαυτῇ τε καὶ τῷ θεῷ λόγῳ. ⁶ Thus the doctrine of the termination of future punishment. Respecting his views de

a certain accommodation as necessary, which might venture even to make use of falsehood for the attainment of a good end, yea, which was obliged to do so;⁷ and hence they did not scruple to acknowledge in many ecclesiastical doctrines such an accommodation.⁸

The Alexandrian theology set out with the most elevated idea of God, and strove to keep far away from it all anthropopathic limitations. In like manner it declared the freedom of the rational being to be inalienable; and asserted for the purpose of removing from the Deity every idea of groundless caprice, that the external circumstances of all morally free beings can be conditioned only by their moral state. Since, at the same time, this theology assumed that the world was created only on account of rational beings, and conformably to their moral necessities, the existence of evil in the present world was thereby explained, and the necessity of a succession of worlds was established, so far as the moral conditions of those beings change. The most remarkable of their principles which result from these premises, and appear fully unfolded in Origen, are the following :

1. The Godhead can never be idle. Before the present world there was an endless series of worlds, and an infinite succession of them will follow it.⁹

2. All intellectual beings (angels, stars, men, demons) were originally created alike, but they were never without bodies, since incorporeality is a peculiar prerogative of Deity. After a great moral inequality had arisen among them by their difference of conduct, God created the present world, which affords a dwelling-place to all classes in correspondence with their moral condition. The fallen intellectual beings he put into bodies more or less gross, according to the measure of their sinfulness.¹⁰ Still they all retain their moral freedom, so that they may rise again from the degraded circumstances in which they exist. Even the punishments of the condemned are not eternal, but only remedial; the devil himself being capable of amelioration and pardon.¹¹ When the world shall have answered its purpose, as the abode of fallen spirits, it will then be destroyed by fire; and by this very fire souls will be completely purified from all stains contracted by intimate union with the body.¹²

¹² Clemens Strom. vii. c. 6, in fine p. 851. (Cf. Hofstede de Groot Disp. de Clem. Alex. p. 108, ss.) Origenes in Exod. xv. 5 (Hom. vi. in Exod. ed. de la Rue, t. ii. p. 148): Idcirco igitur qui salvus fit, per ignem salvus fit, ut si quid forte speciei plumbi habuerit admixtum,

But as spirits always retain their freedom, they may also sin again, in which case a new world like this will be again necessary.

3. The Alexandrians speak of the Logos,¹³ the mediator of all Divine agency, in very exalted, but not always definite expressions. Evidently, however, they place him beneath the supreme God.¹⁴ Their endeavor to remove all ideas unworthy of God id ignis decoquat, et resolvat, ut efficiantur omnes aurum bonum. Veniendum est ergo omnibus ad ignem, veniendum est ad conflatorium. Sedet enim Dominus, et conflatur, et purgat filios Juda (Mal. iii. 3). Sed et illuc cum venitur, si quis multa opera bona, et parum aliquid iniquitatis attulerit, illud parum tanquam plumbum igni resolvitur ac purgatur, et totum remanet aurum purum. Et si quis plus illuc plumbi detulerit, plus exuritur, ut amplius decoquatur ut etsi parum aliquid sit auri, purgatum tamen resideat. Quod si aliquis illuc totus plumbeus venerit, fiet de illo hoc quod scriptum est, demergetur in profundum. tanquam plumbum in aquam validissimam. Homil. xiv. in Lucam (t. iii. p. 948): Ego puto, quod et post resurrectionem ex mortuis indigeamus sacramento eluente nos atque purgante: nemo enim absque sordibus resurgere poterit. C. Εἰκὼν γάρ ἐστι τῆς ἀγαθότητος αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀπαύγασμα οὐ τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ, καὶ τοῦ αἰδίου φωτός αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡμῖς οὐ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀλλὰ τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὑπόβροια εἰλικρινῆς τῆς παντοκρατορικῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔσποπρον ἀκηλίδωτον τῆς ἐνεργείας αὐτοῦ, δι' οὗ ἐσόπρον Παῦλος καὶ Πέτρος, καὶ οἱ παρακλητοὶ αὐτοῖς βλεπόνουσι τὸν θεόν, λέγοντος· ὁ ἑώρακὸς ἐμὲ ἑώρακε τὸν πατέρα, τὸν πέμψαντά με. De Princ. i. 2, 13: Οὕτω from the generation of the Son, was completed by Origen in his assertions that the Logos did not proceed from the essence of the Father,¹⁵ but as a constant ray of the Divine glory¹⁶ was brought forth, i. e., created, or generated¹⁷ by the will of God,¹⁸ and that from eternity.¹⁹ But he taught that τοῖνον ἡγοῦμαι καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ σωτῆρος καλῶς ἂν λεχθῆσθεσθαι, ὅτι εἰκὼν ἀγαθότητος τοῦ θεοῦ ἐστίν, ἀλλ' οὐκ αὐτοαγαθὸν· καὶ τάχα καὶ υἱὸς ἀγαθὸς ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἀπλῶς ἀγαθός. καὶ ὡσπερ εἰκὼν ἐστὶ τοῦ θεοῦ τοῦ ὁρατοῦ, καὶ κατὰ τοῦτο θεός, ἀλλ' οὐ περὶ οὐ λέγει αὐτὸς ὁ Χριστὸς “ἵνα γινώσκωσι σε τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν θεόν.” οὕτως εἰκὼν ἀγαθότητος, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ὁ πατὴρ ἀπαραλλάκτως ἀγαθός.

¹⁸ So already Clement, Redepenning's Origines, i. 109, Origines in Genesis (ap. Eusebius contra Marcellum, i. c. 4, ap. de la Rue ii. p. 1) : Οὐ γὰρ ὁ θεὸς πατὴρ εἶναι ἤρξυτο, κωλύμενος, ὡς οἱ γενόμενοι πατέρες ἄνθρωποι, ὑπὸ τοῦ μὴ δύνασθαι πῶ πατέρες εἶναι. Εἰ γὰρ αἱ τέλειος ὁ θεός, καὶ ἄπειστον αὐτῷ δύναμις τοῦ πατέρα αὐτὸν εἶναι, καὶ καλὸν, αὐτὸν εἶναι πατέρα τοῦ τοιοῦτου υἱοῦ· τί ἀναβύλλεται, καὶ ἑαυτὸν τοῦ καλοῦ στήρισκε, καὶ, ὡς ἐστὶν εἰπεῖν, ἐξ οὐ δύναται πατὴρ εἶναι υἱοῦ. Τὸ αὐτὸ μέντοιγε καὶ περὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος λεκτέον. But according to Methodius ap. Photius Cod. 235, Origen also asserted on like grounds συναίδιον εἶναι τῷ—θεῷ τὸ πᾶν. Comp. de Princ. i. 2, 2, iv. 28. The fragment of Origen ap. Athanasius de Decretis syn. Nic. c. 27, is very like the last passage : Ὁμοίότης τυγχάνων τοῦ πατρὸς (ὁ υἱὸς) οὐκ ἐστὶν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν. Πότε γὰρ ὁ θεός—ἀπαύγασμα οὐκ εἶχε τῆς ἰδίας δόξης, ἵνα τολμήσας τις ἀρχὴν δῶ εἶναι υἱοῦ πρότερον οὐκ ὄντος ; κατανοεῖτω γὰρ ὁ τολμῶν καὶ λέγων “ἦν ποτε ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ὁ υἱός,” ὅτι ἐρεῖ καὶ τὸ· σοφία ποτὲ οὐκ ἦν, καὶ λόγος οὐκ ἦν, καὶ ζωὴ οὐκ ἦν. Orig. Comm. in Joh. p. 33 : Τὸ υἱὸς μὲν εἶ σὺ, ἐγὼ σήμερον γεγέννηκά σε, λέγεται πρὸς αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ ᾧ αἱ ἐστὶ τὸ σήμερον.—ὁ συμπαρεκτείνων τῇ ἀγεννητῷ καὶ αἰδίῳ αὐτοῦ ζωῇ—χρόνος ἡμέρα ἐστὶν αὐτῷ σήμερον, ἐν ἧ γεγέννηται ὁ υἱός. In Jeremian Hom. ix. (t. iii. p. 181) : Οὐχὶ ἐγέννησεν ὁ πατὴρ τὸν υἱόν, καὶ ἀπέλευσεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατὴρ ἀπὸ τῆς γενέσεως αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ' αἱ ἐστὶν γεννᾶ αὐτόν. So, according to Plotinus, the υἱὸς also has originated eternally from the One, and the expression generation denotes merely αἰτίαν καὶ τάξιν, Tennemann's Gesch. d. Philos. vi. 89.

¹⁹ Every human term to express this production could not be a fit representative, but only an incomplete symbol. Thus, as far as the Logos was a being like to God, his origination was a γεννᾶν, so far as he was produced by the will of God, a ποιεῖν, κτίζειν. Respecting Clement, see Photius Cod. 109 : τὸν υἱὸν εἰς κτίσμα κατάγει (namely, in the Hypotyposes). Even Rufinus de Adulterat. libb. Origenis confesses : Interdum invenimus aliqua in libris ejus (Clementis) capitula, in quibus filium Dei creaturam dicit ; although the Holy Ghost was a creature created by the Son, as all other things.²⁰

4. The human body assumed by the Logos was a real body, but could not have been a common one. According to Clement, it was united immediately with the Logos, and therefore, as is required by the Divine ἀπάθεια of the latter, without πάθη.²¹ Origen taught expressly a human soul in the person of Christ, with which the Logos united itself directly.²² Thus those πάθη were he would fain regard these passages as spurious. Clemens Strom. v. p. 699: 'Ἡ σοφία ἡ πρωτόκτιστος τῷ θεῷ. So also Origines Comm. in Joh. tom. i. 22: Κτίσας—ἐμφύχον σοφίαν ὁ θεός. Contra Celsum, v. p. 357, the Son is πρεσβύτατον πάντων τῶν δημιουργημάτων. So also Justinian, l. c. accuses Origen of calling the Son κτίσμα, de Princip. lib. iv. These expressions were now generally used by others since in Prov. viii. 22: Κύριος ἐκτίσέ με ἀρχὴν ὁδῶν αὐτοῦ was a cardinal passage relating to the Logos. See Münster's Dogmengesch. i. 445.—The question whether the Son was of the divine essence was capable of receiving a twofold answer from the standing-point of Origen. De Princip. iv. 36, according to the translation of Jerome (Epist. ad Avitum): Intellectualem rationabilemque naturam sentit Deus et unigenitus Filius ejus et Spiritus sanctus; sentit in angeli et potestatis, caeteraque virtutes; sentit interior homo qui ad imaginem et similitudinem Dei conditus est. Ex quo concluditur. Deum et haec quodammodo unius esse substantiae. Fragm. ex libris in Epist. ad Hebr. in the apology of Pamphilus: Christus—secundum similitudinem ejus vaporis, qui de substantia aliqua corporea procedit, sic etiam ipse ut quidam vapor exoritur de virtute ipsius Dei.—Sic nihilominus et secundum similitudinem corporalis aporrhoeae esse dicitur aporrhoea gloriae Omnipotentis pura quaedam et sincera. Quae utraeque similitudines manifestissime ostendunt, communionem substantiae esse Filio cum Patre. Aporrhoea enim ὁμοούσιος videtur, i. e., unius substantiae cum illo corpore, ex quo est vel aporrhoea, vel vapor. Selecta in Psalm 135: 'Ὁ σωτὴρ οὐ κατὰ μετουσίαν, ἀλλὰ κατ' οὐσίαν ἐστὶ θεός. On the other hand de Oratione c. 50: 'Ἐτερος κατ' οὐσίαν καὶ ὑποκειμένον ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ πατρὸς. Comp. Comm. in Joh. tom. ii. 18. The Son was of the divine essence, but did not partake of the divine essence of the Father.

no stumbling-block to him, since the soul was affected only through them. On the contrary, in his opinion, the body of Christ, as an appropriate instrument of revelation, was so constituted as, according to the degree of their merit, either to conceal the majesty of the Logos from men, or to allow it to shine through with more or less radiance.²³ Clement, as well as Origen, decidedly opposed the docetic views.²⁴

5. The Christian sage (ὁ γνωστικός), in the way the Alexandrians represent him as a pattern, is said to be elevated above the simple believer, not merely by higher perception, but also by a higher virtue which is entirely dispassionate.²⁵ The aim of this virtue is likeness to God,²⁶ its basis, freedom from all the restraints of sensuality,²⁷ its character the highest disinterestedness.²⁸

Comment. series, § 100: Venit traditio talis ad nos de Jesu, quoniam non solum duae formae in eo fuerunt, una quidem secundum quam omnes eum videbant, altera autem secundum quam transfiguratus est coram discipulis suis in monte:—sed etiam unicuique apparebat secundum quod fuerat dignus. Et non mihi videtur incredibilis esse traditio haec, sive corporaliter propter ipsum Jesum, ut, alio et alio modo videretur hominibus, sive propter ipsam Verbi naturam, quod non similiter cunctis apparet. Contra Celsum, iv. 16: Εἰσὶ γὰρ διάφοροι οἰοεὶ τοῦ Λόγου μορφαί, καθὼς ἐκάστῳ τῶν εἰς ἐπιστήμην ἀγομένων φαίνεται ὁ Λόγος, ἀνάλογον τῇ ἔξει τοῦ εἰσαγομένου, ἢ ἐπ' ὀλίγον προκόπτουτος, ἢ ἐπὶ πλείον, κ. τ. λ. My Comm. p. 15.

7. Since, in the view of the Alexandrians, the body is merely a prison of the true Me, they also assumed that souls, at the time of the resurrection, would not resume the gross material body, but one of fine, incorruptible texture.³⁰

To establish this system from the Holy Scriptures the Alexandrians availed themselves of the allegorical mode of interpretation which had been in use before. But after the interpretation of Scripture had been thus made a mere arbitrary play of fancy till now, Origen gained for himself the merit of reinstating the grammatical interpretation in its rights, by a more accurate distinction between the literal, the moral, and the mystical (mystic-anagogic and mystic-allegorical) sense.³¹ In his commentaries he has furnished rich contributions toward the grammatical interpretation, by which means he became the chief source for succeeding commentators.

(CONTINUATION.)—ADHERENTS AND OPPOSERS OF ORIGEN.

Origen's peculiar opinions met, even in his lifetime, with as many opponents as friends,¹ and excited suspicion in many bishops.² He and his disciples, however, succeeded in combating and refuting many sensuous views and expectations which were then current among Christians. Thus some overvalued the importance of the body in the personality of man, so much as to suppose that the soul dies, and is again raised along with it.³ Origen overthrew this error, when it appeared in Arabia.⁴ To his most distinguished disciple Dionysius (president of the catechetical school from 233, from 248 bishop in Alexandria, † 265)⁵ belongs the merit of having victoriously continued in the east the opposition to chiliasm begun by his master. An opportunity for this was furnished to him by an Egyptian bishop, Nepos, who, in the ἐλεγχος Ἀλληγοριστῶν, insisted particularly on the literal acceptation of the Apocalypse, and the description of the millennium contained in it. Doubtless the Decian persecution, which soon followed, contributed to procure many advocates to a view which furnished so strong motives to Christian steadfastness, especially in the province of Arsinoe. But after the persecution, Dionysius succeeded by oral representations and his work περὶ ἐπαγγελιῶν, not only in convincing that party of their error, but also in banishing chiliasm entirely among the theologians of the eastern church.⁶ Similar opposition he presented to Sabellius. It is true, that in trying to develop more precisely the Origenist distinctions as adverse to Sabellius' doctrine of the Trinity, he gave offense by designating the Logos a creature of the Father,⁷ and was therefore blamed by the Romish Dionysius; but the many-sided views which he had from Origen permitted him to cloak his view of the Logos as a created being without altering it.⁸ This convenient pliability of expression, in which Origen himself had led the way, is also found in other followers. Theognostus simply repeats the Origenist doctrine of the Logos in its different forms of presentation.⁹ On the other hand, as used by the opponent of Paul of Samosata, Gregory (bishop of Neo-caesarea from 244, † about 270), for whom later traditions have procured the surname Thaumaturgus,¹⁰ this doctrine of the Logos appears to

⁷ Omitted by Euseb. vii. 26. On the contrary, Athanasii περὶ Διονυσίου τοῦ Ἐπ. Ἀλ. liber. In the letter of Dionysius to Ammon bishop of Berenice and to Euphranor, it is said, Athanas. l. c. cap. 4: Πόημα καὶ γενητὸν εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ· μήτε δε φύσει ἴδιον, ἀλλὰ ξένον κατ' οὐσίαν εἶναι τοῦ πατρὸς· ὡσπερ ἐστὶν ὁ γεωργὸς πρὸς τὴν ἀμπελον (cf. Joh. xv. 1), καὶ ὁ ναυπηγὸς πρὸς τὸ σκάφος· καὶ γὰρ ὡς ποίημα ὢν, οὐκ ἦν πρὶν γενηταί. According to chap. 14, the Arians also attributed to him the following assertions: Οὐκ αἶε ἦν ὁ θεὸς πατὴρ, οὐκ αἶε ἦν ὁ υἱός·—ἀλλ' ἦν ποτε ὅτε οὐκ ἦν. Comp. Martini Gesch. d. Dogma v. d. ⁸ Fragments of his ἐλεγχος καὶ ἀπολογία, lib. iv., addressed to the Roman Dionysius, preserved in Athanasius and Basil, are collected by Gallandius, iii. 495, Routh Reliq. Sacr. iii. 194 (in the second fragment of the first book, the variation in the text from Euthym. Zygab. Panoplia apud Gallandius, t. xiv. App. p. 118, is to be compared). Dionysius declares here, lib. i.: Οὐ γὰρ ἦν ὅτε ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἦν πατὴρ. Then he asserts it is a fabrication of his opponents that he ever denied, τὸν Χριστὸν ὁμοούσιον εἶναι τῷ θεῷ· εἰ γὰρ καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦτο φημι μὴ εὐρηκέναι, μηδ' ἀνεγνωκέναι πον τῶν ἁγίων γραφῶν, ἀλλὰ γε τὰ ἐπιχειρήματά μου τὰ ἐξῆς, ἃ σεσιωπήκασι, τῆς διανοίας ταύτης οὐκ ἀπάδει. oscillate between entirely opposite modes of description.¹⁴ It is highly probable, also, that Hierax of Leontopolis, at the end of this century, was formed in the school of Origen. His allegorical interpretation, his rejection of the resurrection of the body, and of sensual notions of a future life, as also his disapprobation of marriage and the use of flesh and wine, point rather to a maintenance of Origenist principles carried out to extremes, than to a Manichaean origin, which latter Epiphaneus has inferred only from a few external points of resemblance.¹² At the end of this period appeared Methodius, bishop of Olympus (or Patara), afterward of Tyre (martyred 311) as a violent opponent of Origen, defending in a work, περὶ ἀναστάσεως, the doctrine of the resurrection of the present body, and in another, περὶ τῶν γεννητῶν, attacking the notion of an endless succession of worlds.¹³ But on the other hand, Origen found warm defenders in Pamphilus (martyred 309) and Eusebius Pamphili, both presbyters in Caesarea.¹⁴ Among the multitude, report had often distorted already the peculiar principles of Origen, and by that means awakened blind hatred against him;¹⁵ but among

OTHER DISTINGUISHED TEACHERS OF THE EASTERN CHURCH.

While at Alexandria Scripture interpretation was made to subserve the purpose of speculation, we find in Syria and the neighboring provinces, favored by the linguistic relations of these lands, the first traces of that more independent historico-grammatical and critical treatment of the Scriptures, by which the east was so much distinguished in the fourth and fifth centuries.¹ Of such writers we are acquainted, though very imperfectly, with Julius Africanus in Nicopolis (Emmaus), probably a presbyter (about 230), a friend of Origen, the first Christian chronographer;² and two presbyters of Antioch, Dorotheus

solum dicta ejus incusare, verum etiam adversus eos, qui hæc legunt, hostiles inimicitias sumere, tam pertinaciter id agentes, ut nulla prorsus venia eos dignos haberi putent, ne ea quidem quam impertire solent, verbi gratia, his qui vel Græcorum sæcularium libros, vel nonnunquam etiam hæreticorum, percunctandi atque agnoscendi studio decurrunt. Miramur in tantum temeritatis aliquos esse provectos, ut qui se ita humilitate judicat, adstruant, quod ab illis dicta ejus vel libri pro sermonibus apostolicis vel dictis prophetis habeantur, aut quod ille ipse vel Prophetis vel Apostolis ab aliquo comparetur. Multos invenias, quos si interrogas, in quibus libris aut in quibus locis dicta sint hæc, quæ arguunt, confitentur, se quidem nescire ea, de quibus affirmant, nec legisse unquam, audisse autem alios dicentes. The calumnies which Pamphilus refuted are these (cap. 5): Prima, ille est, quod aiunt, eum innatum dicere filium Dei. Secunda, quod dicunt per prolationem, secundum Valentini fabulas, in subsistentiam venisse filium Dei dicere. Tertia, quæ his omnibus valde contraria est, quod dicunt eum, secundum Arteman vel Paulum Samosatenum, purum hominem, id est, non etiam Deum dicere Christum filium Dei. Post (iv.), ista est, quæ istis omnibus adversatur (caeca enim est malitia), quod dicunt eum dicere, δοκίσει, i. e., putative tantum et per allegoriam, non etiam secundum ea, quæ per historiam referuntur, gesta esse omnia, quæ a Salvatore gesta sunt. Alia (v.), quoque criminatio est, qua asserunt, eum duos Christos prædicare. Addunt (vi.), illud quoque, quod historias corporales, quæ per omnem S. Scripturam referuntur de gestis Sanctorum, penitus denegat. Sed et (vii.), de resurrectione mortuorum, et de impiorum poenis non levi impugnant eum calumnia, velut negantem peccatoribus inferenda esse supplicia. Quidam vero (viii.), disputatione ejus vel opiniones, quas de animæ statu vel dispensatione disseruit, culpant. Ultima vero, omnium (ix.), est criminatio illa, quæ cum omni infamatione dispergitur, μετεσωματώσεως, i. e., quod humanas animas in muta animalia, vel serpentes vel pecudes asserat transmutari post mortem, et quod etiam ipsæ mutorum animalium animæ rationabiles sint.

II. THEOLOGY IN THE WEST.

The Latin church, which had been hitherto little more than an appendage to the Greek, now attained to more independence and individuality, after it had materially enlarged itself, and since the Latin language had been more adapted, particularly ad Matth. præf., and so also later writers call him Episcopum et Martyrem. Prudentius περὶ στεφάνων hymn. xi. relates the martyrdom of one Hippolytus. The same person was a presbyter among the Novatians, stood in high repute with his own party (the heathen called out, v. 80: Ipsum Christicolis esse caput populi, but in view of death he repented of his taking part in the schism, and exhorted his own disciples, who accompanied him in great numbers, to return to the catholic communion (v. 27, ss.). Thus he became a Catholic martyr at Portus Romanus (probably under Valerian, 258), and his bones were dug up in the vicinity of Rome (v. 151). At the time of Prudentius a splendid martyrrium was here dedicated to him (v. 183), and his memory was celebrated on the ides of August (v. 232). In the eighth century Hadrian I. restored this Coemeterium b. Hippolyti Martyris (Liber pontificalis in vita Hadr. I.) At the same place the statue of Hippolytus was found, 1551, on whose cathedra the Canon Paschalis and a catalogue of his writings are inscribed. It belongs probably to the sixth century (Beschreibung der Stadt Rom von Platner, Bunsen Gerhard, u. Röstel, ii. ii. 329), and proves that at that time the ancient writer and the martyr were looked upon as the same person. In the later martyrologies a fragment of genuine tradition may be preserved concerning him. Usuardus, Ado, Notker, and others, have the following on the 30th January:—Apud Antiochiam passio b. Hippolyti Martyris, qui Novati schismate aliquantulum deceptus, operante gratia Christi correctus, ad caritatem ecclesiae rediit, pro qua et in qua illustre martyrium consummavit. Petrus Damianus lib. i. Epist. 9, ad Nicolaum ii. says: Beatus quoque Nonus Martyr, qui et Hippolytus—postquam denique nonnullos sanctarum expositionum libros luculenter explicuit, tandem Episcopatum deseruit, de Antiochenis partibus, unde erat oriundus, abscessit, Romanos suos appetiit; and then relates his death and burial in Portus Romanus. The result of our inquiry into the history of Hippolytus may be stated: Novatian found great favor particularly in Antioch. The bishop Fabius, and many others were friendly to him (Euseb. vi. 44, 46, see below, § 72, note 8). One of them, the presbyter Hippolytus, determined to travel in person to Rome. Probably, since he traveled through Alexandria, he is the same Hippolytus who took with him to Rome the ἐπιστολὴ διακονικὴ of Dionysius of Alexandria (Euseb. vi. 46. Eusebius here names him without any other specifying circumstance, after having spoken before of only one Hippolytus). In Rome he attached himself to the Novatians, and attained to great repute. The separation from the church, however, made him suspicious, until the prospect of immediate death decided him to return to the catholic church. His memory was celebrated at Antioch, his native city, on the 30th January; at Rome on the 13th August. The later martyrologies have adopted both days, and so made two Hippolytuses out of one. The great reputation which Hippolytus enjoyed as an ecclesiastical writer misled Eusebius, when he represents him to have been a bishop. Jerome followed him in this particular. The clerk who was martyred at Portus Romanus may have been previously a bishop somewhere in the East. Although, however, Prudentius correctly designates Hippolytus a presbyter, yet all later writers call him bishop, and conjecture different places where he was such. The Greeks naturally looked for this place in the part where he had suffered, and regarded him sometimes as a bishop of Rome, by Tertullian,¹ to the expression of Christian ideas, and had become the usual written language of the western Christians. As the speculative tendency of the Greeks prevailed in the Greek church, so the practical character of the Romans gave expression to itself in the Latin church, in the inclination to cultivate chiefly ecclesiastical government and law. While the Greek language now disappeared from the western church, the lively interest of the latter in the new developments of the theology of the east also ceased. As the Greek theology of the second century had been understood and represented with material grossness in the writings of Tertullian, so was it held fast in the western church, in the third century. Phi-after the example of Leontius; sometimes as a bishop of Portus Romanus, according to the Paschal Chronicle, Georgius Syncellus, Zonaras, and Nicephorus Callistus. The Romish bishop Gelasius, misled by Rufinus's translation of Euseb. vi. 20 (Beryllus—episcopus fuit apud Bostram, Arabiae urbem maximam. Erat et nihilominus Hippolytus, qui et ipse aliquanta scripta dereliquit, Episcopus), thought that he was a metropolitan of Arabia, but maintained at the same time as an indubitable fact that he had come to Rome, and suffered martyrdom there. (The later legend dressed out this with other additions: Petrus Dam. l. c.: Qui, postquam triginta millia Saracenorum ad Christi fidem efficacissima predicatione convertit, etc.) In order to find a middle way between these different accounts Steph. le Moine conjectured that he was bishop of Portus Romanus (Aden, in Arabia Felix, and in this several have followed him; but this attempt to reconcile errors could only be a new error itself, since Christianity came for the first time into Arabia Felix in the fourth century. With the results already given, agrees very well what may be gathered from the writings of Hippolytus. 1. Novatianism is as little found in them as in the works of Novatian himself. They were probably composed earlier. 2. According to Phot. Cod. 121, Hippolytus's σύνταγμα κατὰ αἱρέσεων was an extract from the work of Irenaeus. But Photius infers too much from a passage of that writing, when he makes him a disciple of Irenaeus. 3. Jerome, Cat. c. 61, enumerates among the works of Hippolytus προσομιλίαν de laude Domini Salvatoris, in qua praesente Origene se loqui in Ecclesia significat. (What follows: In hujus aemulationem Ambrosius—cohortatus est Origenem, in scripturas Commentarios scribere, is founded merely on a misunderstanding of the expression ἐξ ἐκείνου scil. χρόνου, which forms a transition in Euseb. vi. c. 22 to chapter 23.) 4. The numerous exegetical writings (see apud Jerome) point to the east. 5. The Ἀπολογία ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατὰ Ἰωάννην εὐαγγελίου καὶ ἀποκαλύψεως and περὶ χαρισμάτων, marked upon the cathedra, are either directed against the Alogi in Asia Minor (§ 48, note 15), or against the opponents of the Montanists in Rome (§ 59, note 9). For this last supposition appears to speak the notice of Ebedjesu († 1318, in Assenani Bibl. orient. t. iii. p. i., that among the Chaldeans Hippolyti capita adv. Caium were in existence. (Comp. Lücke's Einl. in d. Offenb. Joh. S. 316.) C. Gu. Haenell de Hippolyto comm. Gottingae 1838. 4 (looks upon him as a bishop of Bostra). E. J. Kimmel de Hippolyti vita et scriptis, p. i. Jenae. 1839. 8 (according to him, Hippolytus was an oriental, educated in Alexandrian learning (?), and bishop of Portus Romanus at Rome). L. F. W. Seinecke über d. Leben u. die Schriften des Bisch. ¹ Respecting him see above, § 59. He wrote in Greek, de baptismo (Tert. de Bapt. c. 15), de spectaculis (de Cor. mil. c. 6), and de virginibus velandis (de Virg. vel. c. 1). losophy was too much hated by the westerns,² and their interpretation of Scripture, from ignorance of the original languages, was too imperfect to enable them to develop the Grecian theology intelligently. Hence there arose in the occidental church an aversion to all theological speculation,³ and such a doctrinal stability that the influence of the Greek church could produce only negative and unconscious advances. It is true that Montanism, having continued for a long time unmolested in the west, had been condemned, as far as its peculiar doctrines were concerned, in the beginning of this period; but its spirit had found so firm a sympathy in the disposition of the westerns to cultivate external ecclesiastical ordinances, that its continuance may be still recognized in a sensuous acceptance of Christianity, and the high value set upon external discipline. Thascius Caccilius Cyprianus, at first a rhetorician in Carthage (converted to Christianity from 245, bishop at Carthage 248, suffered martyrdom 258), left behind several small works, apologetic and admonitory, and many harmless. It is true that Hermogenes, when he asserted the eternity of matter too strenuously, found an opponent in Tertullian;⁹ but Arnobius gave utterance to Platonic and gnostic opinions respecting the soul and evil, without being molested;¹⁰ and his disciple Lactantius taught a suspicious dualism,¹¹ without being attacked on account of it. As this indicates a certain theological rudeness in the western theology, so is the same peculiarity also exhibited in the sensuous mode of treating the traditional doctrines. Even in definitions of the essence of God, the western writers of this period are not able to disentangle themselves from the forms of a sensuous conception. They thought of the Deity himself as corporeal, and of the soul as literally his breath.¹² They also firmly maintained

First of all he rejects τὸς διαιροῦντας καὶ κατατέμνοντας — τὴν μοναρχίαν εἰς τρεῖς δυνάμεις τινὰς καὶ μεμερισμένας ὑποστάσεις καὶ θεότητες τρεῖς, and asserts in opposition: 'Ἦνωσθαι γὰρ ἀνάγκη τῷ θεῷ τῶν ὅλων τὸν θεῖον λόγον· ἐμφίλοχῶρειν δὲ τῷ θεῷ καὶ ἰνδιδαιτᾶσθαι δεῖ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· ἤδη καὶ τὴν θεῖαν τριάδα εἰς ἓνα, ὡσπερ εἰς κορυφὴν τινα (τὸν θεὸν τῶν ὅλων τὸν παντοκράτορα λέγω) συγκεφαλαιοῦσθαι τε καὶ συνάγεσθαι πᾶσα ἀνάγκη. Then he censures τὸς ποίημα τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι δοξάζοντας, καὶ γεγοῆναι τὸν κύριον, ὡσπερ ἐν τι ὄντως γενομένων, νομίζοντας.—Βλάσφημον οὖν οὐ τὸ τυχεῖν, μέγιστον μὲν οὖν, χειροποίητον τρόπον τινα λέγειν τὸν Κύριον. Εἰ γὰρ γέγονεν υἱὸς, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν· αἰεὶ δὲ ἦν, εἰ γὰρ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἔστιν, ὡς αὐτὸς φησι, καὶ εἰ λόγος καὶ σοφία καὶ δύναμις ὁ Χριστός.—ταῦτα δὲ δυνάμεις οὐσαι τοῦ θεοῦ τυγχάνουσιν· εἰ τοίνυν γέγονεν ὁ υἱὸς, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ταῦτα· ἦν ἄρα καιρὸς, ὅτε χωρὶς τούτων ἦν ὁ θεός· ἀποπώτατον δὲ τοῦτο. The expression κύριος ἐκτίσε με ἀρχὴν ὁδῶν αὐτοῦ, Prov. viii. 22, means: ἐπέστησε τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγονόσιν ἔργοις, γεγονόσι δὲ δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ.—Ὡ βροχίνδουοι ἄνθρωποι! ποίημα ὁ πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, ὁ ἐκ γαστρὸς πρὸ ἑωσφῆρου γεννηθεὶς (Ps. cix. 3), ὁ εἰπὼν ὡς σοφία (Prov. viii. 26)· πρὸ δὲ πάντων βροτηῶν γεννᾷ με; καὶ πολλῶν δὲ τῶν θεῶν λογίων γεγεννησθαι, ἀλλ' οὐ γεγοῆναι τὸν υἱὸν λεγόμενον εἴροι τις ἴν'. We should therefore believe εἰς θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα, καὶ εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· ἠνωσθαι δὲ τῷ θεῷ τῶν ὅλων τὸν λόγον· ἐγὼ γάρ, φησι, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἔσμεν (Joh. x. 30)· καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί. Οὕτω γὰρ ἂν καὶ ἡ θεία τριάς, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον κήρυγμα τῆς μοναρχίας διασώζοιτο. Comp. Martini, l. c. S. 227, ff. Baur's Lehre v. d. Dreieinigkeit, i. 311.

itself an outward expression in the unity of every thing belonging to the church. Since religious faith was made interchangeable with the intelligent expression of it in doctrine, men began also to consider the unity of the latter as necessary to the unity of the church, and to limit freedom of inquiry more and more. How an endeavor was made to carry out an agreement in regard to ecclesiastical usages, with this very view, may be seen from Victor's conduct respecting the celebration of Easter in Asia (§ 59); and after his example, the constant effort to bring about uniformity, even in external usages, is obvious, particularly in the western church. The idea of this unity naturally led still farther, to a closer external union among the separate churches; and since the bishops, as successors of the apostles, were looked upon as the center of ecclesiastical unity, that connection was effected by their more intimate attachment to one another; and the episcopal dignity obtained not a little elevation in consequence. Another idea which exerted much influence on ecclesiastical life was this, that the constitution of the Christian church was a nobler copy of the Jewish temple-worship, and therefore, that the Mosaic laws relative to public worship, particularly the priesthood, were still valid in the church (§ 53). No less fruitful in alterations in the worship of God was finally the idea of a *disciplina arcani*² which began to be current toward the conclusion of the second century. After the Christians had always been compelled to keep their worship salvation is to be found only in the catholic church. Even Origen Hom. iii. in Josuam, § 5, says: Nemo semetipsum decipiat: extra hanc domum, i. e., extra ecclesiam nemo salvatur. Nam si quis foras exierit, mortis suae ipse fit reus. See Rothe die Anfänge der christl. Kirche, i. 578. He expresses himself elsewhere, however, more mildly, just as Clement of Alexandria. See Rothe, i. 624. Thus, while he does not allow to the virtuous heathen and the Jews vitam aeternam or regnum coelorum, which can be obtained only through faith in Christ, he yet asserts, Comm. in Ep. ad Rom. ii. 7: Tamen gloria operum ejus et pax et honor poterit non perire. On the other hand Cyprianus de Unitate ecclesiae: *Quisquis ab ecclesia segregatus adulterae jungitur, a promissis ecclesiae separatur. Nec perveniet ad Christi praemia, qui relinquit ecclesiam Christi. Alienus est, profanus est, hostis est. Habere jam non potest Deum patrem, qui ecclesiam non habet matrem. Si potuit evadere quisquam, qui extra arcam Noë fuit, et qui extra ecclesiam foris, fuerit, evadet.—Tales etiamsi occisi in confessione nominis fuerint, macula ista nec sanguine abluitur.—Esse martyr non potest, qui in ecclesia non est. private, through fear of persecution and profanation ; they now began to find a reason for this secrecy in the nature of their holy transactions, by virtue of which they must be kept secret as mysterics from all unbaptized persons (τελεταί, Orig. c. Cels. iii. p. 147),³ an idea which arose out of, and was fostered by the preference for mysteries exhibited at this period, and the example of the heathen mysteries (see § 37). The so-called *apostolic constitutions*⁴ may be considered, after deducting later

³ Tertull. de Praeser. haeret. c. 41 : Non omittam ipsius etiam conversationis haereticæ descriptionem, quam futilis, quam terrena, quam humana sit, sine gravitate, sine auctoritate, sine disciplina, ut fidei suae congruens. In primis, quis catechumenus quis fidelis, incertum est : pariter adeunt, pariter orant, etiam ethnici, si supervenerint : sanctam canibus, et porcis margaritas, licet non veras jactabunt. Cf. Apolet. c. 7. But this secrecy was still limited to the non-admission of the unbaptized to holy ordinances. The fathers of the third century speak without reserve as yet of these transactions, as of all the doctrines of Christianity, and Tertullian even reproaches the Valentinians in the following language, adv. Val. 1 : Nihil magis curant quam occultare, quod praedicant. It was not till the fourth century when this mysterious tendency became general, that even the positive doctrines of Christianity began to be treated as mysteries. Catholic writers have been inclined to explain the non-appearance of their peculiar institutions and dogmas in antiquity by the aid of this disciplina arcana. This is done particularly by Em. a Schelstrate de Disciplina arcana. Rom. 1685. 4. Of late works see Th. Lienhart de Antiquis liturgiis et de Discipl. arcana. Argentor. 1829. J. A. ⁴ The Apostolic Constitutions and Canons (the best edition of them is in Cotelerii Patr. apostolicis, vol. i.) are records of the ecclesiastical customs regarded as apostolic, in the form of apostolic prescriptions (cf. Hieron. Epist. 52 ad Lucinium ; Unaquaeque provincia abundet in sensu suo, et praecepta majorum leges apostolicas arbitretur. Augustin. contra Donatist. iv. 24 : Quod universa tenet ecclesia, nec conciliis institutum, sed semper retentum est, id non nisi apostolica auctoritate traditum certissime credatur). The apostolic constitutions, διατάξεις τῶν Ἀποστόλων, consist of eight books, and probably belong to Syria. The first six books presenting instructions embracing the entire range of Christian life, were written toward the end of the third century, and are probably the books which Eusebius, H. E. iii. c. 25, quoted as διδασκαλί τῶν Ἀποστόλων, Athanasius in Ep. festali ; and in Synopsi sacrae Script. as διδασχὴ τῶν Ἀποστόλων. The seventh book is an independent shorter manual of the same kind. Hence it generally treats of the same subjects as the first six books, and probably belongs to the beginning of the fourth century. The eighth book refers solely to the holy transactions (τὰ μυστικά), contains agenda in addition to the appropriate canonical prescriptions, and was put together in the middle of the fourth century as a pontifical book for the use of the clergy. This book had the title διατάξεις, which, after the work had been soon after put along with the other books, was transferred to the whole. Epiphanius often quotes it as διατάξεις or διάταξις τῶν Ἀποστόλων. After Epiphanius there must, however, have been some interpolations, the most important of which are those by which the prescriptions respecting the festival of Christ's birth (v. 13), and the easter festival (v. 17, cf. Epiphani. Haer. xxx. 10), have been altered agreeably to the later form of observance. Krabbe assumes that after Epiphanius

interpolations, as an evidence of the constitution of the church at the present time. The apostolic canons belong to the fifth and sixth centuries.⁵

HISTORY OF THE HIERARCHY.

After the number of the Christians had greatly increased in the country, separate churches in the country were now frequently formed which attached themselves either to the district (παροικία) of the nearest town-bishop, and received from him a presbyter or deacon;¹ or chose their own bishops (χωρεπίσκοποι) who, however, soon came, in part, to be in a certain state of dependence on the nearest town-bishop.² The power of the many interpolations were made, even doctrinal ones, favorable to the Arians and the Macedonians, and that the eighth book was first appended after the time of that father; but in opposition to his opinion see Drey, p. 154, 177. Comp. Dr. O. Krabbe über den Ursprung u. den Inhalt d. apost. Constitutionen des Clemens Romanus. Hamburg. 1829; especially Dr. J. S. v. Drey's neue Untersuchungen über die Constitutionen und Kanones d. Apost. Tübingen. 1832. 8. According to Baur (über den Ursprung des Episcopats, S. 125, ff. 131, ff.), the constitutions are of Ebionitish origin and anti-Pauline tendency, and originated in Rome (p. 134.)

² Thus they are called in the Epist. Syn. Antioch. ann. 270, apud. Euseb. H. E. vii. 30, 6, ἐπισκόπους τῶν ὁμόρων ἀγρῶν. In the Conc. Ancyranum, ann. 315, can. 13: Χωρεπίσκοπος μὴ ἐξεῖναι, πρεσβυτέρος ἢ διακόνους χειροτονεῖν. Cf. Bingham, i. p. 192, ss.

bishops was enlarged, not only by this enlargement of their districts, but also by an institution which now arose, in consequence of which the bishops came into a closer and more regular union among themselves. We allude to Provincial Synods, which were always becoming more frequent since the end of the second century, and were held in several provinces once or twice in the year.³ As they were for the most part convened in the principal city of the province, under the presidency of the bishop of that city; and since the latter was, as it were, the medium in relation to the other smaller bishops, by which alone they stood in connection with the rest of the church, the bishops of the principal cities (μητροπολίτης, Metropolitanus)⁴ came gradually to obtain a kind of superintendence over the other bishops of their province (ἐπαρχία). As yet, however, this metropolitan constitution was general only in the east. In the west, it is true, Rome was elevated to be the ecclesiastical

By this establishment of large ecclesiastical bodies, the entire organization of the church became more compact and united. Through the medium of the metropolitans the testimonials and papers of the separate churches⁷ were better attested and more safely forwarded; accounts of all important ecclesiastical events and resolutions were more expeditiously and generally circulated; and thus each community was always acquainted with the state of the whole church.

The bishops of the three great cities of the Roman empire, Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch, had, at the same time, the largest provinces. Hence they were regarded as the principal bishops of Christendom; and their assent in all general affairs was looked upon as of special importance. Still, however, at this time, great stress was laid on the fact that all bishops were perfectly alike in dignity and power; and that each in his own diocese was answerable only to God for his conduct.⁸ They

(which last, however, have been very much abridged by the Benedictine editors). Even the words still admitted by Rigaltius: super illum unum aedificat ecclesiam, are wanting in the oldest MSS. Cf. Edm. Richerii Defensio lib. de eccl. et polit. potestate, i. p. 115. These additions have quite another sense in the mouth of Cyprian than the interpolators meant. For example, what is denoted by the expression in Cyprian, primatus Petro datur, is clear from his Epist. 71: Nam nec Petrus, quem primum Dominus elegit, et super quem aedificavit ecclesiam suam, cum secum Paulus de circumcissione postmodum disceptaret, vindicavit sibi aliquid insolenter aut arroganter assumis, ut diceret, se primatum tenere, et obtemperari a novellis et posteris sibi potius oportere.

As all bishops were supposed to be perfectly alike in dignity and power, so also they believed that they had the same general duties toward the whole church in addition to those peculiar duties they owed to their respective churches.¹³ Accordingly they all asserted equally the right of interfering, in cases where other bishops had departed from the fundamental rules of the church, by admonitions, reprimands, and even ecclesiastical punishment.¹⁴ This common right was of course principally exercised by the most distinguished and powerful bishops.

Quapropter facere te oportet plenissimas litteras ad coepiscopos nostros in Galliis constitutos, ne ultra Marcianum pervicacem—collegio nostro insultare patiantur, quod necdum videatur a nobis abstentus.—Dirigantur in provinciam et ad plebem Arelate consistentem a te litterae, quibus abstento Marciano alius in locum ejus substituat, et grex Christi, qui in hodiernum ab illo dissipatus et vulneratus contemnitur, colligatur. Sufficiat multos illic ex fratribus nostris annis istis superioribus excessisse sine pace. Vel ceteris subveniatur qui supersunt. Idcirco enim, frater carissime, copiosum corpus est sacerdotum concordiae mutuae glutino atque unitatis vinculo copulatum, ut si quis ex collegio nostro haeresim facere et gregem Christi lacerare et vastare tentaverit, subveniant caeteri, et quasi pastores utiles et misericordes oves dominicas in gregem colligant. Quid enim si in mari portus aliquis munitionibus suis ruptis infestus et periculosus esse navibus coeperit, nonne navigantes ad alios proximos portus naves suas dirigunt, ubi sit tutus accessus et salutaris introitus et statio segura? Quod nunc esse apud nos debet, frater carissime, ut fratres nostros, qui jactati Marciani scopulis petunt ecclesiae portus salutare, suscipiamus ad nos prompta et benigna humanitate. Nam etsi pastores multi sumus, unum tamen gregem pascimus, et oves universas, quas Christus sanguine suo et passione quaesivit, colligere et fovere debemus, etc. In the matter of the Spanish bishops Basilides and Martial (in the year 256), Cyprian, called upon to interfere, declares the interposition of Stephanus, bishop of Rome, in favor of those deposed bishops to be exceptionable, Epist. 68, ad clerum et plebes in Hispania consistentes: Nec rescindere ordinationem (Sabini) jure perfectam potest, quod Basilides post crimina sua detecta et conscientiam etiam propria confessione audatam, Romam pergens, Stephanum collegam nostrum longe positum et gestae rei ac veritatis ignarum fefellit, ut exambiret reponi se injuste in episcopatum, de quo fuerat jure depositus. Etsi aliqui de collegis nostris exstiterint (namely, Stephanus), fratres dilectissimi, qui deificam disciplinam negligendam putant, et cum Basilide et Martiale temere communicant, conturbare fidem nostram res ista non debet, etc. Cf. du Pin, p. 150.

(CONTINUATION.) HIERARCHY IN THE SEPARATE CHURCHES.

After the idea of the Mosaic priesthood had been adopted in the Christian church, the clergy, as was natural, elevated themselves far above the laity. A peculiar mystic influence was ascribed to the old rite of consecration, when considered as an ordinatio; and they now appeared in the character of persons appointed by God himself to be the medium of communication between Him and the Christian world.¹

For the inferior services of the church particular offices were appointed, different, however, in the Greek and Latin churches. In the former, ὑπηρέται (or ὑποδιάκονοι), ψαλτωδοί (or ψάλται), ἀναγνώσται and πυλωροί:² in the latter, Subdiaconi, Acoluthi,

² So Constitutt. Apost. iii. 11, vi. 17. Those who are called in the first six books ὑπηρέται are denominated ὑποδιάκονοι in viii. 28 (ὑπηρέται γὰρ εἰσι διακόνων): a ὑποδιάκονος is also named by Athanasius in Epist. ad solitariam vitam agentes. Many

Exorcistae, Lectores, and Ostiarii³ (afterward called ordines minores). All oppressed and helpless persons, especially widows, orphans, and virgins,⁴ were referred to the clergy for assistance. The bishop (Papa, Tert. de Pudic. 13. Πάπα ἱερώτατος, Gregor. Thaum. Epist. can. i., Praepositus, Cyprian, note 1) exercised this support, as well as the administration of the entire wealth of the church, by the deacons.⁵ In like manner, supported by his clergy, he was umpire in all disputes between the members of his church.⁶ The bishops greatly increased in reputation and revenues, both by the enlargement of their dioceses and the clergy subject to them, and by the operation of synods. But in this very way many were now led astray unto pride, ambition, and avarice;⁷ sometimes even into an immoderate ostentacommunities, however, had different regulations. In the enumeration contained in Const. Apost. ii. 28, the ὑπηρεταί are wanting, in the eighth book the πυλωροί. On the other hand, in viii. 11, the deacons have to watch the doors of the men, the subdeacons those of the women (cf. Conc. Laodic. in the fourth century, can. 22: Ὅτι οὐ δεῖ ὑπηρετῆν τὰς θύρας ἐγκαταλιμπάνειν). Thus the ὑποδιάκονοι and the πυλωροί were sometimes the same, sometimes different individuals. Respecting the readers and singers, see Socrates Hist. eccl. v. 22: Ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ ἀναγνώσται καὶ ὑποβολεῖς ἀδιάφορον, εἴτε κατηχούμενοι εἰσὶν, εἴτε πιστοί. The Greek church never adopted Acoluthi and Exorcists, comp. Constitut. Apost. viii. 26: Ἐσπορικιστῆς οὐ χειροτονεῖται. His gift is a free favor bestowed by God; and should he wish to assume the clerical office, he is ordained a bishop, presbyter, or deacon.

⁶ As the Jews were accustomed to decide their disputes by umpires chosen from among the people, agreeably to the Mosaic law (Jos. Antt. xiv. 10, 17, xvi. 6), so from the beginning the Christians also, according to 1 Cor. vi. 1, ff., in order to establish the relations subsisting among them by the gospel, not by a heathen tribunal. The Roman jurisprudence favored generally procedure by arbitration, as Digest. lib. iv. tit. 8: De receptis, qui arbitrium receperunt, ut sententiam dicant, and in order to make the arbitration sentence secure, prescribed a penal clause to be inserted in the compromise. The Christians were accustomed to choose their bishops as umpires. Their decisions required no such safeguard, but were sufficiently protected by religious awe. Respecting this point, see Const. App. ii. 45-53. According to chapter 47, Monday is said to be the episcopal judicial day on which the bishop, surrounded by his presbyters and deacons, hears the contending parties, and also complaints regarding unchristian conduct. First of all, the other clergy attempt to reconcile the parties, and if this proves ineffectual, the episcopal sentence succeeds. But the bishop ἐν τῷ δικαστηρίῳ σύμφηρον ἔχει καὶ συνίστορα τῆς δίκης τὸν χριστὸν τοῦ θεοῦ.

tion.⁸ Still, however, their power continued to be restricted in many ways. Although the provincial bishops exercised a decided influence on the choice of a bishop, yet the election depended in a great degree on the church.⁹ The bishop himself, it is true, nominated the inferior clergy, but the presbyters had Καὶ ἔστι γε ἰδεῖν ἐν πολλαῖς νομιζομέναις ἐκκλησίαις, καὶ μάλιστα ταῖς τῶν μειζῶνων πόλεων, τοὺς ἡγομένους τοῦ λαοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ μηδεμίαν ἰσολογίαν ἐπιτρέποντας, ἐστ' ὅτε καὶ τοῖς καλλίστοις τῶν Ἰησοῦ μαθητῶν, εἶναι πρὸς αὐτούς. καὶ ταῦτα πάντα μοι λέλεκται βουλομένῳ κατὰ τὸν λόγον παραστήσαι, ὅτι οὐ μιμητέον τῷ ἄρχοντι τῆς ἐκκλησίας τὸν ἄρχοντα τῶν ἔθνων, κ. τ. λ. Cf. ejusd. in Matth. Commentariorum series, § 9: Sicut autem super cathedram Moysi—sic et super cathedram ecclesiasticam sedent quidam dicentes, quae facere oporteat unumquemque, non autem facientes, et alligantes onera gravia et imponunt super humeros hominum, ipsi nec digito volentes ea movere (Matth. xxvii. 2, 3). Ibid. § 10, 12, 14, 61, in Num. Hom. ii. 1, in Esaiam Hom. vii. 3. Cyprian. de Lapsis: Episcopi plurimi, quos et hortamento esse oportet caeteris et exemplo, divina procuracione contenta, procuratores rerum saecularium fieri; derelicta cathedra, plebe deserta, per alienas provincias oberrantes, negotiationis quaestuosae mundinam aucupari; esurientibus in ecclesia fratribus, habere argentum largiter velle, fundos insidiosis fraudibus rapere, usuris multiplicantibus fenus augere.

In the third century the traces of buildings devoted exclusively to Christian worship become more frequent and obvious; ¹ and as early as the peaceful times between the Valerian and Diocletian persecutions, splendid edifices had been erected for this purpose.² These were called προσενκτήριον, κυριακόν, dominicum, οἶκος ἐκκλησίας and simply ἐκκλησία. From the time of Constantine they were also styled ναός, templum, but never fanum and delubrum. In imitation of the temple of Jerusalem, a part of the interior was inaccessible to the people (ἁγίασμα, βῆμα, chorus), where the wooden table for the Lord's Supper (τράπεζα, mensa sacra) stood beside the seats of the clergy (καθέδρα, θρόνοι).³ Though the Christians were fond of certain religious symbols on many of their household utensils,⁴ yet nothing of this kind was allowed in the churches.⁵

At the time of Origen, the Christians had no other general festivals besides Sunday, than the parasceve (preparation) the passover, and the feast of pentecost.⁶ Soon, after, however, there appears to have been added to them the feast of the ascension (ἡ ἑορτὴ τῆς ἀναλήψεως τοῦ Κυρίου).⁷ So also in Egypt, toward the end of the third century, they began to observe, after the example of Basilides' followers,⁸ the epiphany (τὰ ἐπιφάνια) on the sixth of January, but according to the orthodox view of the appearance of the Logos on earth (ἡ ἐπιφάνεια) not simply as the festival of his baptism, but also as that of his birth. The arrangement of Divine worship at this time is found in the Constitt. Apost. ii. 57. At the agapae, the clergy and poor were particularly remembered (l. c. ii. 28).

The respect paid to martyrs still maintains the same character as in the second century, differing only in degree, not in kind, from the honor shown to other esteemed dead. As the churches held the yearly festivals of their martyrs at the graves of the latter,⁹ so they willingly assembled frequently in the burial places of their deceased friends,¹⁰ for which they used in many places even caves (cryptae, catacumbae).¹¹ At the cele-

Alex. ap. Euseb.* vii. 11, 4): Οὐδαμῶς δὲ ἐξέσται ὑμῖν—ἡ συνόδος ποιείσθαι, ἢ εἰς τὸ καλούμενα κοιμητήρια εἰσιέναι. So also the proconsul of Africa (Acta proconsularia S. Cypriani, c. 1). Gallienus removed this prohibitory rule (see above, § 56, note 14); but Maximinus afterward renewed it (Euseb. ix. c. 2). These burial-places were called κοιμητήριον, dormitorium.

Paris. 1688. 4. In the second edition, however, he was obliged to yield. 1705. (The church in the Catacombs, by Dr. C. Maitland. London, 1846. 8vo).

Origen attributed very great value to that intercession, in expecting from it great help toward sanctification;¹⁷ but he went beyond the ideas hitherto entertained in attributing to martyrdom an importance and efficacy similar to the death of Christ.¹⁸ Hence he feared the cessation of persecution as a misfortune.¹⁹ The more the opinion that value belonged to the intercession of martyrs was established,²⁰ the oftener it may have happened that persons recommended themselves to the martyrs yet living for intercession, i. e. after their death.²¹ On the other hand, no trace is found of in-

²¹ So Eusebius de Martyr. Palaest. cap. 7, relates that a maiden, Theodosia in Caesarea was added to the Martyrs expecting their death, ὁμοῦ φιλοφρονομένη, καὶ οἶα εἰκὸς ὑπὲρ οὐ μνημονεῖν αὐτῆς πρὸς τὸν κύριον γενομένης παρακαλοῦσα.

vocation of the dead, since the idea was not yet entertained of the living being able to make known their requests to them.

CHURCH DISCIPLINE.

Memorials of the ecclesiastical discipline of this period exist in the Epistolae canonicae of Dionysius bishop of Alexandria, of Gregory Thaumaturgus (both about 260), and Peter, bishop of Alexandria, A.D. 306; the canons of the councils of Illiberis (305 ?), Arles (314), Ancyra (315), and Neo-Caesarea (315). All these are found in collections of the councils, and in Routh's Reliquiae Sacrae.

After the holiest transactions of public worship began to be treated as mysteries, the mode of admission to Christianity naturally assumed another form. A preparatory course preceded it, in which the catechumens (κατηχούμενοι) were instructed by suitable teachers (catechistes, doctor audientium)¹ and prepared for baptism through different classes (ἀκροώμενοι, audientes, γονυκλίνοντες, genuflectentes, βαπτιζόμενοι, φωτιζόμενοι, competentes).²

The condition of catechumen usually continued several years; but the catechumens often deferred even baptism as long as possible, on account of the remission of sins by which it was to be accompanied.³ Hence it was often necessary to baptize the sick; and for them the rite of sprinkling was introduced (baptismus clinicorum, τῶν κλινικῶν).⁴ The baptism of children was more common.⁵ The exorcism of those about to be baptized is

² In Tertullian and Cyprian the audientes and catechumeni are synonymous. In Origen contra Cels. iii. 481. ed. de la Rue, Boehmer christl. Kirchl. Alterthumswissenschaft, ii. 287, and Rothe de Disciplinæ arcani origine p. 13 find three classes of catechumens. See, on the other side C. F. W. Hasselbach de Catechumenorum ordinibus, quot fuerint in vetere Eccl. graeca et lat., 1839, and Redepenning's Origenes, i. 358. The γονυκλίνοντες are first mentioned by Conc. Neocaesar. can. 5. Nicaen. can. 14. Tob. Pfanner de Catechumenis antiquae ecclesiae. Francof. et Goth. 1688. 12. Bingham Antiquitt. lib. x. (vol. iv.).

now distinctly mentioned; ⁶ and all baptized persons, even children, received the eucharist. When the congregations became larger presbyters and deacons baptized in addition to the bishop. In the west, however, the baptized had to receive from the bishop the imposition of hands.⁷ In the east the baptizing presbyters performed this ceremony.⁸

As those who were excommunicated were universally supposed to be under the dominion of the devil,⁹ as much as the unbaptized, they had to undergo, as poenitentes, a similar though more severe probation-period than the catechumens, before they could be again received (pacem dare, reconciliare).¹⁰ The No-

⁸ Constit. Apost. vii. 43, 44.

¹⁰ In what relation this admission was supposed to stand to the forgiveness of sins may be seen from Firmiliani Ep. ad Cypri. (Ep. Cyp. 75): Per singulos annos seniores et praepositi in unum convenimus,—ut si qua graviora sunt, communi consilio dirigantur, lapsis quoque fratribus et post lavacrum salutare a diabolo vulneratis per poenitentiam medela quaeratur: non quasi a nobis remissionem peccatorum consequantur, sed ut per nos ad intelligentiam delictorum suorum convertantur, et Domino plenius satisfacere cogantur. Cyprian. de Lapsis: Nemo se fallat, nemo se decipiat. Solus Dominus misereri potest: veniam peccatis, quae in ipsum commissa sunt, solus potest ille largiri, qui peccata nostra portavit.—Homo Deo esse non potest major; nec remittere aut donare indulgentia sua servus potest quod in Dominum delicto graviore commissum est, Dominus orandus est, Dominus nostra satisfactione placandus est, qui negantem negare se dixit, qui omne iudicium de patre solus accepit.—Confiteantur singuli, quaeso vos, fratres dilectissimi, delictum suum, dum adhuc qui deliquit in saeculo est, dum admitti confessio ejus potest, dum satisfactio et remissio facta per sacerdotes apud Dominum grata est.—Rogamus vos, ut pro vobis Deum rogare possimus. Preces ipsas ad vos prius vertimus, quibus Deum pro vobis ut misereatur, oramus. (Later, Leo I. about 450, Ep. 89: Sic divinae bonitatis praesidia ordinata, ut indulgentia Dei nisi supplicationibus sacerdotum nequeat obtineri). Farther Cypriani Ep. 52: Pignus vitae in data pace percipiunt:—accepta pace comaeatus a Deo datur. Comp. above, § 67, note 1. The reconciliation was no actus ordinis, but jurisdictionis, and could therefore be transferred from the bishop himself to a deacon. Cypri. Ep. 12, directs, ut qui libellos a martyribus acceperunt, et praerogativa eorum apud Deum adjuvari possunt (Ep. 13, et auxilio eorum adjuvari apud Dominum in delictis suis possunt), si incommodo aliquo et infirmitatis periculo occupati fuerint, non expectata praesentia nostra, apud presbyterum quemcumque praesentem, vel si presbyter repertus non fuerit, et urgere exitus coeperit, apud diaconum quoque exomologesin facere delicti sui possint: ut manu eis in poenitentiam imposita veniant ad Dominum cum pace, quam dari martyres litteris ad nos factis desideraverunt.

vation disputes occasioned the orientals to appoint a πρεσβύτερος ἐπὶ τῆς μετανοίας in the separate churches;¹¹ and this seems to have had an influence in bringing it about that public penance, even at the end of the third century, had a succession of grades similar to the probation-period of the catechumens.¹² The four gradus or stationes poenitentiae were πρόσκλαυσις, ἀκρόασις, ὑπόπτωσις, σύστασις (προσκλαίοντες, χεϊμάζοντες, flentes, hiemantes, ἀκρόωμενοι, audientes, γονυκλίνοντες, ὑποπίπτοντες, genuflectentes, substrati, συνιστάμενοι, consistentes). Excommunication fell only on public, gross offenses. Other sinners were referred to the admonition of the more experienced brethren.¹³

¹² Cyprian knows nothing of these grades. He sets forth the arrangement to be pursued with the penitent, Epist. 11: Nam cum in minoribus delictis, quae non in Deum committuntur, poenitentia agatur justo tempore, et exomologesis fiat inspecta vita ejus qui agit poenitentiam, nec ad communicationem venire quis possit, nisi prius illi ab episcopo et clero manus fuerit imposita: quanto magis in his gravissimis et extremis delictis caute omnia—observari oportet: In like manner they are not found in the course prescribed for penitents in Const. Apost. ii. 16. The grades are first mentioned in (since Gregor. Thaumaturgus, Epist. canonica, can. ii., as Morinus de Poen. lib. vi. c. 1, § 9, has shown, is spurious, and arose from Basilii Epist. 217, or Canonica, iii. c. 75, see Routh Reliqu. ¹³ Origenes in Psalm. xxxvii. Hom. ii. § 6: Oportet peccatum non celare intrinsecus. Fortassis enim sicut ille, qui habent intus inclusam escam indigestam, aut humoris vel phlegmatis stomacho graviter et moleste immanentis abundantiam, si vomuerint, relevantur: ita etiam hi qui peccaverunt, si quidem occultant, et retinent intra se peccatum, intrinsecus urgentur et propemodum suffocantur a phlegmate vel humore peccati: si autem ipse sui accusator fiat, dum accusat semetipsum et confitetur, simul evomit et delictum, atque omnem morbi digerit causam. Tantummodo circumspice diligentius, cui debeas confiteri peccatum tuum. Proba prius medicum cui debeas causam languoris exponere, qui sciat infirmari cum infirmante, flere cum flente, qui condolendi et compatiendi noverit disciplinam: ut ita demum, si quid illi dixerit, qui se prius et crudum medicum ostenderit et misericordem, si quid consilii dederit, facias, et sequaris, si intellexerit et praeviderit, talem esse languorem tuum, qui in conventu totius Ecclesiae exponi debeat et curari, ex quo fortassis et ceteri aedificari poterunt, et tu ipse facile sanari: multa hoc deliberatione, et satis perito medici illius consilio procurandum est. Of course application was especially made to the clergy: hence Origenes in Levit. Hom. ii. § 4: Est—per poenitentiam remissio peccatorum, cum lavat peccator in lacrymis stratum suum,—et cum non erubescit sacerdoti Domini indicare peccatum suum, et quaerere medicinam. In Levit. Hom. v. § 4: Discant sacerdotes Domini, qui Ecclesiis praesunt, quia pars eis data est cum his, quorum delicta repropitiaverint. Quid autem est repropitiare delictum? Si assumeris peccatorem, et monendo, hortando, docendo, instruendo adduxeris eum ad poenitentiam ab errore correxeris, a vitiis emendaveris, et effeceris eum talem, ut ei converso propitius fiat Deus pro delicto, repropitiassse diceris.

The time of penance usually continued several years—sometimes even to the hour of death.¹⁴ In Africa and Spain, re-admission was forever forbidden in case of certain offenses.¹⁵ This strictness was relaxed only when confessors interceded on behalf of the lapsed.¹⁶ But during the Decian persecution, the martyrs in Africa abused this privilege granted them by custom, so much that Cyprian was obliged to oppose them.¹⁷ Yet this

Denique hujus seditionis origo jam coepit. Nam in provincia nostra per aliquot civitates in Praepositos impetrus per multitudinem factus est, et pacem, quam semel cuncti a Martyribus et Confessoribus datam clamitabant, confestim sibi repraesentari coegerant, territis et subactis Praepositis suis, qui ad resistendum minus virtute animi et robore fidei praevalabant. Apud nos etiam quidam turbulentis, qui vix a nobis in praeteritum regebantur, et in nostram praesentiam differebantur, per hanc epistolam (Confessorum Ep. 16) velut quibusdam facibus accensi, plus exardescere, et pacem sibi datam extorquere coeperunt. Cyprian deferred the final decision respecting the lapsed to a council which was to be held after persecution had ceased, and after his return (Ep. 9, 11); but he allowed that before this those lapsi furnished with libellis pacis might be readmitted on the sick bed. Ep. 12, 13, see above, note 10. *Comp. dispute, as well as the great number of the lapsed, occasioned a renunciation of the principle, of always refusing reconciliation with the church to the lapsed, immediately after the Decian persecution, in Africa.¹⁸ On the other hand, this Montanistic rigor continued in its greatest extent beyond this period, in Spain.¹⁹

¹⁸ Respecting the Synod held at Carthage on this account, 251, and in justification of it, see Cypriani Ep. 52 ad Antonianum: Et quidem primum, quoniam de meo quoque actu motus videris, mea apud te et persona et causa purganda est, ne me aliquis existimet a proposito meo leviter recessisse, et cum evangelicum vigorem primo et inter initia defenderim, postmodum videam animum meum a disciplina et censura priore flexisse, ut his, qui libellis conscientiam suam maculaverint, vel nefanda sacrificia commiserint, laxandam pacem putaverim. Quod utrumque non sine librata diu et ponderata ratione a me factum est. Nam cum—proelium gloriosi certaminis in persecutione ferret, toto hortatu et pleno impetu militum vires fuerant excitandae, et maxime lapsorum mentes—fortiter animandae, ut poenitentiae viam non solum precibus et lamentationibus sequerentur, sed—ad confessionis potius ardorem et martyrii gloriam nostris increpiti vocibus provocarentur.—Secundum quod tamen ante fuerat destinatum, persecutione sopita, copiosus Episcoporum numerus—in unum convenimus, et scripturis divinis ex utraque parte prolatis, temperamentum salubri moderatione libravimus, ut nec in totum spes communicationis et pacis lapsis denegaretur, ne plus desperatione deficerent, nec tamen rursus censura evangelica solveretur, ut ad communicationem temere prosilirent; sed traheretur diu poenitentia, et rogaretur dolenter paterna clementia, et examinarentur causae et voluntates et necessitates singulorum.—Ac si minus sufficiens Episcoporum in Africa numerus videbitur, etiam Romam super hac re scripsimus ad Cornelium collegam nostrum; qui et ipse cum plurimis coepiscopis habito concilio in eandem nobiscum sententiam pari gravitate et salubri moderatione consensit.—Nec putes, frater carissime, hinc aut virtutem fratrum minui aut martyria deficere, quod lapsis laxata sit poenitentia, et quod poenitentibus spes pacis oblata.—Nam et moechis a nobis poenitentiae tempus conceditur et pax datur (comp. § 53, note 39, § 59, note 4). Non tamen iccirco virginitas in ecclesia deficit, etc.—Miror autem quosdam sic obstinatos esse, ut dandum non putent lapsis poenitentiam, aut poenitentibus existiment veniam denegandam, cum scriptum sit: Memento unde cecideris, et age poenitentiam, et fac priora opera (Apoc. ii. 5). After quoting many similar passages: Quod legentes scilicet et tenentes neminem putamus a fructu satisfactionis et spe pacis arcendum, cum sciamus juxta scripturarum divinarum fidem, auctore et hortatore ipso Deo, et ad agendam poenitentiam peccatores redigi, et veniam atque indulgentiam poenitentibus non denegari. In this sense it was even made a general church law by the Conc. Nicaen. c. 13: Ὅστε, εἰ τις ἐξοδεύει, τοῦ τελευταίου καὶ ἀναγκαιοτάτου ἐφοδίου μὴ ἀποστερεῖσθαι.

(CONTINUATION.) CONTROVERSY CONCERNING MATTERS OF CHURCH DISCIPLINE.

1. *The schism of Felicissimus in Carthage.*¹ A party already dissatisfied with the selection of Cyprian as bishop, afterward continued in a divided and hostile relation to the bishop, who was extremely jealous of his dignity. The Decian persecution put an end to the dispute arising between Cyprian and the presbyter Novatus.² But during that trying time, some presbyters readmitted the lapsed (Cypriani Ep. 9) solely on the strength of the libelli pacis of the martyrs, which were too freely granted, without regard to the bishop of Carthage, who had been obliged to leave his church. Cyprian found fault with this. But the party of the dissatisfied increased in consequence, at whose head the deacon Felicissimus appeared, and to which several confessors also were now added. This party now refused to obey the commands of the bishop, who had fled from persecution,³ and went on adding to its numbers by the reception of the lapsed.⁴ After Cyprian's return (251) they were excommunicated, and chose Fortunatus for their bishop, but do not appear to have long survived.

2. *Novatian schism.*⁵ The presbyter Novatian (in Eusebius Νοουάτος) was dissatisfied with the choice of the bishop Cornelius at Rome (251) because Cornelius, in his opinion, had conducted himself with too great lenity toward the lapsed. In the controversy that now ensued, in which the Carthaginian presbyter Novatus proved particularly active in favor of Novatian,⁶ the latter returned to the old principle that none of the lapsed ought to be admitted to church communion.⁷ Hence arose a division in the church. Novatian was chosen bishop by his party at Rome. Though the other bishops, particularly Cyprian at Carthage, and Dionysius at Alexandria, stood on the side of Cornelius, yet many in different countries joined the strict party.⁸ At first the Novatians (καθαροί) declared themselves only against the re-admission of the lapsi;⁹ but afterward they fully returned to the old African notion, that all who had defiled themselves by gross sins after baptism should be forever excluded from the church,¹⁰ because the church itself would be tainted if they were received again. In accordance with

⁶ Although he had formerly ordained Felicissimus deacon (note 2), it does not thence follow that he afterward was of the same opinion with him regarding the readmission of the lapsed, and still later that he came over to the opposite view at Rome. See Mosheim de rebus Christ. ante C. M. p. 518. Perhaps it was even dissatisfaction with his party that urged him to go from Carthage to Rome.

⁷ Formerly Novatian's opinion was milder, in the letter written by him, Epist. Cleri Rom. ad Cypr. (Ep. Cypr. 31), cf. Cypr. Ep. 52.

this view they declared all other churches to have forfeited the rights of a Christian church; and baptized anew those who came over to them.¹¹ This party was widely extended, and continued for a long time.¹² In Phrygia they united with the remnant of the Montanists.¹³

3. *Controversy concerning the baptism of heretics.*¹⁴ The custom prevalent in Africa, Egypt, Syria, and Asia Minor, of regarding reclaimed heretics as unbaptized, was considered objectionable at Rome,¹⁵ where they were prepared for re-admission without baptism, by passing through the gradus poenitentiae; especially since the time the Novatians began to re-baptize the Christians who had joined them. In Africa, too, there arose doubts regarding it; but two Carthaginian councils (255, 256) confirmed the old practice. When the second council informed Stephen, bishop of Rome (253–257) of its decisions, in a synodical letter (Ep. Cypr. 72), it received from him a haughty reply, disapproving of them.¹⁶ This led to an interchange of violent letters between Stephen and Cyprian.¹⁷ The former broke off all communion with the Africans; but notwithstanding this they repeated in the most emphatic terms their opinions at a third council at Carthage (1st Sept. 256).¹⁸ Firmilian, bishop of Caesarea, in Cappadocia, assured them (Epist. Cyp. 75) with bitter observations on Stephen,¹⁹ of the full assent of the churches in his province; and Dionysius also, bishop of Alexandria, decidedly condemned the conduct of Stephen.²⁰ After Stephen's death, peace was immediately restored to the Nam consuetudo sine veritate vetustas erroris est. On the other hand (Ep. 75): Non pudet Stephanum—Cyprianum pseudochristum et pseudoapostolum et dolosum operarium dicere. ¹⁹ Ex. gr. gratiam referre Stephano in isto possumus, quod per illius inhumanitatem nunc effectum sit, ut fidei et sapientiae vestrae experimentum caperemus.—Sed haec interim, quae a Stephano gesta sunt, praetereantur, ne dum audaciae et insolentiae ejus meminiamus, de rebus ab eo improbe gestis longiorem molestiam nobis inferamus.—Atque ego in hac parte juste indignor ad hanc tam apertam et manifestam Stephani stultitiam, quod qui sic de Episcopatus sui loco gloriatur, et se successionem Petri tenere contendit, super quem fundamenta Ecclesiae collocata sunt, multas alias petras inducat.—Lites et dissensiones quantas parasti (Stephane) per ecclesias totius mundi? Peccatum vero quam magnum tibi exaggerasti, quando te a tot gregibus scidisti? Exscidisti enim temet ipsum: noli te fallere. Siquidem ille est vere schismaticus, qui se a communione Ecclesiasticae unitatis apostatam fecerit (consequently not from a Roman centrum unitatis). Dum enim putas omnes a te abstinere posse, solum te ab omnibus abstinuisti, etc. This letter, so unpleasant to the Romish see (extant in 26 codd.), was purposely omitted in the edition of Cyprian. Romae ap. Paul. Manutium. 1563, and first printed in that of Guil. Morellii. Paris. 1564, who is bitterly censured for it by Latinus and Pamelius. Christ. Lupus (ad Tertull. libr. de Praescr. Bruxell. 1675. 4) first denied the authenticity of the letter. A Franciscan Raimund Missori (in duas celeberr. epist. Firm. et Cyp. dispuitt. crit. Venet. 1733. 4), the Jesuit R. J. Tournemine (Mémoires de Trévoux de 1734, p. 2246, ss), the Franciscan Marcellinus Molkenbuhr (in two dissertations. Münster. 1790 and 1793. 4), and A. Ant. Morcelli Africa christiana, ii. 138, declare, moreover, that Cyprian's letters respecting the baptism of heretics are forged. These arbitrary assumptions, which none else has thought fit to repeat, have been refuted by J. H. Sbaralea germana S. Cyp. et Afrorum necnon Firmiliani opinio de haereticorum baptism. Bonon. 1741. 4, and in Academic dissertations by G. G. Pneu. Jenae. 1738, and D. Cotta. Tüb. 1740.

church,²¹ although difference of opinion on the disputed point continued for a long time.²² In the mean time, even now, an intermediate opinion had arisen in the western church,²³ which afterward became the prevailing one.

4. Meletian schism. During the Diocletian persecution, Meletius, bishop of Lycopolis in Thebais, maintained that the lapsed should not be admitted to penance before peace should have been restored. On this ground he withdrew from his metropolitan Peter of Alexandria (306), and began to assume the duties of the metropolitan's office among the churches of his party.²⁴ This schism continued more than a century.

5. *Donatist schism.*²⁵ As early as the Diocletian persecution there arose at Carthage a fanatical party in opposition to the bishop Mensurius and his archdeacon Cacilianus, because they had contended against the perverseness with which many Christians sought for martyrdom partly from fanaticism, and partly from still more impure motives.²⁶ When, therefore, after Quod si interrogatus non responderit hanc trinitatem, baptizetur.

(Verona. 1738). The account of Epiphanius Haer. 68, which is favorable to Meletius, agrees best with this letter. Different, but partial against Meletius, is the representation of Athanasius Apologia contra Arianos, § 59, which Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret for the most part follow. Walch, iv. 355. Mensurius's death (311), Caccilianus was chosen his successor, this party set up in opposition to him Majorinus, who was soon succeeded by Donatus the great (313). In this proceeding they were supported by the Numidian bishops, particularly Secundus, bishop of Tigisis, and Donatus, bishop of Casae Nigrae. The pretext was, that Caccilianus had been consecrated by a "traditor," Felix, bishop of Aptunga. This pars Majorini, afterward called pars Donati, Donatistae, who gained many adherents in Africa, on account of their attaching great value to purity in the church, brought their complaint against Caccilian before Constantine: the first example of spiritual affairs being laid before a civil ruler for his decision. Constantine at first intrusted Miltiades, bishop of Rome, along with three Gallic bishops (313) with an inquiry into the affair; and afterward a council was assembled at Arles for the purpose of investigating it (314). Both decisions, as well as the judgment of the emperor himself (316) occasioned by a new appeal, proved unfavorable to the Donatists. But though severe laws also had been passed against them, yet they persisted in their opposition, and continued full of enmity toward the catholic church, for more than a century in Africa.

ASCETICISM.

In this division of time, we still find in the church a living consciousness of Christian freedom, which was manifested, espe-

occasione persecutiones vel carere vellent onerosa multis debitis vita, vel purgare se putarent, et quasi abluere facinora sua vel certe acquirere pecuniam, et in custodia deliciis perfrui de obsequio Christianorum. With this coincides what had been objected to Caecilian immediately after his election (l. c. cap. 14, no. 26): Cum esset diaconus, victum afferri martyribus in custodia constitutis prohibuisse dicebatur. There is manifestly great exaggeration in the Donatist Actis Saturnini presbyteri, Felicis, Dativi, Ampelii et aliorum, c. 17 (in Baluzii Miscellan. t. ii. p. 72, du Pin Monumenta, p. 156: On the other hand, this appendix is left out in the Actis SS. and apud Ruinart where he is called): (Mensurius) tyranno saevior, carnificia crudelior, idoneum sceleris sui ministrum diaconum suum elegit Caecilianum: idemque lora et flagra cum armatis ante fores carceris ponit, ut ab ingressu atque aditu cunctos, qui victum potumque in carcerem martyribus afferbant, gravi affectos injuria propulsaret. Et caedebantur a Caeciliano passim qui ad alendos martyres veniebant, sitientibus intus in vinculis confessoribus, pocula frangebantur ante carceris limina, cibi passim lacerandi canibus spargebantur, etc.

cially at the beginning of the period, in opposition to the ascetic precepts of the Montanists.¹ Fasting continued to be left to the free choice of each; except that ecclesiastical custom had determined certain days as especially appropriate for that purpose, which were very different in different churches.² Besides, on particular occasions the churches were summoned by their bishops to a general fast;³ and in like manner certain fasts were imposed on the penitents.⁴ External asceticism generally

The meaning is ambiguous, but the true sense is probably this, that conjugal intercourse is forbidden bishops, presbyters, and deacons wholly (in totum), and to the inferior clergy as long as they are engaged in the active service of the church. These latter might live together with their wives, can. 65: Si cujus clerici uxor fuerit moechata, et—maritus—non eam statim projecerit, nec in finem accipiat communionem. Examples of married bishops and presbyters, belonging to this period, may be found in Calixtus de Conjugio clericorum, ed. Henke, p. 201.

had married must have been a virgin.¹⁶ Among ascetics, the dangerous practice arose of taking to themselves virgins for the purpose of living with them in pure spiritual communion, vanquishing all temptations. They called them ἀδελφαί, sorores,¹⁷ Others gave them the appellations συνείσακτοι,¹⁸ subintroductae, ἀγαπηταί, extraneae. Against this practice, which prevailed principally among the unmarried clergy, Cyprian first declared himself, and after him several synods.¹⁹

Hitherto the ascetics had lived scattered among other Christians without external distinction; but the Decian persecution was the cause of some Egyptian Christians²⁰ fleeing into the desert, and there in solitariness giving themselves up to an asceticism in the highest degree extravagant (ἐρημίται, μοναχοί). This new asceticism began to make greater noise, when, during Maximin's persecution (311), the hermit *Anthony*²¹ appeared in a wild procession at Alexandria. But a season of persecution, which so readily engenders fanaticism, in addition to enthusiasm, was peculiarly adapted to procure approbation even for such oddities. § 74.

¹⁷ So previously among the Gnostics. Irenaeus, i. 1, § 12, says of some Valentinians: Ὡς μετὰ ἀδελφῶν προσποιούμενοι συνοικεῖν, προϊόντος τοῦ χρόνου ἠλέγχθησαν, ἐγκύμονος τῆς ἀδελφῆς ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ γεννηθείσης. Perhaps also in the case of Marcion. See Hall. A. L. Z. April, 1823, S. 850. Epiphanius, Haer. 47, c. 3, accuses the Encratites of the same thing. The first trace of it among the Catholics is in Hermae Pastor, lib. iii. sim. ix. § 11, where the virgins say of Hermas: Nobiscum dormies ut frater, non ut maritus: frater enim noster es, et de caetero tecum habitare paratae sumus: valde enim carum te habemus, &c. Tertullian also, de Jejuniis, c. 17, appears to blame the catholics for the same reason: *Apud te agape in cacabis fervet, fides in culinis calet, spes in ferculis jacet. Sed major his est agape, quia per hanc adolescentes tui cum sororibus dormiunt (an allusion to 1 Cor. xiii. 13). From the time of Cyprian the thing occurs more frequently. See below, note 19. Those ascetics appealed to the example of Jesus, John, and the apostles (Lib. de Singularit. cleric. c. 20. Epiphanius, Haer. 78, c. 11), and named the young women, after 1 Cor. ix. 5, Sorores (Conc. ¹⁸ Euseb. vii. 30, 6: Τὰς συνεισάκτους γυναῖκας, ὡς Ἀντιοχεῖς ὀνομάζουσι. Perhaps the περιακτοί, 1 Cor. ix. 5, gave rise to that appellation proceeding from Antiochian wit. Perhaps, too, it originated from John xix. 27; ἔλαβεν αὐτὴν εἰς τὰ ἴδια i. e., συνεῖσήγαγεν.

MORAL CHARACTER OF CHRISTIANITY IN THIS PERIOD.

Though Christian freedom at this time had been fettered only by a few ecclesiastical laws, and the teachers, for the most part, were still able rightly to distinguish the essence of Christian virtue from its forms, yet it can not but be perceived, that germs were already developed in the church, from which its moral corruption afterward arose. The notion of the church's external unity, with its consequences, led men to set too high a value on orthodoxy of the letter,¹ and on external connection with the church. Heretics were universally hated as men wholly corrupt and lost.² On the contrary, even an Origen was of opinion that, in the communion and at the intercession of the church, even gross sinners might be accepted of God.³ To

C. 18 : Οἱ διαφθεῖροντες τὸ ποίμνιον, καὶ μολύνοντες τὴν κληρονομίαν, οἱ δοξόσοφοι καὶ παμπόνηροι. Hence it was thought that heretics must have only the worst motives, and be guilty of the worst deeds. This was the source of so many distorted descriptions and fabrications respecting them.

³ Origenes in libr. Jesu Nave, Hom. x. 1, on the narrative of the Gibeonites, Jos. 9 :

this was added the error of estimating many virtues as well as errors too much according to external circumstances, since the temptation was easy to confound the ecclesiastical estimate of them,⁴ which could only proceed upon the external form of the transactions, with the moral standard. The distinction between a higher and lower virtue did not, indeed, develop for a long time all the germs of corruption which it bore within itself; yet it must even already have perplexed the ideas of morality, since men began to place the higher virtue chiefly in certain external asceticism.⁵ As too great value was attributed to this external asceticism, so also the steadfast endurance of persecution for the sake of Christianity was overvalued.⁶ Although it is certain that many had worked themselves up to undergo martyrdom, from motives not wholly pure,⁷ and although the confessors also were not always morally good men,⁸ yet it was a general opinion that by the external fact of suffering, they not only blotted out

Isti ergo veniunt ad Jesum cum omnibus vetustatibus suis, et orant ab eo hoc tantum ut salventur. In quorum figura tale mihi aliquid videtur ostendi. Sunt quidam in Ecclesia credentes quidem et habentes fidem in Deum, et acquiescentes in omnibus divinis praeceptis: quique etiam erga servos Dei religiosi sunt, et servire iis cupiunt, sed et ad ornatum Ecclesiae, vel ministerium satis prompti paratique sunt, in actibus vero suis et conversatione propria obscenitatibus et vitii involuti, nec omnino deponentes veterem hominem cum actibus suis—praeter hoc, quod in Deum credant, et erga servos Dei, vel Ecclesiae cultum videntur esse devoti, nihil adhibent emendationis vel innovationis in moribus. Istis ergo Jesus Dominus noster salutem quidem concedit, sed quodammodo salus ipsa eorum notam non evadit infamiae. Cf. c. 3. In Matthaeum commentariorum series, c. 120 (ad Matth. xxvii. 15): Illud quaeramus, si tale aliquid fiat et in iudicio Dei, ut omnis Ecclesiae petere possit aliquem peccatorem, ut solvatur a condemnatione peccati, maxime autem si quando habeat perditionis caetera opera, ad benefaciendum autem Ecclesiae impiger sit. Tales enim invenies saepe in potentibus constitutos, alias quidem peccatores, tamen pro Christianis, quantum possibile iis est, multa agentes. Hoc si videtur alicui dignum requisitione, requiret. Quod autem manifestum est, omnes curare tentemus, ut ex petentibus inveniamur esse, et in ordine eorum, qui bene vixerunt, magis quam ex illis, pro quibus petitur, quasi pro hominibus malis. Nam etsi concedatur aliquis peccatorum ad preces Ecclesiae, non tamen justum est gloriam et beatitudinem consequi eum, qui huiusmodi est: sufficit enim quod a poena dimittitur.

³ According to the opinion which originated with Luc. Holstenius (ed. Bonn. ii. 16), the proper Chron. Pasch. reaches only to 314, while the following part belongs to a later continuator. But even in that first part we find very many allusions to later persons and things, so that it must have suffered a thorough interpolation. For example, the festival of the annunciation is mentioned, i. 373; Chrysostom, and under this very name too, 437; Eutyches, 445; Cyrillus, 450, etc.

THE FAVORS SHOWN TO CHRISTIANITY UNDER CONSTANTINE AND HIS SONS.

Martini über die Einführung der christl. Religion als Staatsrelig. im röm. Reiche durch d. Kaiser Constantin. München. 1813. 4. S. 29, ff.

Although Constantine, after his victory over Licinius, gave full toleration to all religions,¹ protected the heathen priests in their prerogatives,² reserved to himself the dignity of a pontifex maximus,³ and not till shortly before his death († 337) received the rite of baptism from Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia;⁴ yet he openly professed Christianity immediately after that victory,⁵ seeking to make it more acceptable to his subjects by recommendation and persuasion,⁶ and attractive toward the Christians

by favors;⁷ engaging with zeal in the erection of many, and in part, splendid churches,⁸ and in furnishing them with revenues out of the common fund of the cities.⁹ Since paganism continued to prevail in Rome,¹⁰ he transferred the seat of his government to Byzantium, and changed this city into a chiefly Christian New-Rome (afterward Constantinople).¹¹ But yet the

Διὸ πρὸς πάντας ἀρόμττεσθαι δεῖ, ἰατροῦ δίκην ἐκάστῳ τὰ λυσιτελεῖ πρὸς σωτηρίαν ποριζομένους· ὅστ' ἐξ ἅπαντος τὴν σωτήριον παρὰ τοῖς πᾶσι δοξάζεσθαι διδασκαλίαν. In this way he himself converted the pagan inhabitants of Heliopolis in Phoenicia, l. c. iii. 58: Προνοῶν—ὅπως ἂν πλείους προσίοιεν τῷ λόγῳ, τὰ πρὸς ἐπικουρίαν τῶν πενήτων ἐκπλεα παρεῖχε, καὶ αὐτῇ προτρέπων· ἐπὶ τὴν σωτήριον σπεύδειν διδασκαλίαν· μονονοχὶ τῷ φάντι παραπλησίως εἰπὼν ἂν καὶ αὐτός· "εἴτε προφάσει, εἴτ' ἀληθείᾳ Χριστὸς καταγγελλέσθω (Phil. i. 18!)." Rewards bestowed on the places which declared in favor of Christianity, l. c. iv. 38 and 39.

greater number of the principal families of the kingdom remained pagan still, and hence he was obliged to have many heathen about his person, and in the higher offices of state,¹² although he most readily advanced Christians to posts of honor.¹³ The more violent measures of Constantine against paganism were confined to his confiscating in the east many less frequented temples, whose revenues he converted to the use of Christian churches, or the building of Constantinople,¹⁴ and his prohibiting the rites of worship connected with immoralities.¹⁵ The law by which he is said to have interdicted all sacrifices was not at least carried out into operation.¹⁶ After his death he was, according to custom, placed by the senate among the gods.¹⁷

After the death of Constantine II. († 340) Constantius ruled

Rhea and the Fortuna Romae, ap. Zosimus, ii. 31, were probably only niches. When Constantine caused his gilded statue to be set up at the dedication of the city, with the Τύχη τῆς πόλεως on the right, which was to be honored at the yearly festival of the birthday of the existing emperor (Chron. paschale, p. 285): this merely proves that as yet no suitable Christian symbolism had been formed for such solemnities (comp. Manso, l. c. S. 77). It is an analogous case when we find frequently on the coins of the first Christian emperors Victoria with the Labarum. The later tradition (ap. Zonaras, Cedrenus, etc.), that Constantine dedicated his city to the mother of God, is ridiculous.

¹⁵ So the worship of Venus in Phoenicia, Euseb. l. c. iii. 55, 58, iv. 37, 38, the scandalous worship of the Nile, iv. 25. So also he threw down the temple of Exeulopius in Cilicia, on account of the fraud carried on there, iii. 56. Martini, S. 36, f. Rüdiger, p. 23, ss.

¹⁶ As Constantius (below, note 18) refers to such a law, so Eusebius, l. c. ii. 45, speaks expressly of a νόμος εἰργων τὰ μυσάρῃ τῆς—εἰδωλολατρίας, ὡς μήτε ἐγέρσειε ξοάνων ποιῆσθαι τολμᾶν, μήτε μαντείας καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις περιεργίαις ἐπιχειρεῖν, μήτε μὴν θύειν καθόλου μηδένα. In like manner, iv. 23, 25, and the following Christian writers, the later of whom, ex. gr. Theophanes, speak even of capital punishments which Constantine enacted against heathenism. See Martini, p. 34. Annot. 67. On the other hand, it is striking that this law is nowhere to be found, and that only expressions of his are extant which assure toleration to heathenism (see note 1), and that Libanius asserts of him, Orat. pro templis, § 3 (ed. Reiske, vol. ii. p. 161): Εἰς μὲν τὴν τῆς πόλεως, περὶ ἣν ἐσπούδασε,ποίησιν τοῖς ἱεροῖς ἐχρήσατο χρήμασι, τῆς κατὰ νόμους δὲ θεραπείας ἐκίνησεν οὐδὲ ἔν. According to Gothofredus (ad. Cod. Theod. lib. xvi. tit. 10, l. 3) such a law was actually passed, but in the last years of the emperor. Martini, p. 40, is of opinion that Constantine and Eusebius in those passages refer merely to the laws against immoral rites: Rüdiger thinks that a general prohibition of sacrifice was issued by Constantine, but afterward recalled. Perhaps it was published shortly before his death, and was not therefore carried into execution.

the east, and Constans the west. Both declared themselves decided opponents to paganism.¹⁸ Constans, however could not proceed very strictly in opposition to it in the west, but had to act with some respect toward Rome in particular, still addicted as it was to the sanctuaries of the ancient religion.¹⁹ But under these emperors the Christians sometimes forgot the principles of religious toleration on which they had so loudly insisted during former persecutions,²⁰ and fanatical voices calling for the violent extinction of paganism were raised among them.²¹ When the whole empire devolved on Constantius after Constans' death († 350), all sacrifices were prohibited for the first time on pain of death.²² This law could not, however, be fully

About 347 an unknown traveler (Vetus Orbis descriptio, ed. J. Gothofredi. 1628, p. 35) found in Rome not only seven Vestal virgins, but the worship of Jupiter, Sol, and the Mater Deum still entire. Comp. Gothofredi, note p. 40, ss. Testimonies respecting the Pagan worship at this time may be derived from inscriptions in Beugnot Hist. de la destruction du Paganisme, i. 154.

²² Cod. Theod. xvi. 10, 4, (A.D. 353): Placuit, omnibus locis atque urbibus universis claudi protinus templa, et accessu vetitis omnibus, licentiam delinquendi perditis abnegari. Volumus etiam, cunctos sacrificiis abstinere. Quodsi quis aliquid forte hujusmodi perpetraverit, gladio ultore sternatur. Facultates etiam perempti fisco decernimus vindicari, et similiter affligi rectores provinciarum, si facinora vindicare neglexerint. Comp. L. 5, (A.D. 353,) and L. 6, (A.D. 356). However the heathen priesthood were restored in cases of vacancy, xii. 1, 46, (A.D. 358).—A prohibition of the adoption of Judaism, Cod. Th. xvi. 8, carried out in Rome and Alexandria.²³ Every where else heathenism from this time forward was obliged to conceal itself in the country, in remote corners²⁴ (hence Pagani, Paganismus).²⁵ Constantius died in 361.

These violent measures had certainly the effect of opening the eyes of the heathen people to the impotency of their gods and the fraud of their priests;²⁶ but with nobler patriotic spirits they tended rather to increase the prejudices against Christianity, so partisan as it appeared to be, and favored by measures so unjust. Whatever truth they discovered in it appeared to them to have been already taught by the ancient philosophers.²⁷ They regarded the positive doctrines of it as barbarian superstitions, while the theological controversies concerning these doctrines brought suspicion on Christianity, and turned its professors into ridicule.²⁸ On the other hand, paganism gained in this respect, that the ancient classic culture and literature, containing a religious doctrine at once pure and national, seemed chiefly to belong to it and to be intrusted to its keeping.²⁹ The most celebrated schools of rhetoric and philosophy in Alexandria, Athens,³⁰ etc., had heathen preceptors. The new platonian philosophy was silently working in favor of paganism,³¹ Jamblichus († 333), the great orators Libanius († 395), Himerius († 390), and Themistius († 390), were heathen;³² while there were few Christian scholars who could rival them, like the two Apollinarius in Laodicea in Syria; and these had to struggle with the prejudices against all heathen learning, which were increased by monachism.³³ Thus the most distinguished spiritual orators among the Christians were obliged to receive their education in heathen schools.

²⁵ The expression is first found in a law of Valentinian, A.D. 368, (Cod. Theodos. lib. xvi. tit. 2, l. 18.) and about the same time in Marius Victorinus de δημοσιῶ recipiendo (Graeci, quos Ἐλλήνας vel Paganos vocant, multos Deos dicunt), and in his comm. in Ep. ad Galatas in A. Maji Script. vett. nova collectio, t. iii. P. ii. p. 29. Under Theodosius this name is the usual one. For the explanation of it see Paulus Orosius (about 416) histor. praef. qui ex locorum agrestium compitis et pagis pagani vocantur. Prudentius (about 405) has for it Peristeph. x. 296: pago dediti; in Symmachum, i. 620: pago impliciti, cf. Chr. sententias, quas mirari et praedicare coguntur, de Platonis libris eum didicisse) diligentissime et copiosissime scripsit.

Under these circumstances it can not appear strange that we should find most attachment to paganism in the higher ranks;³⁴

JULIAN THE APOSTATE.

A. Neander über den Kaiser Julianus und sein Zeitalter. Leipzig. 1812. 8. (Compare Schlosser's review in the Jen. A. L. Z. Jan. 1813. S. 121, ff.) Neander's Kirchengesch. ii. i. 75. C. Ullmann's Gregorius v. Nazianz, der Theologe. Darmst. 1825. 8. S. 72, ff. C. H. van Herwerden de Juliano Imp. relig. christ. hoste, eodemque vindice. Ludg. Bat. 1827. 8. Julian d. Abtrünnige, v. D. G. Fr. Wiggers, in Illgen's Zeitschr. f. hist. Theol. vii. 1, 115. Gfrörer's Kirchengesch. ii. 1, 155.

The injustice which Julian had to endure from the first Christian emperors, the strict education by which Christianity was attempted to be forced upon him, and his early private acquaintance with new-platonic philosophers, especially Maximus, had early disposed him toward heathenism, whose dead forms he saw animated with so much life by the new-platonists.¹ When he attained to the imperial dignity (361), he declared himself

Ullmann explains the origin of the Hyspistarii from a blending together of Judaism and Parsism; Böhmer, following Cyril (see above, note 36), regards them as the same party as the Massalians and θεοσεβεῖς, and perceives in them the remnant of a monotheism derived from primitive revelation, but afterward disfigured by Sabacism. Gesenius Monum. Phoeniciae, i. 135, ii. 384, puts along with them the Abellonii, ap. Augustin. de Haer. c. 87. אַבְעֵלְיָנִים from אַבְעֵלְיָן; but the Abellonii are manifestly a Christian sect.

openly in favor of the ancient national religion, to which he endeavored to impart a more moral and religious form, even by introducing many practices borrowed from Christianity,² while he himself thought that he was only restoring the worship of the gods to its original purity, and practiced it with greater zeal.³ He took away their privileges from the Christians,⁴ and forbade them to appear as public teachers of the national literature;⁵ but he promised them full toleration in other respects. He was guilty, however, of many acts of injustice toward them, often, it is true, provoked by their intemperate zeal.⁶ But they Julian established hierarchal gradations among the priests (Ep. 62), and wished them to receive higher honor than civil officers (Fragmentum, p. 296, Ep. 49). Sozomenus v. 16 says of him: 'Υπολαβὼν, τὸν Χριστιανισμὸν τὴν σύστασιν ἔχειν ἐκ τοῦ βίου καὶ τῆς πολιτείας τῶν αὐτῶν μετιόντων, διοικεῖτο πανταχῆ τοῖς ἑλληνικοῖς ναοῦς τῆ παρασκευῇ καὶ τῇ τάξει τῆς Χριστιανῶν θρησκείας διακοσμεῖν· βήμασι τε, καὶ προεδρῖαις, καὶ ἑλληνικῶν δογμάτων καὶ παραινέσεων διδασκάλους τε καὶ ἀναγνώσταις, ὧρῶν τε ῥητῶν καὶ ἡμερῶν τεταγμέναις εὐχαῖς, φροντιστηρίους τε ἀνδρῶν καὶ γυναικῶν φιλοσοφεῖν ἐγνωκότων (Julian led even an ascetic life, cf. The sacred national literature appeared to him to be profaned by the contradictory and scoffing Christian interpretation. But there is no ground in this to attribute to him the design of degrading the Christians into a state of ignorance, as has been frequently done by writers. For there were so few Christian grammarians, on account of the prejudices with which they had to contend among their brethren of the same faith (see § 75, note 27), that Christians had almost their only opportunity of studying the ancient literature under heathen preceptors, a thing which they might yet do without prohibition. In the mean time, however, some Christian authors, especially the two Apollinarius, and Gregory of Nazianzum, were led by that prohibition to attempt imitations of heathen works in poetry and eloquence with biblical materials, Socrat. iii. 16. Sozom. v. 18.

had still more to suffer from the heathen governors and people. Hence it was natural that many who had hitherto been Christian professors for the sake of external advantages, should now go back to heathenism from the same motives.⁷ The Jewish religion was respected by Julian as an ancient national faith; and on his march against the Persians, he even gave permission for the temple at Jerusalem to be rebuilt, though it was soon after destroyed.⁸ On this same expedition he composed in Antioch, where he bore the scoffs of the Christian populace with philosophical indifference, his work against Christianity.⁹ Soon after this he was killed in a battle with the Persians (363).¹⁰

GENERAL TOLERATION TILL 381.

The reign of Jovian († 364) was in so critical times that he found it advisable to allow full freedom to all religions,¹ although he himself was a zealous Christian.² But this very disposition of the emperor encouraged the Christians in many places not only to demand restitution for injuries actually suffered under the preceding reign, but also to exhibit their hatred against the pagans, which had been increased by Julian's measures.³ The legal toleration of all religions also continued under the following emperors, Valentinian I. (in the west † 375),⁴ and Valens (in the east † 378⁵), although they forbade bloody sacrifices;⁶ in like manner, in the first years of the emperors Gratian and Valentinian II. in the west, and Theodosius in the east, till the year 381; while the continued irruptions of barbarous nations and internal commotions compelled them to avoid every thing by which disturbances might have been increased still more.

² He restored all rights to the churches and clergy, Sozom. vi. 3, also the σύνταξις τοῦ σίτου (comp. § 53, note 9, § 76, note 4), but by way of preliminary only the third part, on account of a famine. Theodoret. iv. 4.

SUPPRESSION OF PAGANISM BY THEODOSIUS.

Rüdiger de statu Paganorum sub Imp. christ. p. 47. Jan. Henr. Stoffken Diss. de Theodosii M. in rem. christianam meritis. Lugd. Bat. 1828. 8. p. 16. A. Beugnot Hist. de la destruction du Paganisme en Occident, i. 345.

After Theodosius had secured the east against the Goths, he directed his greatest energies to the suppression of paganism. In the same year in which he summoned the second oecumenical synod at Constantinople (381), he forbade apostasy to paganism,¹ but still allowed the other rites of heathen worship to be practiced except sacrifice. The two emperors of the west followed his example. Gratian laid aside the dignity of pontifex maximus,² commanded the altar of Victoria to be removed from the senate-house, and took away all privileges from the pagan worship,³ although he was obliged to allow in Rome the sacrifices elsewhere forbidden, as Theodosius had to do at Alexan-

² According to Zosimus, iv. c. 36, who alone speaks of the circumstance, he might have refused it as soon as it fell to him, that is, after the death of Valens (for only the first Augustus was pontifex maximus). This supposition, however, is contradicted by the fact that Gratian bore the same title for some time. See Ausonii Gratianum actio pro consulatu, and the inscriptions in Orelli Inscriptionum latinarum amplissima collectio, vol. i. p. 245. The usual assumption that Gratian merely declined the priestly dress offered to him, but yet bore the title, is arbitrary; for Zosimus speaks in express terms of the refusal of the dress and of the title. Hence, it must be maintained that Gratian wore that dignity for some years, and then laid it aside. J. A. Bosius de pontificatu maximo Imp. praecepit christianorum, in *Graevii Thesaur. antiquit. ³ He took away Vestalium virginum praerogativam, Sacerdotii immunitatem (which Valentinian I. had confirmed even in 371, Cod. Theod. xii. i. 75) caused the real estates belonging to the temples (agros virginibus et ministris deficientium voluntate legatos) to be drawn into the exchequer (cf. Theod. xvi. 10, 20), and deprived the vestal virgins and priests of victum modicum justaque privilegia. Symmachus, lib. x. Ep. 61. Ambros. Ep. 17 dria.⁴ In Rome, paganism continued to be predominant,⁵ particularly among families of distinction;⁶ but yet the attempts made by the prefect of the city, Q. Aurelius Symmachus, to have these imperial decrees abolished, and in particular the altar of Victoria re-erected, had no influence upon Gratian († 383), Valentinian II., and Theodosius.⁷ In the east, the Christians proceeded far beyond the imperial ordinances. Enterprising bishops led mobs of hirelings or fanatics against the temples;⁸ and the monks especially often combined for the destruction of all heathen sanctuaries.⁹ The appeal ὑπὲρ τῶν ἱερῶν (388—

A different account, and one more accordant with later phenomena, is given by Zosimus, iv. 59, in his representation of the effect of Theodosius's discourse in the senate: Μηδενός δὲ τῆ παρακλήσει πεισθέντος, μηδὲ ἐλομένον τῶν ἀφ' οὐπὲρ ἡ πόλις ὤκισθη παραδεδομένον αὐτοῖς πατριῶν ἀναχωρῆσαι, καὶ προτιμῆσαι τούτων ἄλογον συγκατάθεσιν (ἐκείνα μὲν γὰρ σὺλάξαντας ἤδη διακοσίους καὶ χιλίους σχεδὸν ἔτεσιν ἀπόρρητον τὴν πόλιν οἰκεῖν· ἕτερα δὲ ἀντὶ τούτων ἀλλαξαμένους τὸ ἐκβησόμενον ἄγνωσιν). τότε δὲ ὁ Θεοδοσίος βάρυνεσθαι τὸν δημόσιον ἔλεγε τῆ περὶ τὰ ἱερὰ καὶ τὰς θυσίας δαπάνη, βούλεσθαι τε ταῦτα περιελεῖν, κ. τ. λ. (That is to say, the usurper Eugenius had given back again the legacies of the heathen sanctuaries (see note 3) which had been confiscated by Gratian. See Ambros. Ep. 57, ad Eugenium). The consequence, Zosim. v. 38: "Ὅτε Θεοδοσίος ὁ πρεσβύτερος, τὴν Εὐγενίου καθελὼν τυραννίδα, τὴν Ῥώμην κατέλαβε, καὶ τῆς ἱερᾶς ἀγιστείας ἐνεποίησε πᾶσιν ὀλιγοῖαν, τὴν δημοσίαν δαπάνην τοῖς ἱεροῖς χορηγεῖν ἄρησάμενος, ἀπηλαύνοντο μὲν ἱερεῖς καὶ ἱέρειαι, κατελιμπάνετο δὲ πάσης ἱερουργίας τὰ τεμένη.

With almost all, however, its ancient doctrine was obliged to sink under the pressure of new ideas.¹ Hence the victory of Christianity over paganism internally dead, could not be matter of doubt;² although the former often carried on the contest more by external means than by its inward power.³ Many heathen could not resist

the external advantages presented by it. Few were ready to suffer for their religion.⁴ But it is true, that in this manner also the number of merely external Christians was increased—men who still entertained heathen modes of thought and disposition; and the value of Christianity was by no means so generally manifested in the practices of its confessors as before.⁵

In the empire of the east (Arcadius, 395—408, Theodosius II. till 450), which was less disturbed from without, the ordinances of Theodosius against paganism could be strictly enforced.⁶ Crowds of monks were sent about through the provinces with full power from the emperors, for the purpose of destroying all traces of idolatry.⁷ Even misdeeds and murders were allowed to pass unheeded by the emperors; such as the horrible murder of the female philosopher Hypatia in Alexandria (416).⁸ The new-platonic philosophers at Athens, and among them even the celebrated Proclus († 485),⁹ were forced to conceal themselves most carefully, because they rejected Christianity. He then contrasts with them the steadfastness of the Christian martyrs. Chrysostom de S. Babyla, § 7, says of the heathen priests, μάλλον δεσποτῶν καὶ τῶν εἰδώλων δὲ αὐτῶν τοὺς βασιλεῖς θεραπεύουσι, and describes the neglected state in which the temples, altars, and images of the gods were, in consequence, under Christian emperors.

⁶ Cod. Theod. xvi. 10, 13, ss. By L. 14 their privileges were taken from the priests.

⁷ So Chrysostom (Theodoret. v. 29): Μαθὼν τὴν Φοινίκην ἔτι περὶ τὰς τῶν δαιμόνων τελευτὰς μεμνηνῆναι, ἄσκητὸς μὲν ζῆλω θεῶν περπολουμένους συνέλεξε, νόμοις δὲ αὐτοὺς ὑπὸ πλείστας βασιλικῶν, κατὰ τῶν εἰδωλικῶν ἐξέπεμψε τεμένων. These νόμοι are without doubt Cod. Theod. xvi. 10, 16, A.D. 399: Si qui in agris templa sunt, sine turba ac tumultu diruantur. Cf. Chrysostom. Epistt. 28, 51, 53, 54, 55, 59, 69, 123, 126, 221. Chrysostom worked in the same way in other countries also. See Procli (Episc. Constantinop. 434—445) laudato S. Jo. Chrys. (Orat. xx. in Combefisii Nov. auctarium, i. 468): In Epheso artem Midae nudavit, in Phrygia Matrem quae dicebatur deorum sine filiis fecit, in Caesarea publica meretricia honoris vacua despoliavit, in Syria Deum impugnantem synagogas evacuaavit, in Perside verbum pietatis seminavit.

423, all visible traces of paganism had disappeared in the east.¹⁰

It was otherwise in the west, notwithstanding the want of all living attachment to paganism in this quarter of the world also. So little hold had it on the minds of the people, that even in Rome, its continued center, where many families of note were still heathen, and many of the highest places were still occupied by heathen,¹¹ sacrifices were totally discontinued, after the cost of public oblations had ceased to be defrayed by the state. Under the feeble reign of Honorius (395-423), the earlier laws against paganism still remained in force, and were even increased by the addition of several new enactments; but the emperor was obliged at times to limit their operation,¹² to acknowledge heathen priesthood as public offices,¹³ and to put a check to the destruction of temples,¹⁴ for the sake of preserving some degree of tranquillity. The struggle, however, between Christianity and paganism often proceeded here and there to acts of violence, in which the one party prevailed at one time, the other at another.¹⁵ As the heathen had always been accustomed to

¹¹ Thus Florentinus, A.D. 397, and Flavianus, 399, were Praef. urbis, Valerius Messala, 396, Praef. praet. Italiae, Atticus Consul, 397 (Beugnot, ii. 6). Praefecti urbis were Rutilius Numatianus, A.D. 413, Albinus, 414, Symmachus, 418: Praef. praet. Ital. 429 Volusianus (l. c. p. 127).

¹³ Cod. Theod. xii. i. 166 ad Pompejanum Procons. Africae, A.D. 400.

¹⁴ The African bishops resolved at the Concil. Africanum, A.D. 399, to make the following propositions to the emperors, Can. 25 (Cod. Eccl. Afric. c. 58. Mansi, iii. p. 766): Ut reliquias idolorum per totum Africam jubeant penitus amputare—et templa eorum, quæ in agris vel in locis abditis constituta nullo ornamento sunt, jubeantur omnimodo destrui. Can. 27 (Cod. Afric. c. 60): Ut quoniam contra praecepta divina convivia multis in locis exercentur, quæ ab errore gentili attracta sunt—vetari talia jubeant, etc. But thereupon Honorius, A.D. 399, enacted two laws of an opposite character, Cod. Theodos. lib. xvi. tit. 10, l. 17: Ut profanos ritus jam salubri lege submovimus, ita festos conventus civium et communem omnium lætitiā non patimur submoveri. L. 18: Aedes, illicitis rebus vacuas, nostrarum beneficio sanctionum, ne quis conetur evertere.

¹⁵ Regarding the destruction of temples which Martin, bishop of Tours, A.D. 375-400, undertook, with violent opposition on the part of the heathen, see Sulpic. Severus de vita b. Martini, c. 13-15. In Anaunia, a valley of the Rhoetian Alps, the missionaries Sisin

lay the blame of all misfortune on the Christians, so since the west of Europe had been inundated by barbarous people, and even Italy had been several times devastated by such hordes, they were especially loud in declaring all these disasters to be punishments sent by the gods,¹⁶ and in predicting the speedy downfall of Christianity.¹⁷ Against these accusations the writings of *Augustine*¹⁸ and the Spanish presbyter Oro- nius, Martyrius, and Alexander, were horribly murdered, A.D. 397, by the heathen during the Pagan festival of the Ambarvalia, and the church built by them destroyed. See Acta SS. (ad d. 29 Maj.) Maji, t. vii. p. 38. In Saffecte, in Africa, the Christians had demolished a statue of Hercules, and the heathen killed sixty of them for it (August. Ep. 268 ad Suflectanos). How at Calama, in Numidia, the heathen, during one of their festivals in the year 403, attacked the church there, and persecuted the Christians, may be seen in Augustin. Ep. 202 ad Nectarium.

¹⁸ Augustin. Retractat. ii. 43: Interea Roma Gothorum irruptione agentium sub rege Alarico, utque impetu magna cladis eversa est, cujus eversionem deorum falsorum multorumque cultores, quos usitato nomine Paganos vocamus, in christianam religionem referre conantes, solito acerbis et amarius Deum verum blasphemare coeperant. Nec se aliquis excusatum putet, dicens, non jussi fieri, non mandavi—facendo enim, et non arguendo consensum praebuit immolanti.—Tu igitur, frater, cum tuum sacrificare rusticum cernis, nec prohibes immolare, peccas. Cum cellam ingressus fueris, reperies in ea pallentes cespites, mortuosque carbones. Et si ad agrum processeris, cernis aras ligneas et simulacra lapidea. Cum maturius vigilaveris, et videris saucium vino rusticum, scire debes, quoniam, sicut dicunt, aut dianaticus (a worshiper of Diana), aut aruspex est:—talis enim sacerdos parat se vino ad plagas deae suae, ut dum est ebrius poenam suam ipse non sentiat. Nam ut paulisper describamus habitum vatis hujusce: est ei adulterinis crinibus hirsutum caput, nuda habens pectora, pallio crura semicineta, et more gladiatorum—ferrum gestat in manibus, nisi quod gladiatore pejor est, quia ille adversus alterum dimicare cogitur, iste contra se pugnare compellitur. So also Maximus contra Paganos (Opp. p. 721) is directed against the still existing idolatry. Comp. his Sermo 77, p. 610: Principes quidem tam boni christiani leges pro religione promulgant, sed eas executores non exerunt competenter. In Gaul, Conc. Here persecutions of the Christians must still have taken place once and again, for chapter 10 contains penitence-decisions de his qui in persecutione praevarecati sunt, si voluntarie

In Corsica Paganism continued predominant, and sacrifices were publicly offered. A female Christian named Julia was crucified by the exasperated heathens (between 440–445), because she would not take part in a sacrifice. See Acta SS. Maj. viii. 167 (ad 22 Maj.).

²³ In Rome, too, such practices as had a certain political importance were kept up. See Salvianus (presbyter in Marseilles, about 440. *Salv. et Vincent. Lir. Opp. ed. Baluzius. Paris. 1684. 8. The fights with wild beasts were continued, Salvianus, vi. p. 105: Nihil ferme vel criminum, vel flagitiorum est, quod in spectaculis non sit; ubi summum deliciarum genus est mori homines, aut, quod est morte gravius acerbisque, lacerari, expleri ferarum alvos humanis caribus, comedi homines cum circumstantium laetitia, conspicientium voluptate.—Atque ut hoc fiat, orbis impendium est; magna enim cura id agitur et elaboratur.—Sed haec, inquis, non semper fiunt. Certum est, et praeclara erroris est excusatio, quia non semper fiunt! P. 113: Si quando venerit,—ut eodem die et festivitas ecclesiastica et ludi publici agantur, quaero ab omnium conscientia, quis locus majores christianorum virorum copias habeat, cavea ludi publici, an atrium Dei?—Non solum ad Ecclesiam non veniunt qui Christianos se esse dicunt; sed si qui inscii forte venerint, dum in ipsa Ecclesia sunt, si ludos agi audiunt, Ecclesiam derelinquunt.—Maximus Taurin. Hom. c. p. 334: *Ante dies plerosque—circa vesperam tanta vociferatio populi extitit, ut irreligiositas ejus penetraret ad caelum. Quod cum requirerem, quid sibi clamor hic velit; dixerunt mihi, quod laboranti lunae vestra vociferatio subveniret, et defectum ejus suis clamoribus adjuvaret. It was believed (Hom. ci. p. 337), lunam de caelo magorum carminibus posse deduci. The heathen festival of the Kalendae Januariæ was universally observed. Ambrose, Augustine, Leo the Great, and Peter Chrysologus, bishop of Ravenna, express themselves with zeal against it; also Maximus Hom. ciii. p. 343: Quis sapiens, qui dominici Natalis sacramentum colit, non ebrietatem condemnet Saturnalium, non declinet lasciviam Kalendarum?—Sunt plerique, qui trahentes consuetudinem de veteri superstitione vanitatis, Kalendarum diem pro summa festivitate procurent.—Nam ita lasciviant, ita vino et epulis satiantur, ut qui toto anno castus et temperans fuerit, illa die sit temulentus atque pollutus.—Illud autem quale est, quod surgentes mature ad publicum cum munusculo, h. e., cum strenis unusquisque procedit, et salutaturus amicos, salutatur praemiò antequam osculo? caet. Most striking is that which Salvianus de gub. Dei viii. p. 165, writes of Africa: *Quis non eorum, qui Christiani appellabantur, Caelestem illam (see note 17) aut post Christum adoravit, aut, quod est pejus multo, ante quam Christum? Quis non daemonicorum sacrificiorum nidore plenus, divinae domus limen introiit, et cum foetore ipsorum daemonum Christi altare conscendit?—Ecce quae Afrorum, et maxime nobilissimorum, fides, quae religio, quae christianitas fuit!—At, inquis, non omnes ista faciebant. sed potentissimi quique, ac sublimissimi. Adquiescamus hoc ita esse, caet.

HISTORY OF THEOLOGY.

INTRODUCTION.

The universally received articles of the Christian faith in the beginning of this period were still so simple as to admit of ease to reason for free inquiry. How manifold were the theological views which arose, may be seen particularly from a comparison of the different schools, the speculative Origenist, the traditional, and the historico-exegetical, which now first began. And a still greater contrast of systems might be expected from the inclination of the Greek Christians to speculation and argument,¹ when external tranquillity was afforded them, after the cessation of persecution.

Thus theological controversies were unavoidable, though they would have had none other than a salutary influence on the development of reason, if parties had abided by the old distinction between πίστις and γνώσις with clear consciousness; and if debated questions belonging to theology had not been drawn into the province of religion and the church. But the very simplicity of the older articles of faith frequently invited the disputants to appeal to them in their own favor, and so to accuse their opponents of deviating from the faith. If the accused also wished to lay claim for themselves to that freedom of speculation on the basis of the πίστις, the hierarchy, on the other hand, was a natural enemy to such liberty as would withdraw from its guardianship any department affecting the church, and had, of course, an interest in bringing all theological matters of debate from the province of theology into the province of religious faith, in order to be able to lay claim to the right of decision. This interest now appeared the more reckless in proportion as opposition to the heathen ceased to be a formidable thing, requiring a forbearing patience within the church, and in proportion as the hierarchy was now supported by worldly power.

Thus religious controversies assumed at the present time a very different character. While they were formerly limited to particular provinces, the whole Christian world was now divided by theological disputes into two parties. To put an end to the division by a final ecclesiastical decision the emperors called general councils (σύνοδοι ὀικουμενικαί), elevated their decisions into laws of the realm, and applied worldly power to enforce them universally. In earlier times, the councils summoned against heretics contented themselves merely with warding off the false doctrine by denials; but now the general councils, feeling their ecclesiastical importance, and supported by the imperial power, began to exalt positive decisions regarding disputed points, into ecclesiastical articles of faith.² Thus the development of doctrines proceeded more rapidly, while the field left to free speculation was always narrowed in proportion. On this very account, too, opponents presented a much more obstinate opposition, and the schisms became greater and more stiff-necked. The struggle had the most important influence on the development of the internal relations of the church, and was even of great political moment, from the circumstance of the emperors themselves taking a share in it. Hence, from this time forward, the history of theological disputes forms the central point not only of the whole history of the church, but sometimes also of the political history of the Roman empire.

BEGINNING OF THE ARIAN CONTROVERSY TO THE SYNOD OF NICE (325).

Storia critica della vita di Arrio, scritta da Gaetano Maria Travasa, Cler. Reg. Teatino. Venezia. 1746. 8. Der Arianismus in s. ursprungl. Bedeutung u. Richtung von L. Lange, in Ilgen's Zeitschr. f. d. hist. Theol. iv. ii. 75.

While endeavors were made in vain to reunite the Donatists and Meletians with the church, the progressive development of the doctrine of the Logos gave rise to a new controversy, which soon became more general and violent than any that had preceded it. The common doctrine of the Logos, after the expulsion of the Monarchians, was, that he is the mediator of all Divine agency in the finite, by the will of the Father, and less than he. Regarding his origin, the emanistic idea had been by far the most general. In opposition to it, the school of Origen represented him as an eternal ray of the Divine glory. This bringing forth of the Logos outside of the Divine essence by the will of the Father was still, however, a creation; and that this creating could not be eternal, was already perceived, when Dionysius of Alexandria, in opposition to Sabellius, gave greater prominence to the fact that the Son was created.¹ But the emanists also took offense at this conclusion; for with them the Logos was eternal, though not as a person, yet still in the essence of God from whom he had proceeded. Dionysius at that time prevented a controversy by yielding; but now Arius, a

presbyter in Alexandria, who, in the school of Lucian, by a historico-exegetical training had received the love of intelligible clearness, wished to remove the latent contradiction in Origen's doctrine, by teaching that the Logos is a created, and consequently not an eternal being.² When he fell into a dispute

² Writings of Arius: Epist. ad Eusebium Nicomediensem ap. Epiphani. Haer. 69, § 6, and Theodoret. Hist. Eccl. 1, 4, Epist. Alexandrum ap. According to Athanasius c. Ariam. Or. ii. 24, Arius, Eusebius, and Asterius, in their works, inculcated these sentiments respecting the creation of the world ὡς ἄρα θέλων ὁ θεὸς τὴν γενετὴν κτίσαι φύσιν, ἐπειδὴ ἑώρα μὴ δυναμένην αὐτὴν μετασχεῖν τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς ἰκράτους (χειρὸς), καὶ τῆς παρ' αὐτοῦ δημιουργίας, ποιεῖ καὶ κτίζει πρῶτως μόνον ἓνα καὶ καλεῖ τούτου νιδὸν καὶ λόγον, ἓνα τούτου μέσου γενομένου οὕτως λοιπὸν καὶ τὰ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι ἰσχυρῶς. Arius's own explanations, Epist. ad Euseb.: "Ὅτι ὁ νιδὸς οὐκ ἔστιν ἀγέννητος, οὐδὲ μέρος ἀγεννήτου κατ' οὐδένα τρόπον, οὐδὲ ἐξ ὑποκειμένου τινός· ἀλλ' ὅτι θελήματι καὶ βουλήν ὑπέστη πρὸ χρόνων καὶ πρὸ αἰώνων πλήρης θεός, μονογενής, ἀναλλοίωτος, καὶ πρὶν γεννηθῆ, ἦτοι κτισθῆ, ἢ ὀρισθῆ, ἢ θεμελιωθῆ, οὐκ ἦν· ἀγέννητος γὰρ οὐκ ἦν. διωκόμεθα, ὅτι εἴπαμεν, ἀρχὴν ἔχει ὁ νιδὸς, ὁ δὲ θεὸς ἀναρχὸς ἐστίν. διὰ τοῦτο διωκόμεθα. καὶ ὅτι εἴπαμεν, ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐστίν. οὕτω δὲ εἴπαμεν, καθότι οὐδὲ μέρος θεοῦ, οὐδὲ ἐξ ὑποκειμένου τινός. Epist. ad Alex.: Οἶδαμεν ἓνα θεόν, μόνον ἀγέννητον,—τούτου θεὸν γεννήσαντα νιδὸν μονογενῆ πρὸ χρόνων αἰώνιων, δι' οὗ καὶ τοὺς αἰῶνας, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ πεποίηκε· γεννήσαντα δὲ οὐ δόκησει, ἀλλ' ἀληθεία, ὑποστήσαντα δὲ ἰδίῳ θελήματι, ἄτρεπτον καὶ ἀναλλοίωτον, κτίσμα τοῦ θεοῦ τέλειον, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἐν τῶν κτισμάτων, γέννημα, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἐν τῶν γεννημάτων, οὐδ' ὡς Οὐαλεντίνος προβολὴν τὸ γέννημα τοῦ πατρὸς ἔδογματίσεν, οὐδ' ὡς Ὁ Μανιχαῖος μέρος ὁμοούσιον τοῦ πατρὸς τὸ γέννημα εἰσηγήσατο, οὐδ' ὡς Σαβέλλιος τὴν μονάδα διαιρῶν, νιοπάτορα εἶπεν, οὐδ' ὡς Ἰεράκας λύχνον ἀπὸ λύχνου, ἢ ὡς λαμπάδα εἰς δύο, οὐδὲ τὸν ὄντα πρότερον, ὕστερον γεννηθέντα, ἢ ἐπικτισθέντα εἰς νιδόν.—ἀλλ' ὡς φαιμέν, θελήματι τοῦ θεοῦ πρὸ χρόνων καὶ πρὸ αἰώνων κτισθέντα, καὶ τὸ ζῆν καὶ τὸ εἶναι παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς εἰληφότα, καὶ τὰς δόξας συνυποστήσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ πατρὸς. οὐ γὰρ ὁ πατήρ, δοὺς αὐτῷ πάντων τὴν κληρονομίαν, ἐστέρησεν ἑαυτὸν, ὧν ἀγεννήτως ἔχει ἐν ἑαυτῷ. πηγὴ γὰρ ἐστὶ πάντων." Ὡστε τρεῖς εἰσιν ὑποστάσεις, καὶ ὁ μὲν θεὸς αἰτιος τῶν πάντων τυγχάνων, ἐστὶν ἀναρχος μονώτατος. ὁ δὲ νιδὸς ἀχρόνως γεννηθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πρὸ αἰώνων κτισθεὶς καὶ θεμελιωθεὶς, οὐκ ἦν πρὸ τοῦ γεννηθῆναι· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐστὶν ἀίδιος, ἢ συναίδιος, ἢ συναγέννητος τῷ πατρί.—εἰ δὲ τὸ ἐξ αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὸ ἐκ γαστρὸς, καὶ τὸ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐξήλθον καὶ ἦκα, ὡς μέρος αὐτοῦ ὁμοούσιον, καὶ ὡς προβολὴ ὑπὸ τινων νοεῖται, σύνθετος ἐστὶ ὁ πατήρ καὶ διάρετος, καὶ τρεπτὸς, καὶ σῶμα κατ' αὐτοὺς, καὶ τὸ ὅσον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς τὰ ἰκόλουθα σώματι πάσχων, ὁ ἀσώματος θεός. From the Thaleia (ap. Athanas. contra Arianos, Orat. ii. c. 9): Οὐκ αἰεὶ ὁ θεὸς πατήρ ἦν, ἀλλ' ὕστερον γέγονεν. οὐκ αἰεὶ ἦν ὁ νιδὸς, οὐ γὰρ ἦν, πρὶν γεννηθῆ. οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ὑπέστη καὶ αὐτός. οὐκ ἔστιν ἴδιος τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας, κτίσμα γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ ποίημα. καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθινὸς θεὸς ὁ Χριστός, ἀλλὰ μετοχῆ καὶ αὐτὸς ἐθεοποιήθη· οὐκ οἶδε τὸν πατέρα ἀκριβῶς ὁ νιδὸς, οὔτε ὄρῃ ὁ λόγος τὸν πατέρα τελείως, καὶ οὔτε συνιεῖ, οὔτε γινώσκει ἀκριβῶς ὁ λόγος τὸν πατέρα· οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς καὶ μόνος αὐτός τοῦ πατρὸς λόγος, ἀλλ' ὀνόματι μόνον λέγεται λόγος καὶ σοφία, καὶ χάριτι λέγεται νιδὸς καὶ δύναμις· οὐκ ἔστιν ἄτρεπτος, ὡς ὁ πατήρ, ἀλλὰ τρεπτὸς ἐστὶ φύσει, ὡς τὰ κτίσματα, καὶ λείπει αὐτῷ εἰς κατάληψιν τοῦ γνῶναι τελείως τὸν πατέρα. When the Son is sometimes called τρεπτός, sometimes ἄτρεπτος, that is explained by a preceding fragment (Orat. ii. c. 5): Τῇ μὲν φύσει, ὡσπερ πάντες, οὕτω καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος ἐστὶ τρεπτός, τῷ δὲ ἰδίῳ αὐτεξουσίῳ, ἕως βούλεται, μένει καλός. ὅτε μέντοι θέλει, δύναται τρέπεσθαι καὶ αὐτός, ὡσπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς, τρεπτῆς ὧν φύσεως. Διὰ τοῦτο γάρ, φησι, καὶ προγινώσκων ὁ θεὸς ἕσεσθαι with his bishop Alexander on the point (318), who excluded him and his followers from church-fellowship, many bishops in Syria and Asia Minor declared themselves in favor of Arius; some, especially Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia (Συλλουκκιανιστά, Arius ad Euseb. ap. Theodoret. i. 4, see above, § 65, note 5), because they adopted his views; others, as Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea,³ because they held that the faith of the church was at least not violated by the doctrine of Arius. The most important writer who endeavored to defend the Arian principles was the sophist Asterius of Cappadocia, also a disciple of Lucian († about 330).⁴ Thus the controversy communicated itself to the whole east. After Constantine had in vain endeavored to induce the contending parties to give up the dispute, by rational representations,⁵ he called the first oecumenical council at Nice (325).⁶ As the number of Arian bishops was much smaller than that of their opponents, the party of Alexander prevailed, their cause being pleaded by Athanasius, deacon in Alexandria, and Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra. The Arian doctrine was rejected; but the ancient emanistic notion was confirmed, and was merely developed farther by the decision that the Son is of the same essence with the Father (ὁμοούσιος τῷ πατρὶ).⁷ This expression, which had been till now regarded as Sabellian, was very suspicious in the eyes of the oriental bishops.⁸ The most of them, however, yielded to the imperial authority, and subscribed the new creed.⁹ None but the two Egyptian bishops Theonas and Secundus refused, who were therefore banished with Arius to Illyria. The Nicene decrees were universally proclaimed as imperial law; and when the bishops Eusebius of Nicomedia, and Theognis of Nice, departed from them, they were sent into exile to Gaul (325).

⁶ According to Eusebius de vita Constantini, this council numbered more than 250 bishops. In later times 318 were usually reckoned to it, and it was called the council οἱ τινι. The first persons who have the latter number expressly refer to the 318 servants of Abraham, in whom Barnabas, so early as his day, had found a prediction relating to Christ, c. 9, Hilary de Synodis, c. 86: Et mihi quidem ipse ille numerus hic sanctus est, in quo Abraham victor regum impiorum ab eo, qui aeterni sacerdotii est forma, benedicitur. Liberius ap. Socrat. iv. 2. Ambrosius de Fide, lib. i. prolog. § 5. Doubtless this sacred number was arbitrarily assumed for the purpose of conferring honor on the council of the Nicenes. Gelasius, however, Hist. Conc. Nic. and an anonymous author in the Spicilegium Romanum, t. vi. (Romae. 1841. 8.) p. 608, give the number 300.

Lemgov. 1770. 8, p. 75, ss.): Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἓνα θεὸν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἄορατῶν ποιητὴν. Καὶ εἰς ἓνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, γεννηθέντα ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς μονογενῆ, τουτέστιν, ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς, θεὸν ἐκ θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα, οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ. δὲ' οὐ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῇ. τὸν δὲ' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα καὶ σαρκωθέντα, καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, παθόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, ἀνεληθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ ἐρχόμενον κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς. Καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα. Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας, ὅτι ἦν ποτε ὅτε οὐκ ἦν, καὶ πρὶν γεννηθῆναι οὐκ ἦν, καὶ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένετο, ἢ ἐξ ἑτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας φάσκοντας εἶναι, ἢ κτιστὸν, τρεπτὸν, ἢ ἀλλοιωτὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀναθεματίζει ἡ καθολικὴ ἐκκλησία. Concerning the composition of this creed: Athanasius Epist. de decretis synodi Nicaenae, and Eusebii Caesar. Epist. ad Caesarienses, most complete as appended to Athanasii Epist. cit. and in Theodoretii H. E. i. 11. The εἰς θεός is here the Father alone, consequently the sameness of essence between Him and the Son is not a numerical unity of essence. See Münscher über den Sinn der Nic. Glaubensformel, in Henke's neuem Magazin, vi. 334. Even here the sentiment, that the Son exists by the will of the Father, and is less than he, is not spoken against.

⁸ See Divis. I. § 60, note 13.

⁹ How actively Constantine employed his influence in accomplishing it may be seen in Eusebii vita Const. iii. 13. Since his view had previously been different (see note 5), and his great object was simply the restoration of peace, Gfrörer's (K. G. ii. i. 210) conjecture is not improbable that he had been gained over by Hosius, and the latter during his abode at Alexandria; consequently the epithet ὁμοούσιος was of Alexandrian origin, where it had been already set forth in opposition to Dionysius (Div. I. § 64, note 8), and had been again rejected expressly by Arius. (See above, note 2.)

OPPOSITION OF THE EUSEBIANS TO THE NICENE COUNCIL TILL THE SECOND SYNOD AT SIRMIIUM (357).

H. J. Wetzer, Restitutio verae chronologiae rerum ex controversiis Arianis inde ab anno 325 usque ad annum 350 exortarum. Francof. ad M. 1827. 8.

The opponents of Arianism declared it to be polytheism. On the contrary, the Arians charged the ὁμοούσιος with Sabellianism,¹ and succeeded in spreading this view in the east so generally that Constantine thought he could effect a general union on the disputed dogma only by giving up the expression. Accordingly, the banished were recalled, not only Eusebius and Theognis, but Arius too (328-29) his orthodoxy being acknowledged by the emperor, as expressed in general terms, in a confession of faith which he gave in. Eusebius of Nicomedia obtained a decided influence over Constantine. Several bishops who obstinately adhered to the Nicene decrees, and refused to hold church communion with the recalled, were banished, particularly Eustathius, bishop of Antioch (330).² Athanasius himself, now bishop of Alexandria, was deposed by a council held at Tyre (335), and banished into Gaul by Constantine; and Arius, immediately after, was solemnly received again into church communion at Jerusalem. He died not long after at Constantinople (336).³ Thus the east was separated from the western church; the latter adopting the ὁμοούσιος, and espousing the cause of Athanasius, which the former rejected. This division continued after the death of Constantine († 337), when Con-

So far as the Nicenes also explained ὁμοούσιος by ταυτούσιος, as Theodoret. Dial. v. in fine (cf. conc. Ancyf. below, § 83, note 5), they strengthened the suspicion of Sabellianism.

stans had become sovereign of the west, and Constantius of the east, and that all the more readily, inasmuch as Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia, gained the same influence over Constantius as he had formerly over Constantine, and was appointed bishop of Constantinople (338). The prevailing doctrine of the east respecting the Son was the old emanistic doctrine,⁴ as had been set forth at the council of Antioch (341), according to which both the Arian formulae and the Nicene ὁμοούσιος were looked upon as objectionable extremes.⁵ The Arians, of whom there were certainly many, must have concealed their peculiar sentiments behind emanistic formulæ.⁶ Thus the Orientals were unjustly styled Arians by the Nicenes. More appropriate was the title Eusebians,⁷ from their head Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia. In order to remove the schism between the east and west, Constantius and Constans united in summoning a new general council at Sardica (347).⁸ But here the matter went so far as to issue in an entire separation. The westerns remained alone in Sardica; the orientals assembled in the neighboring town Philippopolis. Both parties confirmed their former acts; and in the east Eusebianism continued as prevalent under Constantius as the Nicene faith in the west under Constans.

The prejudice of the Eusebians, that Homousianism led to Sabellianism,⁹ was not a little favored by the case of Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra, one of the principal defenders of the Nicene council. By representing the Logos as the eternal wisdom of God, and contending that the incarnate Logos alone could be called Son of God, this bishop manifestly came near Sabellianism; and when deposed from his office (336), was nevertheless declared orthodox by the westerns, and taken under their protection.¹⁰ A pupil of Marcellus, Photinus, bishop of Sirmium, γὰρ οἱ ἄνθρωποι τῆς ὁρθῆς πίστεως· καὶ οἱ μὲν υλοπατορίαν καταγγέλλουσιν, οἱ δὲ τὸν Χριστὸν ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων εἰς τὸ εἶναι παρενεχθέντα λέγειν τολμῶσι. Καὶ πρότερον μὲν ἦσαν φανεροὶ οἱ αἰρετικοὶ, νῦν δὲ πεπλήρωται ἡ ἐκκλησία κεκρυμμένων αἰρετικῶν. Compare Touttée on this passage, and his Diss. i. cap. 4, § 17, ss., prefixed to his edition of Cyril.

⁶ Respecting the θεὸν ἐκ θεοῦ in the Antiochian formulæ they said (Socrat. ii. 45): Οὕτως εἶρηται τὸ ἐκ θεοῦ, ὡς εἶρηται παρὰ τῷ Ἀποστόλῳ· τὰ δὲ πάντα ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ (1 Cor. xi. 12). Only the Nicene ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ θεοῦ was not susceptible of an Arian import.

⁷ So Athanasius frequently οἱ περὶ Εὐσέβιον.

⁸ That it was held in 347, not 344, is proved by Wetzer Restit. veræ chron. p. 47, against Mansi Coll. conc. iii. 87.

taught Sabellianism in a fully developed form.¹¹ His doctrine was rejected not only by the Eusebians at the second council of Antioch (345),¹² but also by the westerns at a council at Milan (347); and at the first council of Sirmium (351),¹³ he was deposed by the Eusebians. The party of the Photinians continued, however, till the reign of Theodosius the younger.

In the mean time, Constans had died (350). Constantius became master of the whole Roman empire, after his victory over Magnentius (353), and now endeavored to introduce Eusebianism by force into the west also. At the synods of Arles (353) and Milan (355), the bishops were forced to subscribe the condemnation of Athanasius; all who refused being deposed and banished. Among these were Lucifer, bishop of Calaris; Hilary, bishop of Poictiers; and Liberius, bishop of Rome.¹⁴

DISSENSIONS AMONG THE EUSEBIANS TILL THE SUPPRESSION OF ARIANISM (381).

After the Eusebians had become the predominant party, and those who were internally separated were no longer held together by the necessity of contending together against the Homousiasts, the variety of their opinions, which had been hitherto concealed, began to appear. A strict Arian party came forth among them, which was named sometimes after its leaders, Actius of Antioch (ἄθεος),¹ Eunomius of Cappadocia,² and Acacius, bishop of Caesarea; sometimes from its principles (Ἀνόμοιοι, Ἐξουκόντιοι).³ In opposition to it, the majority, under the leadership of Basil, bishop of Ancyra, and Georgius, bishop of Laodicea, held fast by the old emanistic doctrine, adopted the farther development of it which had formerly appeared among the Eusebians, viz., that the Son is of similar essence with the Father (ὁμοιούσιος τῷ πατρὶ), and were hence called Ὁμοιουσιᾶσται, Ἡμάρειοι, Semiarians. The emperor Constantius was attached to the Semiarians; but a powerful party about his court exerted themselves with no less cunning than perseverance in favor of the Anomoeans. And because they could not publicly vindicate their formula, they persuaded the emperor that in order to restore peace, the formulas of the two other parties also must be prohibited; which measure they brought about at the second synod of Sirmium (357).⁴ On the other hand, Basil, bishop of Ancyra, called together a synod at Ancyra (358), which established the Semiarian creed in a copious decree, and rejected the Arian.⁵ Constantius allowed himself to be easily convinced that that Sirmian formula favored the Anomoeans; and therefore the confession of faith adopted at the second must now be rejected at a third synod of Sirmium (358), and the anathemas of the synod of Ancyra be subscribed.⁶ The Anomoeans, for Fuchs, ii. 196): Unum constat Deum esse omnipotentem et patrem, sicut per universum orbem creditur, et unicum filium ejus Jesum Christum, dominum salvatorem nostrum, ex ipso ante saecula genitum. Quod vero quosdam aut multos movebat de substantia, quae graece usia appellatur, id est, ut expressius intelligatur, homousion aut quod dicitur homoousion, nullam omnino fieri oportere mentionem, nec quemquam praedicare: ea de causa et ratione, quod nec in divinis scripturis contineatur, et quod super hominis scientiam sit, nec quisquam possit nativitatem filii enarrare, de quo scriptum est: generationem ejus quis enarrabit? Scire autem manifestum est solum patrem, quomodo genuerit filium suum, et filium, quomodo genitus sit a patre. Nulla ambiguitas est, majorem esse patrem. Nulli potest dubium esse, patrem honore, dignitate, claritate, majestate et ipso nomine patris majorem esse filio, ipso testante: qui me misit, majore me est. Et hoc catholicum esse, nemo ignorat, duas personas esse patris et filii, majorem patrem: filium subjectum cum omnibus his, quae ipsi pater subjecit. Patrem initium non habere, invisibilem esse, immortalem esse, impassibilem esse. Filium autem natum esse ex patre, deum ex deo, lumen ex lumine. Cujus filii generationem, ut ante dictum est, neminem scire, nisi patrem suum, caet.

the purpose of uniting in appearance with the Semiarians, and yet establishing their own doctrine, now adopted the formula, τὸν υἱὸν ὁμοιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ πάντα, ὡς αἱ ἄγλαι γραφαὶ λέγουσὶ τε καὶ διδάσκουσι,⁷ and succeeded in convincing the emperor that all parties might be most easily united in it. For this purpose all bishops were now prepared, and then the westerns were summoned to a council at Ariminum, the easterns to another at Seleucia, simultaneously (359). After many efforts, the emperor at last succeeded in getting most of the bishops to adopt that formula. But along with this external union, not only did the internal doctrinal schism continue, but there were besides differences among such as had been like-minded, according as they had gone in with that union or not. Thus Constantius at his death left all in the greatest confusion.⁸

The interference of emperors, so foreign to the object in discussion, now ceased, at least for some time. Julian (361-363) was of course equally indifferent to all Christian sects, and restored all banished bishops to their sees.⁹ Jovian also († 364) and his successors in the west, Valentinian I. († 375), then Gratian and Valentinian II. maintained general toleration. On the contrary, Valens, emperor of the east (364-378), was a zealous Arian, and persecuted the Homousiasts and Semiarians.

Since the last years of Constantius, various causes had been always tending to increase in the east the number of adherents to the Nicene council. When, in its greatest strictness, Arianism wished to regain the ascendancy, the majority of the ori-

⁹ Ammian. Marc. xxii. 5: Utque dispositorum roboraret effectum, dissidentes Christianorum Antistites cum plebe discissa in palatium intronissos monebat civilius, ut discordiis consopitis quisque nullo vetante religioni suae serviret intrepidus. Quod agebat ideo obstinate, ut dissensiones augente licentia, non timeret unanimitatem postea plebem; nullas infestas hominibus bestias, ut sunt sibi ferales plerique Christianorum, expertus. entals, who held fast by the emanation of the Son from the Father, must have felt a most decided aversion to it; while the Nicene decrees were naturally allied to those older notions, as fuller developments of them. Besides, the unity of the Nicenes, as contrasted with the constant wavering of the Eusebians, could do nothing less than make a most favorable impression. To this was added, finally, the influence of monachism, which, having now arisen in Egypt, and speedily excited universal admiration, was closely connected with Athanasius; and in all countries where it was diffused, was busy in favor of the Nicene council.¹⁰

First of all, Meletius declared himself in favor of the Nicene confession, immediately after he had been nominated bishop of Antioch, A.D. 361.¹¹ But the old Nicene community which had still existed in Antioch from the time of Eustathius (§ 82, note 2), and was now headed by a presbyter Paulinus, refused to acknowledge the former Eusebian as bishop; and this Meletian schism¹² soon found a ground for itself also in the doctrinal distinction that the Meletians believed they must abide by three Hypostases in the Trinity, while the old Nicenes would only acknowledge in it three Prosopa.¹³ The council of Alexandria,

¹² Respecting this schism, see Walch's Ketzlerhistorie, Th. 4, S. 410, ff.

¹³ The Nicene Synod considered οὐσία and ὑπόστασις as synonymous when it anathematized the formula ἐξ ἑτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας εἶναι. The old Nicenes, the Egyptians, and Westerns, held fast by this. So Athanasius Ep. ad Afros, c. 4: Ἡ ὑπόστασις οὐσία ἐστὶ, καὶ οὐδὲν ἄλλο σημαίνονεν ἔχει, ἢ αὐτὸ τὸ ὄν· ἢ γὰρ ὑπόστασις καὶ ἡ οὐσία ὑπαρξίς ἐστιν. ἐστὶ γὰρ καὶ ὑπάρχει. Gregory of Nazianzum (Orat. xxi.) derives this interchange of the terms from the poverty of the Latin language, which certainly translated both by substantia. We might venture to suppose here that the Nicene creed originated especially under the influence of a Latin, Hosius (see § 81, note 9). Hence the expression τρεις ὑποστάσεις, as well as τρεις οὐσῆαι, in Rome and Alexandria was regarded as Arian, and Meletius and Eusebius, bishops of Samosata, were here accustomed τοῖς Ἀρειομανίταις συγκατηριθμῆσθαι (Basil. Ep. 266). Basil may be considered the representative of the opposite view. Ep. 236: Οὐσία καὶ ὑπόστασις ταύτην ἔχει τὴν διαφορὰν, ἣν ἔχει τὸ assembled by Athanasius (362), sought, indeed, not only to smooth the way generally for the Arians to join their party by mild measures, but endeavored particularly to settle this dispute; ¹⁴ but Lucifer, bishop of Calaris, gave firm footing to the Meletian schism about the same time, by consecrating Paulinus as bishop of the Eustathians. Although Lucifer, from dissatisfaction with the mildness of the Alexandrian synod, separated with his followers from the church, ¹⁵ he had nevertheless put a great obstacle in the way of uniting the old and new Nicenes by the step taken in consecrating Paulinus. The westerns and Egyptians acknowledged Paulinus; the oriental Nicenes, Meletius, as the orthodox bishop of Antioch. If the emperor Valens (364—

Comp. especially Basili Ep. 38: also Ep. 125, 210, 214. (Klose's Basil. d. Gr. S. 28.) Consequently he is delighted with his explanation τὸ τρεῖς ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι τὰς ὑποστάσεις ὁμολογεῖν, Epist. 258 ad Eriphanium. In Epist. 263 ad Occidentales, he accuses Paulinus of a leaning πρὸς τὸ Μαρκέλλου δόγμα, οὔτε νῦν ἐν ἰδίᾳ ὑποστάσει ὁμολογοῦν, ἀλλὰ προερχθέντα, καὶ πάλιν ὑποστρέψαντα εἰς τὸν θεὸν προῆλθεν. The Orientals generally had entertained the same suspicion against the Latins. See Basili Ep. 69, ad Athanasium, A. D. 371: 'Ἐπιζητεῖται δὲ κἀκεῖνο παρὰ τινῶν τῶν ἐντεῦθεν ἀναγκαίως, ὡς καὶ αὐτοῖς ἡμῖν καταφαίνεται, τὸ τὴν Μαρκέλλου αἵρεσιν αὐτοὺς (Occidentales)—ἐξορίσαι. ἐπεὶ μέχρι τοῦ νῦν ἐν πάσιν οἷς ἐπιστέλλουσι γράμμασι τὸν μὲν δυσώνυμον Ἄρειον ἄνω καὶ κάτω ἀναθεματίζοντες—οὐ διαλείπουσι. Μαρκέλλῳ δὲ, τῷ κατὰ διάμετρον ἐκείνῳ τὴν ἠσεβείαν ἐπιδειξαμένῳ, καὶ εἰς αὐτὴν τὴν ὑπαρξιν τῆς τοῦ μονογενοῦς θεότητος ἠσεβήσαντι—οὐδεμίαν μέμφιν ἐπενεγκόντες φαίνονται. A milder judgment is given by Gregor. Naz. Or. xxi.: Τῆς μίας οὐσίας καὶ τῶν τριῶν ὑποστάσεων λεγομένων μὲν ὑφ' ἡμῶν εὐσεβῶς νοουμένων δὲ καὶ παρὰ τοῖς Ἱταλοῖς ὁμοίως, ἀλλ' οὐ δυναμένης διὰ στενότητα τῆς παρ' αὐτοῖς γλώττης καὶ ὀνομάτων πενίαν διελεῖν ἀπὸ τῆς οὐσίας τὴν ὑπόστασιν, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἀντεισαγοῦσης τὰ πρόσωπα, ἵνα μὴ τρεῖς οὐσαὶ παραδεχθῶσι· τί γίνεται ὡς λίαν γελοῖον ἢ ἔλεεινόν; πίστεως ἔδοξε διαφορὰ ἢ περὶ τὸν ἦχον μικρολογία.

¹⁴ Epistola synodica Conc. Alex. (ap. Mansi, iii. p. 345, ss.): Πάντας τοίνυν τοὺς βουλομένους εἰρηνεῦν πρὸς ἡμᾶς, μάλιστα τοὺς ἐν τῇ παλαιᾷ συναγομένους (the Meletians) καὶ τοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀρειανῶν, προσκαλέσασθε παρ' ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ὡς μὲν πατέρες νῦν προσλάβεσθε, ὡς δὲ διδασκαλοὶ καὶ κηδεμόνες ἀποδείξασθε, καὶ συνάψαντες ἑαυτοὺς τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν τοῖς πατρὶσι Πανλίνῳ, μηδὲν πλείον ἀπαιτήσητε παρ' αὐτῶν, ἢ ἀναθεματίζειν μὲν τὴν Ἀρειανὴν αἵρεσιν, ὁμολογεῖν δὲ τὴν παρ' αὐτῶν ἁγίῳ πατέρων ὁμολογηθεῖσαν ἐν Νικαίᾳ πίστιν. Then an explanation of the dispute respecting the hypostases. The one party teaches that there are three hypostases διὰ τὸ εἶς ἁγίαν τριάδα πιστεύειν οὐκ ὀνόματι τριάδα μόνον, ἀλλ' ἄληθῶς οὖσαν καὶ ὑφεστῶσαν, πάτερα τε ἄληθῶς ὄντα καὶ ὑφεστῶτα, καὶ νῦν ἀληθῶς ἐνοῦσιον ὄντα καὶ ὑφεστῶτα, καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον ὑφεστὸς καὶ ὑπάρχον. The others, on the contrary, taught that there was one hypostasis, ἡγούμενοι ταῦτὸν εἶναι εἰπεῖν ὑπόστασιν καὶ οὐσίαν. Those who were present of both parties might have mutually acknowledged one another as orthodox and agreed, βελτίονα καὶ ἀκριβεστέραν εἶναι τὴν ἐν Νικαίᾳ παρὰ τῶν πατέρων ὁμολογηθεῖσαν πίστιν, καὶ τοῦ λοιποῦ τοῖς ταύτης ἀρκεῖσθαι μᾶλλον καὶ χρῆσθαι ῥήμασιν.

378), had now favored the Semiarians instead of the Arians, he might, perhaps, have considerably checked the further spread of the Nicene party; but since he tried to make Arianism alone predominant by horribly persecuting all who thought differently,¹⁶ he drove by this means the Semiarians who did not sink under persecution, to unite still more closely with the Nicenes. Thus a great part of the Semiarians (or, as they were now also called, Macedonians, from Macedonius, bishop of Constantinople, who had been deposed at the instigation of the Arians, 360),¹⁷ declared themselves, at several councils of Asia Minor, in favor of the Nicene confession, and sent an embassy to Rome to announce their assent to it (366).¹⁸ However much the Arians, supported by the emperor Valens, endeavored to counteract this new turn of affairs, yet the Macedonians were always passing over more and more to the Nicene creed; and for this the three great teachers of the church in particular, Basil the Great, Gregory of Nazianzum, and Gregory of Nyssa, began now to work. These new oriental Nicenians did not believe their faith changed by their assent to the Nicene formula, but thought they had merely assumed a more definite expression for it in the rightly understood ὁμοούσιος.¹⁹ They

abided by the three hypostases of their Semiarianism, and attached themselves to the Meletians; but on this very account they could not keep church communion with the old Nicenes, notwithstanding all the efforts made by Basil to effect that object.²⁰ Since they supposed that they had unchangeably remained steadfast to their faith, they also continued to consider their Eusebian and Semiarian forefathers as orthodox, although condemned by the old Nicenes.²¹ Thus the canons of the oriental councils held during the schism, constantly remained in force, particularly those of the council of Antioch, A.D. 341,²²

During this time new schisms had been made by new disputes on points of doctrine. The doctrine of the Holy Spirit, amid the controversies respecting the Logos, had for a long time remained untouched, and very different views respecting it were in consequence entertained.²⁴ But when in the east not only the Semiarians, but also many of the new Nicenians could not get rid of the Arian idea that the Holy Spirit is a creature and servant of God,²⁵ the other Nicenes took great offense at this, and opposed these errorists as Πνευματομάχους.²⁶ But they were not yet all prepared to style the Holy Spirit God.²⁷ Finally, the number of sects was increased by a zealous adherent of the Nicene council, Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea, who, misled, perhaps, by his aversion to Origen,²⁸ believed that he was necessarily obliged to concede to the Arians the position,²⁹ that the Logos in Christ supplied the place of the rational soul νοῦς or ψυχὴ λογικὴ,³⁰ and from about 371 gathered round him the adεἰς τὸν Ἑλλησποντον πλεονάζουσι). Hence the appellations Semiariani, Pneumatomachi and Macedoniani (can. 1 and 7) were used as synonymous by this council. Inasmuch as the peculiarity of this party regarding the doctrine of the Son was unimportant, nothing but their views of the Holy Spirit remained to make them heretical. Hence, by an easy transition, Macedonius came to be considered the author of this heresy, as is the case so early as Sozom. iv. 27: 'Ἐπειδὴ Μακεδόνιος ἀφῆρέθη τὴν Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἐκκλησίαν, εἰσηγείτο τὸν υἱὸν θεὸν εἶναι, κατὰ πάντα τε καὶ κατ' οὐσίαν ὅμοιον τῷ πατρί· τὸ δὲ ἄγιον πνεῦμα ὅμοιον τῶν αὐτῶν πρεσβείων ἀπεφαίνετο, διάκονον καὶ ὑπῆρέτην καλῶν, καὶ ὅσα περὶ τῶν θείων ἀγγέλων λέγων τις οὐκ ἂν ἡμάρτοι. Hence, from this time onward the usual name for those who were heretical in their views of the Holy Ghost was Macedoniani, instead of Pneumatomachi; although it is unquestionable that Macedonius, though he entertained those sentiments, like all the Semiarians, was not the author of them.

Thus Theodosius, who as a Spaniard was a zealous adherent of the Nicene council, found at his accession to the throne, in the latter, the polemic declaration: 'Ὁμολόγουν γὰρ καὶ τοῦτο, ὅτι οὐ σῶμα ἄψυχον, οὐδ' ἀναισθητον, οὐδ' ἀνόητον εἶχεν ὁ σωτήρ. This opinion is also contradicted by Athanasius, especially in Epist. ad Epictetum (371), contra Apollinarium libb. ii. (372), yet without naming Apollinaris (see Möhler's Athanasius, Th. 2. S. 263, ff.), although Epiphanius Haer. 77, considers those works as refutations of it. Basil the Great heard of the heresy of Apollinaris in 373 (Ep. 129 ad Meletium), and wrote about it 374 (Ep. 264 ad Occidentales, and Ep. 265 ad Aegyptios). Fragments of the writings of Apollinaris belonging to the present subject (περὶ ἐνσαρκώσεως, περὶ πίστεως) are preserved chiefly in Gregory of Nyssa and Theodoret. Fragments of several epistles of Apollinaris are found in Leontius Byzant. (about 590) adv. fraudes Apollinaristarum libb. 2. (ex. lat. vers. Turriani in Canisii Lectt. ant. ed. Basnage, i. 608, ss. Gallandii Bibl. PP. xii. 706). Scattered fragments of every kind are in Majii Scriptt. vett. nova coll. tom. vii. P. i. Answers to Apollinaris were written by Diodorus Tarsensis, Theodotus Antiochenus, and the two bishops of Alexandria, Theophilus and Cyril. Still extant are Gregorii Naz. Ep. ad Nectarium, or Orat. 46, and Ep. ii. ad Cleodonium, or Orat. 51 and 52 (Ullmann's Greg. von Naz. S. 401, ff.): and the far more important Gregorii Nysseni ἀντιρρήτικὸς πρὸς τὰ Ἀπολλινάριον (prim. ed. Zacagnius Monim. veter. eccl. Gr. and in Gallandii Bibl. PP. vi. 517). Nemesius de Natura hominis, c. 1. *Τινὲς μὲν, ὧν ἔστι καὶ Πλωτῖνος, ἄλλην εἶναι τὴν ψυχὴν, καὶ ἄλλον τὸν νοῦν δογματίσαντες, ἐκ τριῶν τὸν ἄνθρωπον συνεστάναι βούλονται, σώματος, καὶ ψυχῆς, καὶ νοῦ. Οἷς ἠκολούθησε καὶ Ἀπολλινάριος, ὁ τῆς Λαοδικείας γενόμενος ἐπίσκοπος· τοῦτον γὰρ πηξάμενος τὸν θεμέλιον τῆς ἰδίας δόξης, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ προσωκοδόμησε κατὰ τὸ οἰκεῖον δόγμα. Apollinaris ap. Greg. Nyss. c. 35: 'Ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ἔστιν ἐκ πνεύματος καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος.—C. 9: Τὸ δὴ πνεῦμα, τουτέστι τὸν νοῦν, θεὸν ἔχων ὁ Χριστὸς μετὰ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, εἰκότως ἄνθρωπος ἐξ οὐρανοῦ λέγεται (1 Cor. xv. 47, ss.)—C. 7: Θεὸς μὲν (ἔστι) τῷ πνεύματι τῷ σαρκωθέντι, ἄνθρωπος δὲ τῇ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ προσληφθείσῃ σαρκί.—C. 23: Οὐκ ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ' ὡς ἄνθρωπος (Phil. ii. 7), διότι οὐχ ὁμοούσιος τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ κατὰ τὸ κυριώτατον.—C. 39: Εἰ ἀνθρώπῳ τελείῳ συνήφθη θεὸς τέλειος, οὐδ' ἂν ἦσαν.—C. 42: Εἰς μὲν φύσει υἱὸς θεοῦ, εἰς δὲ θετός.—C. 48: Εἰ ἐκ πάντων τῶν ἰσῶν ἡμῖν ἔστι τοῖς χοϊκοῖς ὁ ἐπουράνιος ἄνθρωπος (ὥστε καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα ἰσῶν ἔχειν τοῖς χοϊκοῖς), οὐκ ἐπουράνιος, ἀλλ' ἐπουρανίου θεοῦ δοχεῖον.—C. 44: Ἡ σὰρξ τοῦ Κυρίου προσκυνεῖται, καθὼ ἐν ἔστι, πρόσωπον καὶ ἐν ζῶον μετ' αὐτοῦ. Μηδὲν ποῖημα προσκυνητῶν μετὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, ὡς ἡ σὰρξ αὐτοῦ. From this resulted the principle of one nature in Christ, Apoll. fragm. ap. Majum, vii. i. 16: Μιᾷ δὲ συγκράτῳ τῇ φύσει ἄνθρωπον τὸν κύριον λέγομεν, μιᾷ δὲ συγκράτῳ τῇ φύσει σαρκικῇ τε καὶ θεικῇ. In another fragment Apollinaris designates the entire spiritual principle in man as ψυχή, and makes the place of it in Christ be supplied by the Logos. Ap. Majum, vii. i. 203: 'Ὁ Ἰωάννης—εἰπὼν, ὅτι ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, οὐ προσέθηκε, καὶ ψυχή· ἄδύνατον γὰρ δύο νοερά καὶ θελητικὰ ἐν τῷ ἴμα κατοικεῖν, ἵνα μὴ τὸ ἔτερον κατὰ τοῦ ἔτερον ἀντιστρατευηται διὰ τῆς οἰκείας θελησεως καὶ ἐνεργείας. Οὐκοῦν οὐ ψυχῆς ἀνθρωπίνης ἐπιλαμβάνετο ὁ λόγος, ἀλλὰ μόνου σπέρματος Ἀβραάμ· τὸ γὰρ τοῦ σώματος Ἰησοῦ ναὸν προδιέγραψεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος καὶ ἄνους καὶ ἀθελῆς τοῦ Σολομῶντος ναός. Some of his disciples, especially Polemius (Polemiani) taught ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν κατεληλυθέναι τοῦ Κυρίου τὸ σῶμα, ὁμοούσιον τὸ σῶμα τ. Χρ. τῇ θεότητι. Epiph. Haer. 77, § 2, 20. Theodoret. the west (379) universal toleration; in the east Arianism prevalent, the Homousiasts persecuted, and besides them the parties of the Photinians, Macedonians, and Apollinarists, with innumerable older sects. After conquering the Goths, he began forthwith to declare Homousianism to be the catholic faith, and to persecute other parties.³² The more effectually to remove existing evils, he summoned a general council at Constantino-ple (381),³³ by which the schism between the Nicenes was peaceably removed,³⁴ and the Nicene creed enlarged with additions directed against heretics who had risen up since its origin.³⁵

When he died during the council, Flavianus was appointed to succeed him, without reference to Paulinus (Ullmann, S. 245). The schism did not entirely disappear till A.D. 413 (Theodoret. v. 35).

Valentinian II. allowed the Arians in the west to enjoy freedom of religion some years longer;³⁶ but the case was quite altered by Theodosius,³⁷ and a universal suppression of the sect ensued. The last traces of its existence in the Byzantine empire appear under the emperor Anastasius at Constantinople, 491–518.³⁸

The subject of the controversy was merely the point of sameness in essence between the three persons. The unity and equality of the persons, which necessarily resulted from holding sameness of essence, was not fully acknowledged at once even by the Nicenians,³⁹ but continued to be more clearly perceived,⁴⁰ until at last it was expressed by Augustine for the first time with decided logical consequence.⁴¹

HISTORY OF THE THEOLOGICAL SCIENCES DURING THE ARIAN DISPUTES.

Among the theological schools of this period the most distinguished were that of Origen, and the Syrian historico-exegetical, whose origin belongs to the preceding period. Origen enjoyed the highest esteem, and it is to be attributed to the wide-extended influence of his writings that notwithstanding these furious theological disputes, some freedom in theology was still preserved. In the great question of the time, both parties could appeal to him.¹ When the Arians referred to the declaration in his own writings, and in those of his disciples Dionysius and Theognostus, that the son is a creature, Athanasius, on the contrary, drew from the same source arguments for the eternal generation of the Logos.² Men were the less perplexed by contrary passages in his writings, inasmuch as they knew and already practiced many expedients for the purpose of making such expressions of the fathers as were contradictory to the more modern views, powerless and void.³ Thus Origen had adherents among both parties. Among the Eusebians, he had in particular Eusebius Pamphili, bishop of Caesarea, in Palestine († 340), a man distinguished alike for his love of peace and his merits as a church historian.⁴ Among the Nicenians, were quid est quod dicunt, jubente Patre creasse omnia Filium, tanquam Pater non creaverit, sed a Filio creari jusserit? Formant sibi in phantasmate cordis sui quasi duos aliquos, etsi juxta invicem, in suis tamen locis constitutos, unum jubentem, alterum obtemperantem. Nec intelligunt, ipsam jussionem Patris, ut fierent omnia, non esse nisi Verbum Patris, per quod facta sunt omnia. Against the old opinion that the Father is absolutely invisible, and that the Logos alone can appear, see de Trin. ii. 15, ss. Cf. § 35: Ipsa natura, vel substantia, vel essentia, vel quolibet alio nomine appellandum est id ipsum quod Deus est, quicquid illud est, corporaliter videri non potest: per subjectam vero creaturam non solum Filium vel Spiritum Sanctum, sed etiam Patrem corporali specie sive similitudine mortalibus sensibus significationem sui dare potuisse credendum est.

an Arian by Athanasius, Epiphanius, Hilary, Jerome, etc., defended by Socrat. ii. 21, and Gelasius Histor. Synod. Nic. i. 1. The first are followed by most historians, as Baronius, Petavius (Dogmat. theolog. de trin. lib. ii. c. 11), Arnold, Jac. Basnage, etc. On the contrary, he is declared to be orthodox by Valesius, Bull, du Pin, Sam. Basnage. There was a controversy on the subject between Jo. Le Clerc, who accuses him of Arianism (Bibliothèque univers. tom. x. p. 380. Epistolæ criticae s. Artis criticae, vol. iii. p. 28, ss.), and W. Thilo (über die Schriften des Eusebius v. Alexandrien u. d. Eusebius v. Emesa. Halle. 1832. 8) shows that the three discourses published by Augusti (*Euseb. Romae. 1843. 8). Among the extant writings of Eusebius of Emesa (on them see Thilo, p. 56), the most important would be the two books de fide adv. Sabellium in the Opuscula, xiv. Eusebii Pamph. ed. J. Sirmond, Paris. 1643 (also in Bibl. PP. Lugd. iv. 1), if it could be proved that they really belong to him. Thilo makes it probable, p. 64.

²⁵ The Origenists endeavored, after the example of Origen to prove the insufficiency of the grammatical interpretation, and the necessity of the allegorical. now to be found between the two schools.²⁷ Those orthodox Origenists did not adopt all the peculiar doctrinal sentiments of their master; nor were these doctrines all reckoned damnable. A pretty wide field for free investigation was still left to reason,²⁸ and the passion with which the question of the relation of the Son to the Father was discussed, made this doctrine so much the test of orthodoxy, almost indeed exclusively so, that they never thought during the Arian controversy of limiting freedom of inquiry on other subjects. *Gregory of Nyssa*²⁹ and *Didymus*³⁰ were known as Origenists. Many others held to single points of Origen's creed³¹ without being attacked on that account. *Chalcedius*³² and Synesius came to adopt still more remarkable opinions by joining new-Platonism with Christianity; yet the latter was consecrated bishop of Ptolemais by Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria, although he gave public expression to his convictions (410).³³ The belief in the inalienable capability of

On the other hand, millenarianism, although it had been abandoned by most theologians, had still many friends among the people, without their being considered as heretics on account of it.³⁷

Cf. Idem. lib. iv. in Jeremiam (on Cap. 19): qua (millenarian opinionis) licet non sequamur, damnare tamen non possumus, quia multi ecclesiasticorum virorum et martyrum ista dixerunt. Unusquisque in suo sensu abundet, et Domini cuncta reserventur judicio.

A thorough opposition between the two schools was established by the circumstance that the Syrian school acknowledged Holy Scripture alone as the source of doctrine,³⁸ while the disciples of Origen advocated their Gnostic tradition as a second source.³⁹ But they did not attain to a scientific examination of these two positions, since all scientific free movement in the province of theology was soon checked from another quarter. In the same degree as monachism prevailed, there spread also a prejudice against having any thing to do with worldly science and heathen writers.⁴⁰ By this means there was formed and strengthened a crowd of traditional theologians, who, inimical to all free inquiry, would endure no opinion which could not be pointed out in the fathers. Epiphanius, bishop of Constantia in Cyprus, from the year 367 († 403),⁴¹ may be regarded as the representative of this tendency. Even in his Panarion (Haer. 63 and 64), he made himself known as a bitter enemy of Origen; and when the Arian controversy was at an end, he began an open war against Origenism. While this contest put a stop to all free inquiry in the east, the western world was contemporaneously bound in spiritual fetters by Augustine; and free science every where banished from the church as a thing which causes mischief.

Μηδὲ ἐμοὶ τῷ ταῦτά σοι λεγοντι ἀπλῶς πιστεύσης, ἔὰν τὴν ὑπόδειξιν τῶν καταγγελλομένων ἀπὸ τῶν θείων μὴ λάβῃς γραφῶν. So in many places of his catecheses. See Toutté Diss. ii. prefixed to his edition of Cyril, p. 129, s. In like manner, it is said in the work de fide (see above, note 18) lib. i. (Sirmondi Opp. i. 11), which probably belongs to Eusebius Emesenus: Confitere ea, quae de Patre et Filio scripta sunt, et noli curiosius ea, quae non sunt scripta, requirere.—Ūtinam solis scripturis contenti essemus! et his nulla fiebat. II. PERIOD OF THE ORIGENISTIC AND PELAGIAN CONTROVERSIES.

Walch's Hist. d. Ketzereien. Th. 7. S. 427, ff.

Shortly after the termination of the Arian controversies, Palestine was the chief seat of Origen's followers. Among them the most distinguished were John, bishop of Jerusalem (386–417), and the two monks, Rufinus and Jerome. Here Epiphanius made his appearance in the year 394, and demanded with zeal the condemnation of Origen. John and Rufinus resisted him: while Jerome, who was anxiously alive to his orthodoxy, yielded, and broke off communion with the church of Jerusalem.¹ By the efforts of Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria, he was indeed induced to renew it, 397. In the mean time, in the same year, Rufinus went back to Rome, and endeavored, by a revised translation of the writings of Origen,² which were as yet little known, to procure a more favorable opinion of him in the west. By this means a violent controversy was created between him and

Jerome.³ Origen, however, having been condemned in Egypt, Anastasius, bishop of Rome, condemned him also. Rufinus retreated to Âquilaia, and continued his meritorious services in the translation of Greek works († 410).⁴ Jerome, on the other hand, gained for himself great merit by his continued labors on the translation of the Bible into Latin, and his commentaries († 420).⁵

Soon after these controversies in Palestine, the ambitious and violent Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria (385-412), came forth as the enemy of Origen.⁶ The Nitrian monks were divided into two parties, the Origenists and the Anthropomorphists. Moved by personal hatred to some individuals of the first, and afraid of the fanaticism of the latter, Theophilus caused Origen to be condemned (399, 400),⁷ then demanded the most noted bishops to do the same, and persecuted,⁸ with the greatest cruelties, the monks who had adopted the peculiar views of Origen. These unfortunate persons repaired at last to Constantinople, where John Chrysostom of Antioch had been bishop, contrary to the wishes of Theophilus,⁹ since 398, as much beloved by the better part of his clergy as he was hated by the more corrupt, by the luxurious court, and the empress Eudoxia. Theophilus directed his deadly hatred against Chrysostom, because the latter received the banished, and made representations to Theophilus on their behalf, and because by their complaints they procured from the emperor a summons commanding the bishop of Alexandria to appear in person at Constantinople before Chrysostom. After some delay, Theophilus appeared in Constantinople (403), and there succeeded in uniting the foes of Chrysostom, in procuring false accusers, and causing sentence of deposition and exile to be pronounced upon him at a synod (Syn. ad. Quercum).¹⁰ It is true Chrysostom had to be recalled in a few days, on account of an uproar among the people, but he was as quickly displaced, chiefly through the influence of Eudoxia,¹¹ and died in exile at Pontus († 407).¹² Though the Romish bishop Innocent greatly condemned these acts of violence, he could not succeed in bringing Theophilus to account.¹³ In consequence of such conduct,

These translations, with the correspondence between Jerome and Theophilus, are most fully given in Vallarsi, vol. i. Ep. 86, ss. How little Theophilus acted on this occasion according to his conviction is proved even by his subsequent conduct to Synesius. See § 84, note 33.

Isidore, abbot in Pelusium, passed a judgment on these proceedings soon after Chrysostom's death (lib. i. Epist. 152): Ἡ γείτων Αἴγυπτος συνήθως ἠρόμησε, Μωσεία παραιτουμένη, τὸν Φαραὶ οἰκτιουμένη.—Τὸν λιθομανῆ καὶ χρυσολάττην προβαλλομένη Θεόφιλον, τέσσαροι συνεργοίς, ἢ μᾶλλον συναποστάταις ὄχυρωθέντα, τὸν θεοφιλεῖ καὶ θεολόγον κατεπολέμησεν ἄνθρωπον.—Ἄλλ' οἶκος Δαβίδ κρατυιοῦται, ἄσθeneὶ δὲ ὁ ποῦ Σαούλ.

¹³ His epistles and those of Honorius are in Mansi-Conc. coll. iii. 1095.

Rome broke off all church communion with Constantinople; and in the latter city itself, a great part of the church remained faithful to Chrysostom (Johannites), and kept themselves apart from his successors, whom they looked upon as intruders, until the wrong that had been done to him was atoned by the solemn bringing back of his bones (438).

CONTROVERSIES WITH HERETICS IN THE WEST.

During the Arian disturbances, the Manichaeans had been silently spreading in the west, because for the most part they conformed externally to the catholic church. In Spain, they coincided with the Gnostics,¹ and from contact with them arose the doctrine with which Priscillian (about 379) came forth in Spain.² His most violent opponents, the bishops Idacius and Ithacius, first obtained the condemnation of his doctrines at the synod of Caesaraugusta (380); and next they prevailed on the usurper Maximus to put him to death at Treoes (385.) The

² His history Sulpic. Sever. Hist. sacr. ii. 46-51, who calls the Priscillianists Gnosticorum haeresis. Something of their doctrine, but unsatisfactory, is found in P. Orosii Consultatio s. Commonitorium ad Augustinum de errore Priscillianistarum et Origenistarum, and in Leonis M. Epist. 93 ad Turibium Episc. Asturic. Priscilliani canones (doctrinal consequences) ad S. Priscillianists, however, continued to exist in spite of all persecutions till the sixth century.

At the same time, the persecution of the Manichaeans, who were especially hated for various reasons, was also renewed. Valentinian I., who tolerated all other sects, forbade them to assemble in public for their worship, in 372; and succeeding emperors enacted new and still more rigorous laws against them.³ But their most zealous adversary was Aurelius Augustinus, born at Tagaste, in Numidia, who had himself belonged to the Manichaeans for a considerable time, but had been converted at Milan by Ambrose (387). Afterward, as bishop of Hippo Regius in Numidia (from 395 to 430), he became as formidable an opponent of heretics, as he exercised an incalculable influence on his own and subsequent times, by his doctrinal and polemical writings.⁴ His energies were directed in a high degree against

Paris 1836, ss. xi. voll. 8.* The more all parties had occasion to appeal to the writings of Augustine, in consequence of the high authority in which they stood, the greater was the danger of their undergoing intentional and unintentional corruptions. Even so early as the ninth century Hincmar (about 860), de non trina deitate (Opp. i. 450), unjustly accuses others of what he is disposed to do himself, i. e., of corrupting them. The doctrinal position of the editor had its influence also on the earlier editions. It is even proclaimed in the title of the Opp. Venet. 1584: In quo curavimus removeri ea omnia, quae fidelium mentes haeretica pravitate possent inficere. The Benedictines were the first who proceeded critically in their edition, but by this they gave offense to the Jesuits, who asserted they had falsified the Codd. Corbejenses. On the other side wrote Mabillon Supplementum libri de re diplomatia c. 13. On this came forth the Jesuit the Manichaeans.⁵ Several were converted by him, but many still remained in Africa. Even in Rome, there were secret Manichaeans at that time; but their numbers were very much increased there after the conquest of Africa by the Vandals (429). Hence Leo the Great, bishop of Rome (440-461), exerted himself to the utmost to detect and convert them.⁶ His zeal, supported by imperial ordinances, was not ineffectual;⁷ but yet single Manichaean opinions continued to exist till far into the middle ages.

There were still more furious controversies in Africa in the fourth century against the Donatists,⁸ among whom the fanati-

⁹ Concerning the time of the origin of the Agonistici or Circumcelliones, see Optatus, iii. c. 4: Veniebant Paulus et Macarius (sent by the emperor about 348), qui pauperes ubique dispungerent, et ad unitatem singulos hortarentur: et cum ad Bagajensem civitatem proximarent, tunc alter Donatus—ejusdem civitatis Episcopus, impedimentum unitati et obicem venientibus supra memoratis opponere cupiens, praeconis per vicina loca et per omnes mundinas misit, Circumcelliones Agonisticos nuncupans, ad praedictum locum ut concurrerent, invitavit: et eorum illo tempore concursus est flagitatus, quorum dementia paullo ante ab ipsis Episcopis impie videbatur esse succensa. Described by Augustini de Haeres. lib. c. 69: Ad hanc (Donatistarum) haeresim in Africa et illi pertinent, qui appellantur Circumcelliones, genus hominum agreste et famosissimae audaciae, non solum in alios immania facinora perpetrando, sed nec sibi eadem insana feritate parcendo. Nam per mortes varias, maximeque praecipitiore et aquarem et ignium, se ipsos necare consueverunt, et in istum furorem alios quos potuerint sexus utriusque seducere aliquando, ut occidantur ab aliis, mortem nisi fecerint comminantes. Verumtamen plerisque Donatistarum (non) displicent tales, nec eorum communiōne contaminari se putant. Idem contra Crescon. iii. § 46: Quotidie vestrorum incredibilia patimur facta Clericorum et Circumcellionum, multo pejora quam quorumlibet latronum atque praedonum. Namque horrendis armati cujusque generis telis, terribiliter vagando, non dico ecclesiasticam, sed ipsam humanam quietem pacemque perturbant, nocturnis aggressionibus clericorum catholicorum invasas domos nudas atque inanes derelinquunt: ipsos etiam raptos et fustibus tunsos, ferroque concisos, semivivos abiciunt. Insuper—oculis eorum calcem aceto permixto infundentes—excruciare amplius eligunt quam citius excaecare. § 47: Circumcelliorum vestrorum. nobilis furor horrendum praebens vestris clericis satellitium usquequaque odiosissime innotuit. Idem contra Gaudentium, i. § 32: Cum idololatriae licentia usquequaque ferveret—isti Paganorum armis festa sua frequentantibus irruebant (cf. Epist. 185, § 12: quando adhuc cultus fuerat idolorum, ad Paganorum celeberrimas sollemnitates ingentia turbarum agmina veniebant, non ut idola frangerent, sed ut interficerentur a cultoribus idolorum: doubtless in the time from Julian to Gratian).—Praeter haec sunt saxa immania et montium horrida praerupta, voluntariorum creberrimis mortibus nobilitata vestrorum; aquis et ignibus rarius id agebant, praecipitiis greges consumebantur ingentes. Quis enim nescit hoc genus hominum in horrendis facinoribus inquietum, ab utilibus operibus otiosum, crudelissimum in mortibus alienis, vilissimum in suis, maxime in agris territans, ab agris vacans et victus sui causa cellas circumiens rusticanas, unde et Circumcellionum nomen accepit? Ejasd. Enarratio in Psalm. cxxxii. § 3: Quando vos recte haereticis de Circumcellionibus insultare coeperitis—illi vobis insultant de Monachis. Primo si comparandi sunt, vos videte. Comparantur ebriosi cum sobriis, praecipites cum consideratis, furentes cum simplicibus, vagantes cum congregatis. § 6: Fortasse dicturi sunt nostri non vocantur Circumcelliones: vos illos ita appellatis contumelioso nomine. Agonisticos eos vocant. Sic eos, inquit appellamus propter agonem. Certant enim, et dicit Apostolus: certamen bonum certavi (2 Tim. iv. 7). Quia sunt qui certant adversus diabolum et praevalent milites Christi, Agonistici appellantur. Utinam ergo milites Christi essent, et non milites diaboli, a quibus plus appellatis Deo laudes quam fremitus leonis. Hi etiam insultare nobis audent, quia fratres, cum vident homines, Deo gratias dicunt. Vos Deo gratias nostrum ridetis: Deo laudes vestrum plorant homines (cf. contra literas Petiliani, ii. § 146: considerate paululum, quam multis, et quantum luctum dederint Deo laudes armorum vestrorum).

Augustine exerted the greatest influence on the theology especially of the occidental church, by his system of the relation of Divine grace to the human will, which he developed in the Pelagian controversy. The freedom of the will, the evil consequences of the fall, and the necessity of Divine grace, had always been admitted in the church, without any attempt having been made to define, by ecclesiastical formulas, the undefinable in these doctrines.¹ Since Tertullian, an opinion had been peculiar to the Latin fathers which was wholly unknown to the Greek church, that the sin of Adam had been transferred as a peccable principle to his posterity, by generation (tradux animae, tradux peccati). This must necessarily have had some influence on the doctrines of free will and Divine grace.² Pelagius and Caeles-

Also: Servos etiam dominorum admonitio, vel colonos. verberum crebrior ictus a prava religione revocabit.—Clerici vero ministrique eorum ac perniciosissimi sacerdotales ablati de Africano solo quod ritu sacrilego polluerunt, in exilium virtim ad singulas quasque regiones sub idonea prosecutione mittantur, ecclesiis eorum vel conventiculis praediisque, si qua in eorum ecclesias haereticorum largitas prava contulit, proprietati potestatique Catholicae (sicut jam dudum statuimus) vindicatis. In addition to all this, 414 L. 54: Evidenti praeceptione se agnoscant et intestabiles, et nullam potestatem alicujus ineundi habere contractas, sed perpetua inustus infamia, a coetibus honestis et a conventu publico segregandos.

² Hilarius Pictav. in Matth. c. 18, § 6: In unius Adae errore omne hominum genus

tius, two monks universally esteemed for their morals, had distinguished themselves even during their abode at Rome (till 409), by giving peculiar prominence to the doctrine of free will for the promotion of personal virtue.³ Afterward they repaired to Africa (411), whence Pelagius soon passed over into Palestine. But Caelestius, when he became a candidate for the office of presbyter in Carthage, was accused of various errors which had proceeded from the tendency to exalt free will,⁴ and was excluded from church communion by a synod at Carthage (412); on which he went to Ephesus.

The doctrines of Caelestius, however, had gained many friends, and therefore Augustine was induced to oppose them, although personally he had no share in the transactions of the synod by which Caelestius was condemned. His attention was soon drawn to the writings of Pelagius, as the teacher of Caelestius, which he refuted, but always as yet with respect and forbearance.⁵ But after Jerome, in Palestine, had begun to raise suspicions

⁴ Marius Mercator has preserved from the Gestis Concilii the seven points of accusation (Commonitorium i. ed. Baluz. p. 3, Comm. ii. p. 133): I. Adam mortalem factura, qui sive peccaret, sive non peccaret, fuisset moriturus. II. Quoniam peccatum Adae ipsum solum laesit, et non genus humanum. III. Quoniam infantes, qui nascuntur, in eo statu sunt, in quo Adam fuit ante prevaricationem. IV. Quoniam neque per mortem vel praevagationem Adae omne genus hominum moriatur, neque per resurrectionem Christi omne hominum genus resurgat. V. Quoniam infantes, etiamsi non baptizentur, habeant vitam aeternam. VI. Quoniam lex sic mittit ad regnum coelorum, quomodo et evangelium. VII. Quoniam et ante adventum Domini fuerunt homines impeccabiles, id est sine peccato (p. 3: Posse esse hominem sine peccato et facile Dei mandata servare, quia et ante Christi adventum fuerunt homines sine peccato). Cf. Augustin. de Gestis Pelagii 11. Caelestius's defense of the second and third points in Augustin. de Pecc. orig. c. 3, 4 (from the Synodical acts): Dixi, de traduce peccati dubium me esse, ita tamen, ut cui donavit Deus gratiam peritiae, consentiam; quia diversa ab eis audivi, qui utique in ecclesia catholica constituti sunt presbyteri. Sanctus presbyter Rufinus (perhaps the celebrated, see Norisius Hist. against Pelagius of being an Origenist,⁶ for he hated him from some trifling causes; and after Orosius,⁷ a presbyter sent by Augustine, had failed in his attempt to procure the condemnation of the Pelagian doctrine, with John, bishop of Jerusalem, and also with the synod at Diospolis (Lydda, 415),⁸ Augustine laid aside all forbearance, and opposed Pelagianism severely and bitterly in many works.⁹ The African bishops solemnly condemned the heresy¹⁰ at the synods of Mileve and Carthage (416), and Innocent I., bishop of Rome, fully agreed with them.¹¹ After Innocent's death († 417), Pelagius and Caelestius applied to his successor Zosimus, by whom they were declared orthodox;¹²

Praef. lib. iv. in Jerem.: Subito haeresis Pythagorae et Zenonis ἀπαθείας καὶ ἀναμαρτησίας id est impassibilitatis et impeccantiae, quae olim in Origene, et dudum in discipulis ejus, Grunnio, Evagrioque Pontico, et Joviniano jugulata est, coepit reviviscere, et non solum in Occidentis, sed in Orientis partibus sibilare. Jerome wrote against Pelagius the Epist. ad Ctesiphontem (ap. Martianay Ep. 43, ap. Vallarsi Ep. 133) and the dialogi contra Pelagianos, libb. iii. in the years 414 and 415. Against the dialogues, although the doctrinal system in them is much nearer the Pelagian than the Augustinian, wrote Theodorus Mopsvestenus πρὸς τοὺς λέγοντας, ὅτι οὐ γινώσκ. πταίειν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, libb. v., cf. Photius Cod. 177, and Ebedjesu in Assemani Bibl. Or. iii. i. 34. Latin fragments in Marius Mercator ed. Baluz. p. 339, ss.

⁷ August. Epist. 169, § 13: Scripsi etiam librum ad sanctum presbyterum Hieronymum de animae origine (is Ep. 166), consulens eum, quomodo defendi possit illa sententia, quam religiosae memoriae Marcellino suam esse scripsit, singulas animas novas nascentibus fieri, ut non labefactetur fundatissima ecclesiae fides, quae inconcusse credimus, quod in Adam omnes moriuntur, et nisi per Christum liberentur, quod per suum Sacramentum etiam in parvulis operatur, in condemnationem trahuntur. Among them also was Julian, bishop of Eclanum, who continued to defend Pelagianism in various works, against which Augustine wrote several in refutation.

The Pelagians did not form an ecclesiastical, but simply a theological party. They had also no common type of doctrine, and therefore deviated from one another in particular points. ¹⁹ Caelestii Symb. fragm. i.: Infantes autem debere baptizari in remissionem peccatorum secundum regulam universalis ecclesiae et secundum evangelii sententiam, confitemur, quia Dominus statuit, regnum caelorum non nisi baptizatis posse conferri: quod quia vires naturae non habent, conferri necesse est per gratiae libertatem. In remissionem autem peccatorum baptizandos infantes non idcirco diximus, ut peccatum ex traduce (or peccatum naturae, peccatum naturale) firmare videamur, quod longe a catholico sensu alienum est. Quia peccatum non cum homine nascitur, quod postmodum exercetur ab homine: quia non naturae delictum, sed voluntatis esse demonstratur. Et illud ergo confiteri congruum, ne diversa baptismatis genera facere videamur, et hoc praemunire necessarium est, ne per mysterii occasionem, ad creatoris injuriam, malum, antequam fiat ab homine, tradi dicatur homini per naturam. Pelagii ep. ad Demetr. C. 4: Ferat sententiam de naturae bono ipsa conscientia bona.—Quid illud obsecro est, quod ad omne peccatum aut erubescimus, aut timemus? et culpam facti nunc rubore vultus, nunc pallore monstramus?—e diverso autem in omni bono lacti, constantes, intrepidi sumus?—Est enim inquam in animis nostris naturalis quaedam (ut ita dixerim) sanctitas, quae velut in arce animi praesidens exercet boni malique judicium. But comp. c. 8: Neque vero alia nobis causa difficultatem bene faciendi facit, quam longa consuetudo vitiorum, quae nos infecit a parvo, paulatimque per multos corrumpit annos, et ita postea obligatos sibi et addictos tenet, ut vim quodammodo videatur habere naturae.

²⁰ Pelagius ap. August. de Pecc. orig. 14: Omne bonum ac malum, quo vel laudabiles vel vituperabiles sumus, non nobiscum oritur, sed agitur a nobis: capaces enim utriusque rei, non pleni nascimur, et ut sine virtute, ita et sine vitio procreamur: atque ante actionem propriae voluntatis, id solum in homine est, quod Deus condidit. Epist. ad Demetr. c. 3: Volens namque Deus rationabilem creaturam voluntarii boni munere et liberi arbitrii potestate donare, utriusque partis possibilitatem homini inserendo proprium ejus fecit, esse quod velit: ut boni ac mali capax, naturaliter utrumque posset, et ad alterum voluntatem deflecteret. Hence Caelestii definitiones are proofs, hominem sine peccato esse posse. Among other things it is said, def. 2: Iterum quaerendum est, peccatum voluntatis an necessitatis est? Si necessitatis est, peccatum non est, si voluntatis, vitari potest. 5. Iterum quaerendum est, utrumne debeat homo sine peccato esse. Procul dubio debet. Si debet, potest: si non potest, ergo non debet. Et si non debet homo esse sine peccato, debet ergo cum peccato esse; et jam peccatum non erit, si illud deberi constiterit.

facilitate the bringing about of goodness, so now the instructions and example of Christ, and the particular operations of grace. The latter, however, always follow the free purpose to be good.²² God's predestination therefore is founded solely on his foreknowledge of human actions."

Though Augustine had formerly in his controversy with the Manicheans conceded much to free will, and taken a very different view of predestination,²³ he had long before Pelagius adopted a stricter view,²¹ which was for the first time developed in the controversy with the Pelagians²⁵ in the following system.

renatus fuerit ex aqua et spiritu, non habebit salutem, vel vitam aeternam," tantummodo autem dixit "non intrabit in regnum Dei" (Jo. iii. 5): ad hoc parvuli baptizandi sunt, ut sint etiam cum Christo in regno Dei, ubi non erunt, si baptizati non fuerint: quamvis et sine baptismo si parvuli moriantur, salutem vitamque aeternam habituri sint, quoniam nullo peccati vinculo obstricti sunt. In like manner, Origen ad Rom. ii. 7, see Div. I. § 67, note 1.

²² Pelagius de Libero arbitrio (ap. Aug. de grat. Chr. 7): Hic nos imperitissimi hominum putant injuriam divinae gratiae facere, quia dicimus eam sine voluntate nostra nequam in nobis perficere sanctitatem: quasi Deus gratiae suae aliquid imperaverit, et non illis, quibus imperavit, etiam gratiae suae auxilium subministret, ut quod per liberum homines facere jubentur arbitrium, facilius possent implere per gratiam. Quam nos non, ut tu putas, in lege tantummodo, sed et in Dei esse adiutorio confitemur. Adjuvat enim nos Deus per doctrinam et revelationem suam, dum cordis nostri oculos aperit; dum nobis, ne praesentibus occupemur, futura demonstrat; dum diaboli pandit insidias; dum nos multiformi et ineffabili dono gratiae caelestis illuminat. Ejusdem ep. ad Innoc. (ibid. c. 31): Ecce apud beatitudinem tuam epistola ista me purget, in qua pure atque simpliciter ad peccandum et ad non peccandum integrum liberum arbitrium habere nos dicimus, quod in omnibus bonis operibus divino adjuvatur semper auxilio. Quam liberi arbitrii potestatem dicimus in omnibus esse generaliter, in Christianis, Judaeis, atque Gentilibus. In omnibus est liberum arbitrium aequaliter per naturam, sed in solis Christianis juvatur a gratia.

Neque enim fidem putabam Dei gratia praeveniri, ut per illam nobis daretur, quod posceremus utiliter, nisi quia credere non possemus, si non praecederet praeconium veritatis: ut autem praedicato nobis Evangelio consentiremus, nostrum esse proprium, et nobis ex nobis esse arbitraber. On the other hand Norisius in the Vindiciis Augustinianis c. 5, § 5, seeks to defend him.—The Augustinian system is very differently represented, because the most opposite parties wished to find their own sentiments in it. It is most correctly described by the Reformed, the Dominicans, Augustines, and Jansenists; most misrepresented by the Jesuits.

²⁸ Contra duas epist. Pelagianorum, i. 2: Quis autem nostram dicat, quod primi hominis peccato perierit liberum arbitrium de humano genere? Libertas quidem perierit per peccatum, sed illa quae in paradiso fuit, habendi plenam cum immortalitate justitiam; propter quod natura humana divina indiget gratia, dicente Domino: si vos Filius liberaverit, tunc vere liberi eritis (John viii. 36), utique liberi ad bene justeque vivendum. Nam liberum arbitrium usque adeo in peccatore non perierit, ut per illud peccent, maxime omnes qui cum delectatione peccant et amore peccati: hoc eis placet, quod eis libet. De gratia Christi 26: Quid autem boni faceremus, nisi diligeremus? Aut quomodo bonum non facimus, si diligamus? Etsi enim Dei mandatum videtur aliquando non a diligentibus, sed a timentibus fieri: tamen ubi non est dilectio, nullum bonum opus imputatur, nec recte bonum opus vocatur, quia omne quod non ex fide est, peccatum est, et fides per dilectionem

this corrupt mass of humanity (perditionis massa) God resolved from eternity to save some through Christ, and leave the rest to deserved perdition. Though baptism procures forgiveness of sin, even of original sin, it does not remove the moral corruption of man.²⁹ Therefore Divine grace alone, and irresistibly, works faith in the elect, as well as love and power to do good.³⁰ The others, operatur. Ac per hoc gratiam Dei, qua caritas Dei diffunditur in cordibus nostris per Spiritum sanctum, qui datus est nobis, sic confiteatur, qui vult veraciter confiteri, ut omnino nihil boni sine illa, quod ad pietatem pertinet veramque justitiam, fieri posse non dubitet. Wiggers, i. 121. J. G. L. Duncker Hist. doctrinae de ratione quae inter peccatum originale et actuale intercedit apud Irenaeum, Tertullianum, Augustinum. Gottingae. 1836. 8.

³⁰ In the beginning of the controversy Augustine still thought of these operations of grace as resistibles, see De Spiritu et Litera, c. 34 : Agit Deus, ut velimus, et ut credamus, sive extrinsecus per evangelicas exhortationes,—sive intrinsecus, ubi nemo habet in potestate quid ei veniat in mentem, sed consentire vel dissentire propriae voluntatis est. His ergo modis quando Deus agit cum anima rationali, ut ei credat (neque enim credere potest quodlibet libero arbitrio, si nulla sit suasio vel vocatio cui credat), profecto et ipsum velle credere Deus operatur in homine, et in omnibus misericordia ejus praeventit nos : consentire autem vocationi Dei, vel ab ea dissentire, sicut dixi, propriae voluntatis est. But in his later works they appear as irresistibly acting. De Corrept. et Grat. 7 : Quicunque ergo ab illa originali damnatione ista divinae gratiae largitate discreti sunt, non est dubium, quod et procuratur eis audiendum evangelium; et cum audiunt, credunt; et in fide, quae per delectionem operatur, usque in finem perseverant; et si quando exorbitant, correpti emendantur; et quidam eorum, etsi ab hominibus non corripiantur, in viam quam reliquerant redeunt; et nonnulli accepta gratia, in qualibet aetate, periculis hujus vitae mortis celeritate subtrahuntur. Haec enim omnia operatur in eis, qui vasa misericordiae operatus est eos, qui et elegit eos in filio suo ante constitutionem mundi per electionem gratiae. De Gratia Christi, c. 24 : Non lege atque doctrina insonante forinsecus, sed interna atque occulta mirabili ac ineffabili potestate operari Deum in cordibus hominum non solum veras revelationes, sed etiam bonas voluntates. De Corrept. et Grat. c. 9 : Quicumque ergo in Dei providentissima dispositione praesciti, praedestinati, vocati, justificati, glorificati sunt, non dico etiam nondum renati, sed etiam nondum nati, jam filii Dei sunt, et omnino perire non possunt. Ibid. 12 : Ac per hoc nec de ipsa perseverantia boni voluit Deus sanctos suos in viribus suis, sed in ipso gloriarum.—Tantum quippe Spiritu sancto accenditur voluntas eorum, ut ideo possint, quia sic volunt; ideo sic velint, quia Deus operatur, ut velint.—Subventum est igitur infirmitati voluntatis humanae, ut divina gratia indeclinabiliter et insuperabiliter ageretur. Ibid. 14 : Non est itaque dubitandum, voluntati Dei, qui in caelo et in terra omnia, quaecumque voluit, fecit, et qui etiam illa, quae futura sunt, fecit, humanas voluntates non posse resistere, quo minus faciat ipse quod vult : quandoquidem etiam de ipsis hominum voluntatibus, quod vult, cum vult, facit. These moral effects of grace Augustine comprehends under Justification, cf. Opus imperfect. contra Jul. ii. c. 168 : Justificat impium Deus, non solum dimittendo, quae mala facit, sed etiam donando caritatem, quae declinat a malo et facit bonum per Spiritum sanctum.

to whom the grace of God is not imparted³¹ have no advantage from Christ, and fall into condemnation,³² even an eternal one.”³³

Such were the opposing systems, apart from the consequences with which the misrepresentations of the combatants reproached

³² De Peccat. merit. et remiss. iii. 4: Quoniam nihil agitur aliud, cum parvuli baptizantur, nisi ut incorporentur ecclesiae, id est, Christi corpori membrisque societur, manifestum est, eos ad damnationem, nisi hoc eis collatum fuerit, pertinere. De Gratia et Lib. arbitr. 3: Sed et illa ignorantia, quae non est eorum, qui scire nolunt, sed eorum, qui tanquam simpliciter nesciunt, neminem sic excusat, ut sempiterno igne non ardeat, si propterea non credidit, quia non audivit omnino quid crederet; sed fortasse, ut mitius ardeat (cf. contra Julianum, iv. 3. Absit, ut sit in aliquo vera virtus, nisi fuerit justus. Absit autem, ut sit justus vere, nisi vivat ex fide. Minus enim Fabricius quam Catalina punietur, non quia iste bonus, sed quia ille magis malus: et minus impius, quam Catilina, Fabricius, non veras virtutes habendo, sed a veris virtutibus non plurimum deviando).—De Corrept. et Grat. 7: Ac per hoc et qui Evangelium non audierunt, et qui eo audito in melius commutati perseverantiam non acceperunt, et qui Evangelio audito venire ad Christum, hoc est, in eum credere noluerunt, quoniam ipse dixit, Nemo venit ad me, nisi ei datum fuerit a Patre meo (John vi. 66), et qui per aetatem parvulam nec credere poterunt, sed ab originali noxa solo possent lavacro regenerationis absolvi, quo tamen non accepto mortui perierunt; non sunt ab illa conspersione discreti, quam constat esse damnatam, euntibus omnibus ex uno in condemnationem. Ibid. 13: Propter hujus ergo utilitatem secreti credendum est, quosdam de filiis perditionis non accepto dono perseverandi usque in finem, in fide, quae per dilectionem operatur, incipere vivere, et aliquamdiu fideliter ac juste vivere, et postea cadere, neque de hac vita, priusquam hoc eis contingat, auferri. De Prædest. Sanct. 8: Cur autem istum potius, quam illum liberet, inscrutabilia sunt judicia ejus et investigabiles viae ejus (Romae xi. 33). Melius enim et hic audimus aut dicimus: O homo, tu quis es, qui respondeas Deo (Rom. ix. 20). How much perplexity the passage, 1 Tim. ii. 4, qui omnes vult homines salvos fieri, occasioned Augustine, is proved by his numerous and all very forced attempts to explain it. So de Corrept. et Grat. c. 14. Contra Jul. iv. c. 8: Omnes i. q. multos; Enchirid. ad Laur. 103: Omnes i. q. omnis generis. De Corrept. et Gratia, c. 15: Omnes homines Deus vult salvos fieri, quoniam nos facit velle. Enchirid. l. c. tanquam diceretur, nullum hominem fieri salvum, nisi quem fieri salvum ipse voluerit.

one another,³⁴ for the purpose of exciting universal abhorrence of the enemy's doctrine. The sentiments of Augustine were ecclesiastically confirmed by the decisions of African synods and by Zosimus in the west; although their author himself felt how dangerous they might be made to morals, and was able to bring them forward in popular instruction in no other than an inconsequential way.³⁵ The Greek Church could not but stumble at them; but it troubled itself little about such controversies.³⁶ The exiled western bishops hoped, therefore, that they would so

³⁶ Comp. the refutation of Augustine's doctrines by Theodore of Mopsuestia, ap. Marius Mercator, ed. Baluz. p. 399, ss. ex. gr. p. 342: Nihil horum prospicere potuit mirabilis peccati originalis assertor, quippe qui in divinis scripturis nequaquam fuerit exercitatus, nec ab infantia, juxta b. Pauli vocem, sacras didicerit literas.—Novissime vero in hanc dogmatis recidit novitatem, qua diceret, quod in ira atque furore Deus Adam mortalem esse præceperit, et propter ejus unum delictum cunctos etiam necdum natos homines morte multaverit. much the more readily obtain protection in Constantinople, as they believed they had wholly in their favor the works of Chrysostom, which were highly esteemed in that place.³⁷ Hence they applied particularly to Nestor, who had been bishop of the see of Constantinople since 428. But since very prejudicial representations of Pelagianism had been disseminated from the west, especially by Marius Mercator,³⁸ who was personally present in Constantinople,³⁹ Nestorius saw the necessity of giving prominence to the ruinous consequences of the fall and the necessity of baptism, which the Pelagians were said to deny.⁴⁰ But on the other hand, he found the Pelagians themselves who had fled to him, so little heterodox, that he asked from the Romish bishop Caelestine (429) an explanation respecting the grounds of their condemnation.⁴¹ This very relation of the Pe-

lagians to Nestorius was ruinous to them in the west; an internal necessary connection between Pelagianism and Nestorianism was hunted out,⁴² and at the third general council at Ephesus (431) Pelagianism was condemned along with Nestorianism.⁴³ Yet the Augustinian doctrine of grace and predestination was never adopted in the east.⁴⁴

But even in the west, where this doctrine had been ecclesiastically ratified, there were never more than a few who held to it in its fearful consequences. Its injurious practical effects could not be overlooked, and appeared occasionally in outward manifestation.⁴⁵ The monks in particular were naturally opposed to a view which annihilated all the meritoriousness of their monastic exercises.⁴⁶ Hence Augustine soon found his doctrine disputed even by opponents of the Pelagians.⁴⁷ The monks of Massilia especially, adopted a view of free grace between that of Augustine and that of Pelagius, which seems to have originated chiefly with John Cassian († soon after 432),⁴⁸

NESTORIAN CONTROVERSY.

SOURCES: Nestor's own account (Evagrius Hist. eccl. i. 7) was made use of by Irenaeus (Comes, then from 444 to 448, bishop of Tyre) in his Tragoedia s. comm. de rebus in synodo Ephesina, ac in Oriente toto Gestis. This last work of Irenaeus is lost; but the original documents appended to it were transferred in the sixth century, in a Latin translation, to the Synodicon (*Variorum Epist. ad Conc. Marius Mercator also has many fragments of Acts, Opp. P. ii. (see above, § 87, note 38). A complete collection of all the Acts is given in Mansi, iv. p. 567, ss. and t. v.—Account of this controversy by Ibas, bishop of Edessa, in the Epist. ad Marin Persam (mostly contained in the *Actis Conc. Orientalists indeed could not be led astray by this means from holding fast the human in Christ, as long as they remained true to their historico-exegetical principles;² but the Nicenians in Egypt and the west began to give strong prominence to the unity of his Divine person, for the purpose of obviating that Arian objection,³ and to consider Christ accordingly in all rela-

³ Athanas. de Incarnat. verbi (Opp. ed. Montfaucon, ii. 1, ap. Mansi, iv. 689): Ὁμολογοῦμεν καὶ εἶναι αὐτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν κατὰ πνεῦμα, υἱὸν ἀνθρώπου κατὰ σάρκα· οὐ δύο φύσεις τὸν ἕνα υἱὸν, μίαν προσκυνητὴν καὶ μίαν ὑποσκύνητον· ἀλλὰ μίαν φύσιν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον σεσαρκωμένην, καὶ προσκυνουμένην μετὰ τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ μὴ προσκυνήσει. Since Cyril, a follower of Athanasius, appeals to this passage (lib. de recta fide ad Imperatrices, § 9), it has by this means the most important external testimony in its favor. Several writings were assigned to the Romish bishop Julius I., in which the unity existing in Christ was strongly expressed. There are still extant the Epist. ad Dionysium (ap. Mansi, ii. 1191. A. Maji Scriptt. vett. nova coll. vii. i. 144), cited as genuine by Gennadius (about 490), in which the μία φύσις is expressly and plainly asserted; the Epist. ad Prosdocium (ex. cod. Oxon. ed. J. G. Ehrlich. Lips. 1750. 4), regarded as genuine by the council of Ephesus, by Cyril, Marius Mercator, Facundus, and Ephraem bishop of Antioch about 526 (Photii Cod. 229), which rejects the phrase ἄνθρωπος ὑπὸ θεοῦ προσληφθείς, and three fragments lately published by Majus, l. c. vii. i. 165, the first and third of which are mentioned by Ephraem, l. c. How strongly also Hilary was inclined to the doctrine of one nature may be seen in Münscher's Dogmengesch. iv. 16. Baur's Dreieinigkeit, i. 681. By this means the mode of expression in the writings of Julius is rendered more intelligible from the general tendency of the west at that time.—After Eutyches and the later Monophysites continually appealed to Athanasius, the Romish bishop Felix (270-275), and Julius (337-352), and to Gregory Thaumaturgus, as unam naturam Dei verbi decernentes post unionem, whose testimonia Cyrillus in libb. adv. Diodorum et Theodorum has put together; (see Collatio Catholicorum cum Severianis, A. D. p. 531, Mansi, viii. 820; a Jacobite collection of this kind translated from the Arabic, see Spicilegium, Rom. iii. 694), many Catholics began to asserct that these testimonies have been interpolated by Apollinarists (see Collatio, l. c. p. 821. Leontius de Sectis, act. viii. Justinianus Imp. contra Monophys. in Maji Scriptt. vett. nov. coll. vii. i. 302), notwithstanding Ephraem bishop of Antioch, about 526 (Photii Cod. 229), and Eulogius bishop of Alexandria, about 580 (Phot. Cod. 230), admit the genuineness of the passage of Athanasius and of the Ep. Julii ad Prosdocium. Leontius (contra Monophys. ap. Majus, vii. i. 143, s.) appeals to the testimony of Polemon, a disciple of Apollinaris, as proof that the passage ascribed to Athanasius belongs to Apollinaris. The place in question in Polemon may be completely put together from the two quotations p. 143 and p. 16, but it says something quite different. Polemon speaks against the inconsistency of those who asserted μίαν φύσιν τοῦ λόγου σεσαρκωμένην, and yet assume in Christ θεὸν τέλειον and ἄνθρωπον τέλειον, while Apollinaris had rightly rejected the two natures, and taught εἶναι αὐτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ (as above in the passage of Athanasius). In short, Polemon meant to say, Athanasius had borrowed that doctrine from Apollinaris, but fell into an inconsistency with himself in so doing. Ap. Majus, l. c. p. 16, there is also a fragment of Apollinarii Epist. ad Jovian., in which that passage has been interpolated word for word as above; but it does not at all suit the construction, a sign that it has been inserted.—The moderns, however, especially Catholic writers, have retained the view that all those writings proceeded from Apollinaris. It has been defended in reference to the letters of Julius, particularly by Muratori Anecdota graeca, p. 341, ss.; and with regard to all those tions only as God.⁴ When Apollinaris, following this tendency still farther, denied to Christ a reasonable human soul, his opponents, it is true, were united in asserting that Christ is perfect God and man in one person, but in the east they were now accustomed to distinguish the two natures, and the predicates used to describe them, with greater care; and the two most eminent men of the Antiochian school, Diodore, bishop of Tarsus,⁵ and Theodore, bishop of Mopsuestia,⁶ confirmed the accuracy of this distinction by their writings, which were highly esteemed in the whole east; while in Egypt the formula of Athanasius, of one Divine nature made flesh, was maintained. On the other hand,⁷ *Ambrose*⁸ and *Augustine*⁹ in the west endeavored, after Didymus de Trin. i. 31, 94; ii. 4, 133, and Gregory of Nazianzum goes so far as to declare the man goddess who will not employ this appellation. Heschyus, presbyter in Jerusalem († 343), calls David θεοπάτωρ (Photius Cod. 275). In many apocryphal writings James is called ἀδελφόςθεος (see Thilo Acta Thomae in the Notit. upon p. x. ss. Cf. ¹⁰ Comp. epistola Episcop. Africae ad Episc. Galliae and Leporii libellus emendationis (prim. ed. Jac. Sirmond. Paris. 1530. Mansi, iv. 517). In the latter it is said: Tametsi Christum filium Dei tunc etiam natum de sancta Maria non negaremus, sicut ipsi recordamini; sed minime attendentes ad mysterium fidei, non ipsum Deum hominem natum, sed perfectum cum Deo natum hominem dicebamus; pertimescentes scilicet, ne divinitati conditionem adsignaremus humanam. His present faith: Confitemur dominum ac Deum nostrum Jesum Christum unicum filium Dei, qui ante saecula natus ex patre est, novissimo tempore de Spiritu sancto et Maria semper virgine factum hominem, Deum natum: et confitentes utramque substantiam carnis et Verbi, unum eundemque Deum atque hominem inseparabilem pia fidei credulitate suscepimus; et ex tempore susceptae carnis sic omnia dicimus, quae erant Dei, transisse in hominem, ut omnia, quae erant hominis, in Deum venirent; ut hac intelligentia verbum factum sit caro, non ut conversione aut mutabilitate aliqua coeperit esse quod non erat, sed ut potentia divinitatis dispensationis Verbum patris, nunquam a patre discedens, homo proprie fieri dignaretur, incarnatusque sit unigenitus secreto illo mysterio, quod ipse novit. Nostrum namque est, credere, illius nosse. Ac sic, ut ipse Deus Verbum, totum suscipiens quod est hominis, homo sit, et adsumtus homo, totum accipiendo quod est Dei, aliud quam Deus esse non possit. bishop of Alexandria († 444), considered derogatory to the honor of his see.¹⁴ He soon gave an opportunity to the malevolent watcher of his proceedings by denying the propriety of calling Mary θεοτόκος.¹⁵ A bitter but fruitless correspondence took place between them.¹⁶ Cyril resolved to make a bishop of Conπροσχήματι εὐσεβείας κατασκεύαζε. It may refer to that affair of Chrysostom, or to the commencement of the controversy with Nestorius.

¹⁴ The bishop of Constantinople, Atticus, about 420, had been obliged to introduce Chrysostom's name into the Diptychs, after the example of Antioch and at the pressing request of the people, and invited Cyril to do the same (Attici Ep. ad Cyrillum, in Cyrilli Op. v. iii. 201). The latter, however, refused to comply with the suggestion, desiring that the sentence pronounced on Chrysostom should be righteously maintained (l. c. p. 204). However, immediately after Nestor's elevation, new demonstrations of honor were added, Marcellinus Comes (about 534) in Chronico ad Ann. 428 (Chronica mediæ ævi ed. Roesler, i. 262): Beatissimi Joannis Episcopi dudum malorum Episcoporum invidia exulati apud Comitatum (at the imperial court) coepit memoria celebrari mense Sept. d. xxvi. That Cyril continued to regard the condemnation of Chrysostom as a righteous measure is shown by his Epistola ad Acaciam (ap. Mansi, v. 832. Theodoret Opp. ed. Schulze, v. 699).

¹⁵ Extracts from Nestor's discourses in the Greek original are given in the Actis Syn. Ephesin. b. Mansi, iv. 1197. Nestorii Sermones in a Latin version ap. Marius Mercator (ed. Baluz. p. 53, ss.). From the first address: θεοτόκος i. e., puerpera Dei s. genitrix Dei Maria, an autem ἀνθρωποτόκος i. e. hominis genitrix? Habet matrem Deus? Ergo excusabilis gentilitas matres diis subintroducens. Paulus ergo mendax de Christi deitate dicens ἀπάτωρ, ἀμήτωρ, ἀνευ γενεαλογίας (Hebr. vii. 3). Non peperit creatura increabilem, sed peperit hominem deitatis instrumentum. Non creavit Deum Verbum Spiritus sanctus—sed Deo verbo templum fabricatus est, quod habitaret, ex virgine (according to John ii. 21). Est, et non est mortuus incarnatus Deus, sed illum, in quo incarnatus est, suscitavit: inclinatus est elevare, quod ruerat, ipse vero non cecidit. Si jacentem elevare volueris, nonne continges corpus corpore, et te ipsum illi conjungendo elisum eriges, atque ita illi conjunctus ipse manes quod eras? Sic et illud incarnationis aestima sacramentum. Propter utentem illud indumentum, quod utitur, colo, propter absconditum adoraas quod foris videtur: inseparabilis ab eo, qui oculis paret, est Deus. Divido naturas, sed conjungo reverentiam. Dominicam itaque incarnationem intremiscamus, τὴν θεολόγον τῷ θεῷ λόγῳ συνθεολογῶμεν μορφήν, i. e. susceptricem Dei formam una ac pari qua Deum Verbum deitatis ratione veneremur, tanquam divinitatis vere inseparabilis simulacrum, tanquam imaginem absconditi judicis. Duplicem confiteamur, et adoremus ut unum: duplum enim naturarum unum est propter unitatem. Sermo iii. (ib. p. 71): Ego natum et mortuum Deum et sepultum adorare non queo. Qui natus est et per partes incrementorum temporibus eguit, et mensibus legitimis portatus in ventre est, hic humanam habet naturam, sed Deo sane conjunctam. Aliud est autem dicere, quia nato de Maria conjunctus erat Deus ille, qui est Verbum patris, caet. Comp. the extracts in the Actis Syn. Eph. p. 1197: "Ὅταν οὖν ἡ θεία γραφή μέλλῃ λέγειν ἡ γέννησιν τοῦ Χριστοῦ τὴν ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, ἡ θάνατον, οὐδαμοῦ φαίνεται τιθεῖσα τὸ θεός, ἀλλ' ἡ Χριστός, ἡ υἱός, ἡ κύριος, τὸ προελθεῖν τὸν θεὸν λόγον ἐκ τῆς χριστοτόκου παρθένου, παρὰ τῆς θείας ἐδιδάχθην γραφῆς· τὸ δὲ γεννηθῆναι θεὸν ἐξ αὐτῆς, οὐδαμοῦ ἐδιδάχθην.

stantinople once more feel the superior weight of Alexandria. By misrepresenting the doctrines of Nestor to Caelestine, bishop of Rome,¹⁷ he created the prejudice among the westerns, or at least strengthened it, that Nestorianism was only an offshoot of Pelagianism,¹⁸ which at once sealed Nestor's fate in the west.

¹⁷ Cyrilli Epist. ad Caelestium and Commonitorium datum Possidonio (his messenger) ap. Mansi, iv. 1012, ss. and p. 548, and ap. Cooustant. In this last we read: Ἡ Νεστορίου πίστις, μᾶλλον δὲ κακοδοξία, ταύτην ἔχει τὴν δύναμιν. Φησὶν ὅτι ὁ θεὸς λόγος προεγνωκῶς, ὅτι ὁ ἐκ τῆς ἀγίας παρθένου γεννώμενος ἅγιος ἔσται καὶ μέγας, εἰς τοῦτ' ἐξελέξατο αὐτὸν, καὶ παρεσκεύασε μὲν γεννηθῆναι δίχα ἀνδρὸς ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, ἐχαρίσατο δὲ αὐτῷ τὸ καλεῖσθαι τοῖς αὐτοῦ ὀνόμασιν, καὶ ἡγεῖρην αὐτόν. Ὡστε κἂν ἐνανθρωπήσας λέγῃται ὁ μαρογενῆς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος, ὅτι συνῆν ἕει, ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ ἀγίῳ τῷ ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, διὰ τοῦτο λέγεται ἐνανθρωπήσας. Ὡσπερ δὲ συνῆν τοῖς προφῆταις, οὕτως, φησί, καὶ τούτῳ κατὰ μείζονα συνάφειαν. Διὰ τοῦτο φεύγει πανταχοῦ τὸ λέγειν τὴν ἔνωσιν, ἀλλ' ὀνομάζει συνάφειαν, ὡσπερ ἔστιν ὃς ἐξῶθεν, καὶ ὡς ἂν λέγῃ πρὸς Ἰησοῦν, ὅτι καθ' ὡς ἦν μετὰ Μωϋσῆ, οὕτως ἔσομαι μετὰ σοῦ (Jos. i. 5). Κρύπτων δὲ τὴν ἀσέβειαν λέγει, ὅτι ἐκ μήτρας συνῆν αὐτῷ. Διὰ τοῦτο οὔτε θεὸν ἀληθινὸν αὐτὸς εἶναι λέγει, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν εὐδοκίᾳ τοῦ θεοῦ κεκλημένον οὕτως· κἂν κύριος ὀνομάσθῃ, οὕτως πάλιν αὐτόν βούλεται κύριον, ὡς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον χαρισσάμενον αὐτῷ τὸ καλεῖσθαι καὶ οὕτως. Μὴ φησὶν, ὅτι, ὅπερ λέγομεν, ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ἀναστῆναι· ὁ ἀνθρωπος ἀπέθανε, καὶ ὁ ἀνθρωπος ἀνέστη, καὶ οὐδὲν τοῦτο πρὸς τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον.—καὶ ἐν τοῖς μυστηρίοις σῶμᾶ ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπου τὸ προκείμενον· ἡμεῖς δὲ πιστεύομεν, ὅτι τοῦ λόγου ἐστὶ σὰρξ ζωοποιεῖν ἰσχύουσα διὰ τοῦτο, ὅτι τοῦ τὰ πάντα ζωοποιούντος λόγου γέγονε σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα. Nestor replies to this (Synodicon, c. vi. Mansi, v. 763): Ille vero (Cyrillus), omittens mihi per epistolam declarare, si quidem ei tamquam blasphemum vel impium videbatur debere notari, convictionum terrore permotus, et adutrices ob hoc perturbationes exquirens, ad Romanum Caelestium convertitur, quippe ut ad simplicioiorem quam qui posset vim dogmatum subtilius penetrare. Ed ad haec inveniens viri illius simplicitatem, circumfert pueriliter aures ejus illusionibus literarum, olium quidem nostra conscripta transmittens, quasi ad demonstrationem convictionem, quibus contradici non posset, tanquam ego Christum purum hominem definirem: qui certe legem inter ipsa meae ordinationis iuitia contra eos, qui Christum purum hominem dicunt, et contra reliquas haereses innovavi (Cod. Theod. xvi. v. 65). Excerptiones vero intertexens sermonum conscripta composuit, ne societatis compactione detegeretur illata calumnia, et quaedam quidem allocutionibus nostris adji- cians, aliquorum vero partes abrumpens, et illa contexens, quae a nobis de dominica humanatione sunt dicta, velut de puro ea homine dixerimus, etc.

In vain did Nestor represent to Caelestine that he rejected the expression θεοτόκος only in its false acceptation.¹⁹ He was declared a heretic at synods held at Rome and Alexandria (430), and Cyril published twelve anathemas, in which he sought to establish the true doctrine of Christ's person against Nestor's heresy.²⁰ These anathemas were not only answered by Nestor

Hence Lib. v. c. 1, haeresim illam Pelagianae haereoseos discipulam atque imitatricem; and c. 2, to Nestor: Ergo vides, Pelagianum te virus vomere, Pelagiano te spiritu sibilare. In like manner Prosperi epitaphium Nestoriani et Pelagiani:

Nestoriana lues successi Pelagianae,
Quae tamen est utero progenerata meo.
Infelix miserae genitrix et filia natae,
Prodivi ex ipso germine, quod peperit, etc.

¹⁹ Nestor's Epist. iii. ad Caelestin. (ap. Mansi, iv. 1021, v. 725, ap. Coustant, among the Epp. Caelest. no. vi. vii. and xv.) From the Epist. 1: Unde et nos non modicum corruptionem orthodoxiae apud quosdam hic reperientes, et ira et lenitate circa aegros quotidie utimur. Est enim aegritudo non parva, sed affinis putredini Apollinaris et Arii. Dominicam enim in homine unionem ad cujusdam contemperationis confusionem passim commiscent: adeo ut et quidam apud nos clerici—aperte blasphement Deum Verbum Patri homousion, tanquam originis initium de Christoteco virgine sumpsisset, et cum templo suo aedificatus esset, et consecutus. Carnem dicunt post resurrectionem suam non mansisse carnem, sed in naturam transiisse deitatis.—Si quis autem hoc nomen Theotocum propter natam humanitatem conjunctam Deo Verbo, non propter parientem proponet; dicimus quidem hoc vocabulum in ea, quae peperit, non esse conveniens (oportet enim veram matrem de eadem esse essentia ac ex se natum): ferri tamen potest hoc vocabulum—eo quod solum nominetur de virgine hoc verbum propter inseparabile templum Dei Verbi ex ipsa (natum), non quia ipsa mater sit Verbi Dei: nemo enim antiquiorem se parit. From Epist. iii.: Ego autem ad hanc quidem vocem, quae est θεοτόκος, nisi secundum Apollinaris et Arii furorem ad confusionem naturarum proferatur, volentibus dicere non resisto: nec tamen ambigo, quin haec vox θεοτόκος illi voci cedat, quae est χριστοτόκος, tanquam prolatae ab Angelis et Evangelis.—Placuit, vero, Deo adjuvante etiam synodum inexcusabiliter totius orbis terrarum indicere propter inquisitionem aliarum rerum ecclesiasticarum: nam dubitatione verborum non aestimo habituram inquisitionem difficultates, nec impedimentum esse ad tractatum divinitatis Domini Christi.

in as many anti-anathemas,²¹ but they also excited great commotion among the Syrian bishops. Nestor had explained himself satisfactorily to John, bishop of Antioch, concerning the admissibility of the expression θεοτόκος: while Cyril seemed entirely to do away with the distinction of natures in Christ.

Cyril's own doctrine is most apparent from his second letter to Succensus (Opp. v. iii. 141). The Logos became a perfect man, but continued notwithstanding unaltered, one and the same. The two natures must be distinguished only κατὰ ὠνὴν τὴν θεωρίαν. P. 145: Ἔστω δὲ ἡμῖν εἰς παράδειγμα ὁ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος. δύο μὲν γὰρ ἐπ' αὐτοῦ νοοῦμεν τὰς φύσεις, μίαν μὲν τῆς ψυχῆς, ἑτέραν δὲ τοῦ σώματος· ἄλλ' ἐν ψιλαῖς διελόντες ἐννοίαις—οὐκ ἂνὰ μέρος τίθεμεν τὰς φύσεις—ἀλλ' ἐνὸς εἶναι νοοῦμεν· ὥστε τὰς δύο μηκέτι μὲν εἶναι δύο, δι' ἁμφοῖν δὲ τὸ ἐν ἀποτελεῖσθαι ζῶον. Isidore, abbot of Pelusium († 440),²⁵ had no effect upon him; ²⁶ but listening only to the promptings of revenge he proceeded to condemn Nestor without waiting for the arrival of the eastern bishops.²⁷ When they arrived, however, they assembled with John at their head, and deposed Cyril and his principal assistant, Memnon, bishop of Ephesus. The weak Theodosius had been incensed at Cyril till now, but the latter not only contrived to bring over to his side the impetuous monks at Constantinople,²⁸ but also to make many friends at court by bribes and other artifices. The emperor at first confirmed the three depositions; but was afterward prevailed on to re-instate Cyril and Memnon in their offices. Nestor, on the other hand, was obliged to withdraw into his former cloister at Antioch.

The consequence of these measures was a division between the east and the other provinces, especially Egypt. The Orientals, however, were not sufficiently united to withstand their opponents, backed as the latter were by the court. Rabulas, bishop of Edessa, went over to Cyril's party, and even began to show

Alexandri Epist. ad Theodoret. in Synod. c. 96, ibid. p. 878): 'Ὁμολογοῦμεν ταιγαροῦν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, τὸν μονογενῆ, θεὸν τέλειον καὶ ἄνθρωπον τέλειον ἐκ ψυχῆς λογικῆς καὶ σώματος· πρὸ αἰώνων μὲν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, ἐπ' ἐσχάτων δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν τὸν αὐτὸν δὲ ἡμᾶς, καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· δύο γὰρ φύσεων ἕνωσις γέγονε· διὸ ἓνα Χριστὸν, ἓνα υἱὸν, ἓνα κύριον ὁμολογοῦμεν. Κατὰ ταύτην τὴν τῆς ἀσυχχῆτου ἐνώσεως ἔννοια ὁμολογοῦμεν τὴν ἁγίαν παρθένου θεοτόκον, διὰ τὸ τὸν θεὸν λόγον σαρκωθῆναι καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαι, καὶ ἐξ αὐτῆς τῆς συλλήψεως ἐνώσαι ἐαυτὸν τὸν ἐξ αὐτῆς ληφθέντα ναόν· τὰς δὲ εὐαγγελικὰς καὶ ἀποστολικὰς περὶ τοῦ κυρίου φωνὰς, ἴσμεν τοὺς θεολόγους ἄνδρας, τὰς μὲν κοινοποιούντας, ὡς ἐξ' ἐνὸς προσώπου, τὰς δὲ διαιροῦντας, ὡς ἐπὶ δύο φύσεων· καὶ τὰς μὲν θεοπρεπεῖς κατὰ τὴν θεότητα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, τὰς δὲ ταπεινὰς κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα αὐτοῦ παραδίδόντας. Many Egyptians were dissatisfied with this formula. Liberatus Breviar. c. 8: Culpaverunt Cyrillum, cur susceperit ab orientalibus Episcopis duarum confessionem naturarum, quod Nestorius dixit et docuit. To this must be referred Isidori lib. i. Ep. 324, ad Cyrillum, because the latter has been taken into the Synodicon (Mansi, v. 759): Χρῆ σε, θυνμάσιε, ἄτρεπτον μένειν αἰεὶ, οὔτε φόβῳ προδιδόντα τὰ οὐράνια, οὔτε σαυτὸ ἐναντίον φανόμενον. εἰ γὰρ τὰ νῦν γεγραμμένα σοι τοῖς προτέροις ἀντεξετάσειας, ἢ κολακείας φανήσῃ ὑπεύθυνος, εὐχερείας ἢ διάκονος, κενῆς μὲν δόξης ἠττώμενος, τῶν μεγάλων δὲ ἁγίων ἄθλητῶν τοὺς ἁγῶνας οὐ μμησάμενος, οἱ τὸν ἅπαντα βίον ἐπ' ἄλλοτρίας κακονχεῖσθαι ὑπέμειναν, ἢ κακόδοξον φρόνημα κἂν μέχρις ὧτων εἰσδέξασθαι. Against such charges Cyril defends himself at greatest length in the Epist. ad Acacium Episc. Melitenae (Opp. v. iii. 105. Mansi, v. 310: besides in Epist. ad Eulogium Presb. Constantinop. (Opp. v. iii. 123), ad Rufum Ep. Thessalonic. and ad Maximum Diac. Antioch. (in Maji Scriptt. vet. nova coll. viii. ii. 138). In the two latter he confesses he had accommodated himself to the prevailing notions. The orientals accordingly perceived in the adoption of that confession of faith a retraction on the part of Cyril. See Ibae Epist. ad Marin. in Actis Conc. Chalc. act. x. Mansi, vii. 247, especially Theodoretj Ep. ad Joannem Episc. Antioch. A.D. 433 (Ep. 171 in Theod. Opp. ed. Schulze, iv. 1354, a complete copy in Latin in Synodico, l. c. v. 747): 'Ἐν κοινῷ ἀναγνόντες τὰ Αἰγύπτια γράμματα, καὶ ἐξετάσαντες αὐτῶν ἀκριβῶς τὴν διάνοιαν, εὖρομεν σύμφωνα τοῖς εἰρημίοις (ὑφ' ἡμῶν) τὰ ἐκεῖθεν ἀπεσταλμένα, καὶ ἄντικρυς ἐναντία τοῖς δώδεκα κεφαλαίοις, οἷς μέχρι τοῦ παρόντος, ὡς ἄλλοτρίοις τῆς εὐσεβείας, πολεμοῦντες διετελέσαμεν. Ἐκεῖνα μὲν γὰρ εἶχε, σαρκικῶς σάρκα γεγονότα τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ Λόγον, κ. τ. λ. ὑπηγόρευσε δὲ καὶ τῶν περὶ τοῦ Κυρίου φωνῶν τὴν διαίρεσιν. Altera vero diffamata sunt quaedam, quae nos nimium turbaverunt. Dicunt enim, quod is, qui hic poenitudine usus sit, non solum dejectionis s. damnationis subscriptionem a vestra Sanctitate nitatur exigere, sed anathematismum quoque doctrinae sanctissimi et Deo amicissimi episcopi Nestorii. Quodsi id verum est—simile aliquid facit, tanquam si quis vix tandem perductus ad consubstantialem Deo et Patri Filium confitendum, mox iterum anathemate feriat eos, qui hoc a principio sapuerant atque docuerunt, etc. Cyril himself says, Cyrillus ad Acacium, ap. Mansi, v. 314, 315, that even the Nestorians considered that confession as consonant with their unfortunate Nestor, who had never asserted aught inconsistent with that very confession of faith now signed by Cyril, was first banished to Oasis; then in Thebais was dragged from one place of banishment to another, till his death about 440.³⁰ To justify his condemnation, his contemporaries were obliged to misrepresent his doctrinal system,³¹ and it was so handed down to posterity, till men of more enlarged and clearer views recognized the truth.³²

The Syrian bishops were now compelled to assent to the peace concluded between John and Cyril. The greatest opposition was made by the theological school in Edessa, which had long been the place of education for the Persian clergy, when Rabulas prohibited the writings of Diodorus and Theodore. Several of the teachers were interdicted, and betook themselves to Persia. One of them, Barsumas (Barsauma) became bishop of Nisibis (435-489) and confirmed the Persian Christians in their attachment faith. It is certain that Alexander, bishop of Hierapolis the most violent opponent of Cyril, was also against that confession, because it had adopted the expression θεοτόκος (Ep. ad Theodoret. ap. Mansi, v. 878. Schulze, v. 750: Quia hoc est quasi arx totius ejus haerescos); but he does not reject it absolutely, but merely expresses his disapprobation of the doctrinal use of it under existing circumstances (Mansi, v. 875. Schulze, v. 746: post corruptionem totius orbis, et ex quo praedicari nunc coepit passibilis Deus ab impiis Cyrilli capitulis, dogmatice poni solam vocem—theotocon, absque illa—anthropotocon, nihil est aliud, nisi ea quae Cyrilli sunt praedicari). Even the later Monophysites accused Cyril of apostatizing from his doctrine. See Timothei Aeluri fragm. ap. Mansi, vii. 841, and Maji Coll. nov. vii. i. 1, 138, which fragment, if not belonging to Timothy (as Walch Ketzehist. vi. 682, shows), proceeded at least from a Monophysite. Hence when Vater (kirchenhist. Archiv. 1825. ii. 211) and Baur (Dreieinigkei, i. 786) deny the inconsistency of Cyril, they have, at least, the universal voice of that period against them.

³¹ Ex. gr. Cassianus above, note 18. Leo in Epist. ad Leonem Aug. (Quesn. 135, Baller. 165): Anathematizetur ergo Nestorius, qui beatam virginem Mariam non Dei, sed hominis tantummodo creditit genitricem, ut aliam personam carnis faceret, aliam deitatis: nec unum Christum in Verbo Dei et carne sentiret, sed separatim atque se junctum alterum filium Dei, alterum hominis praedicaret. Still more misrepresented is the appendix to Augustin. de Haeresibus, c. 91: Nestoriani a Nestorio episcopo, qui contra catholicam fidem dogmatizare ausus est, Dominum nostrum J. C. hominem tantum: nec id, quod mediator Dei et hominum effectum est, in utero virginis de Spiritu S. fuisse conceptum, sed postea Deum homini fuisse permixtum, etc. Such were the sources from which the middle ages drew their ideas of Nestorianism.

Maraccius, and others) reckoned it to be a mere dispute of words. So also P. E. Jablonski de Nestorianismo. Berol. 1724. 8, and Chr. A. Salig de Eutychnismo ante Eutychem. to the doctrinal system of Theodore, and their aversion to the council of Cyril at Ephesus. The successor of Rabulas in Edessa, Ibas, (bishop from 436 to 457) was indeed, though at peace with Cyril, a zealous friend of the views of the Antiochian theology, and even translated Theodore's works into Syriac; but persecution was afterward renewed against the adherents of these principles; the school of Edessa was destroyed (489); and its few remaining friends fled into Persia. The Persian church had now broken off all connection with the church of the Roman empire, and the kings of Persia from Pherozes onward (461—488) favored this separation for political reasons. These Christians, who had the bishop of Seleucia and Ctesiphon as their Catholicus (Jacelich), were called by their opponents Nestorians, though they called themselves Chaldaean Christians, and in India Thomas-Christians. They have not only diffused themselves extensively in Asia, but have also acquired great merit by conveying much of the learning of Greece into that part of the world, as well as by founding schools and hospitals. At a later period they became the instructors of the Arabians.³³

tures; while the orientals, in the doctrine of one nature discovered Apollinarianism.³ The former party, however, continued to be favored by the court; and of this favor Cyril's successor, the violent Dioscurus (bishop from 444 till 451) availed himself extensively for the purpose of putting down the most zealous oriental bishops as Nestorians, and of forcing the Egyptian doctrines on the east.⁴

On the other hand, a zealous adherent of Cyril, the old Archimandrite (abbot) Eutyches in Constantinople⁵ was accused of holding these very doctrines, and condemned at a σύνοδος ἐν δημοῦσα by his bishop Flavian (448).⁶ Leo, bishop of Rome,

A copious declaration in Acacii Epist. ad Successum (in the Synod. Mansi, v. 999. Schulze, v. 881). Ex. gr.: Videmus, quod is qui ex Deo patre est sermo, inhumanatus est et incarnatus, et non sibi ex divina natura sanctum illud corpus plasmavit, sed magis ex virgine id accepit. Alioquin quomodo factus est homo, nisi quia corpus portavit humanum? Advertentes igitur, ut dixi, inhumanationis modum, videmus, quia duae naturae ad invicem conveniunt unionem indisrumpibili, inconfuse atque inconvertibiliter. Et ex duabus naturis factum fuisse dicentes, veruntamen post unionem non dividimus naturas ab invicem, nec in duos incidemus Christum sed unum asserimus filium, et ut patres dixerunt, unam naturam verbi incarnatam. Ergo factus est homo, non hominem recepit, ut videtur Nestorio. Eranistes in Theodoretii Dial. ii. (ed. not only approved of this proceeding, but in his *Epistola ad Flavianum*⁷ gave also a doctrinal development of the disputed point, λοιδορίας. To the question, p. 741: 'Ὁμολογεῖς ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον τῇ μητρὶ κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα τὸν αὐτὸν ἓνα νῆον τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. He answers: 'Ἐπειδὴ ὁμολογῶ θεόν μου, καὶ κύριον οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ἕως σήμερον φυσιολογεῖν ἐμαυτῷ οὐκ ἐπιτρέπω. ὁμοούσιον δὲ ἡμῖν ἕως νῦν οὐκ εἶπον πρὸ τούτου, ὁμολογῶ. ἕως σήμερον οὐκ εἶπον τὸ σῶμα τοῦ κυρίου καὶ θεοῦ ἡμῶν ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν, τὴν δὲ ἄγίαν παρθένον ὁμολογῶ εἶναι ἡμῖν ὁμοούσιον, καὶ ὅτι ἐξ αὐτῆς ἐσαρκώθη ὁ θεὸς ἡμῶν. When the remark was made upon this: Τῆς μητρὸς ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν οὐσίας, πάντως καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ὁμοούσιος ἡμῖν ἐστίν, he rejoined: "Ἐως σήμερον οὐκ εἶπον· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ σῶμα θεοῦ αὐτὸ ὁμολογῶ (προσέσχευς), οὐκ εἶπον σῶμα ἀνθρώπου τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ σῶμα, ἀνθρώπινον δὲ τὸ σῶμα, καὶ ὅτι ἐκ τῆς παρθένου ἐσαρκώθη ὁ κύριος. εἰ δὲ δεῖ εἰπεῖν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν, καὶ τοῦτο λέγω, κύριε. To the question, p. 744: 'Ὁμοούσιον, καὶ ἐκ δύο φύσεων μετὰ τὴν ἐνανθρώπησιν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου λέγεις ἢ οὐ, he gave the reply in explanation: 'Ὁμολογῶ ἐκ δύο φύσεων γεγενῆσθαι τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν πρὸ τῆς ἐνώσεως· μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἔνωσιν, μίαν φύσιν ὁμολογῶ. which was by no means favorable to the Egyptians. It is true that Dioscurus now procured the summoning of a general synod at Ephesus (449) and there, as president, compelled by violent measures the bishops to pronounce in favor of Eutyches and the Egyptian doctrines (σύνοδος ληστροική, Theophanis Chronograph. p. 86.—Latrocinium Ephesinum, Leo ad Pulcheriam Ep. 75, ed. Quesnel);⁸ but the death of Theodosius II. († 450) altered at once the state of affairs. The new rulers Pulcheria and Marcian, who was elevated to the throne by marrying her, were as partial to Leo as they were hostile to Dioscurus.⁹ Hence, a new general council was called at Chalcedon (451), at which Dioscurus was deposed for many misdeeds, the persecuted eastern bishops, and with them Cyril, too,¹⁰ for the purpose of sparing the Egyptians, were declared orthodox, Leo's Epist. ad Flavianum, made the rule of faith on the point in dispute, and at the same time a more minute explanation of it given on the part of the council.¹¹ But though the decrees of the synod reet humilitas hominis et altitudo Deitatis. Sicut enim Deus non mutatur miseratione, ita homo non consumitur dignitate. Agit enim utraque forma cum alterius communione quod proprium est: Verbo scilicet operante, quod Verbi est, et carne exequente quod carnis est. Unum horum coruscet miraculis, aliud succumbit injuriis. Et sicut Verbum ab aequalitate paternae gloriae non recedit, ita caro naturam nostri generis non relinquit. Unus enim idemque est, quod saepe dicendum est, vere Dei filius et vere hominis filius. Quem itaque sicut hominem diabolica tentat astutia, eidem sicut Deo angelica famulantur officia. Esurire. sitire, lassescere, atque dormire evidentur humanaum est. Sed v. paucibus v. millia hominum satiari, et largiri Samaritanae aquam vivam, cujus haustus bibenti praestet, ne ultra jam sitiatur; supra dorsum maris plantis non desidentibus ambulare, et elationes fluctuum increpata tempestate consternere: sine ambiguitate divinum est. Sicut ergo, ut multa praeteream, non ejusdem naturae est, fieri miserationis affectu amicum mortuum, et eundem remoto quadriduanae aggere sepulturae, ad vocis imperium excitare redivivum: ita non ejusdem naturae est, dicere: Ego et pater unum sumus (Jo. x. 30) et dicere: Pater major me est (Jo. xiv. 28). ⁹ The Alexandrian Sophronius even accused Dioscurus in Chalcedon of having opposed the acknowledgment of Marcian in Egypt (Mansi, vi. 1033), εαυτὸν γὰρ μᾶλλον βασιλεύειν ἤθελε τῆς Αἰγυπτιακῆς διοικήσεως. No notice, however, was taken of this accusation by the synod, nor is there a trace of it to be found elsewhere.

OF THE THEOLOGICAL AUTHORITY OF THE OECUMENICAL SYNODS.

In this period the utterances of the oecumenical councils,¹ as the last and highest ecclesiastical decisions, began to assume an important place among the sources of theological knowledge. As all synods prior to the present time were supposed to be under the peculiar direction of the Holy Spirit, without on that account claiming infallibility,² so also the doctrinal decisions of general councils were derived from a special co-operation of the Holy Spirit,³ but so far were men as yet from attributing to them see the protocol actio v. ap. Mansi. vii. 97, ss.—P. 108: 'Ὁρος τῆς ἐν Χαλκηδόνι τετάρτης Συνόδου. That the true reading must be ἐν δύο φύσεσι (as all the Latins have in duabus naturis) is shown by Mansi, vii. 775. Walch. Bibl. symb. vetus, p. 106, to which we have also to add the testimonies of the Monophysite Severus Patr. Ant. (ap. Mansi, vii. 840), Evagrius, H. E. ii. c. 4. Leontius Bys. de Sectis. Actio, v. c. 7. Agathonis P. Ep. ad Constantem II. (in the Act. Conc. oecum. vi. Act. 4, ap. Mansi, xi. 256). Baur's Dreieinigkeit, i. 820, defends the reading ἐκ. δ. φ.

² According to Acts xv. 28. Conc. Carthag. ann. 253 (in Opp. Cypriani): Placuit nobis sancto Spiritu suggerente et Domino per visiones multas et manifestas admonente. To what an extent this form of speech proceeded may be seen in Concil. Ephes. ann. 431, above, § 88, note 27. But in a similar formula spake also a partial council at Constantinople, which condemned Eutyches. See above, § 89, note 6.

Ep. 99, calls the Nicene council θεόθεν ἐμπνευσθεῖσα.

⁴ Epist. Synodi Nicaene ad Alexandrinos (Theodoret. i. 8) in fine: Εὐχέσθε δὲ καὶ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ὑπάντων, ἵνα τὰ καλῶς ἔχειν δόξαντα βέβαια μένοι διὰ τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, κατ' εὐδοκίαν γεγεννημένα, ὡς γε πεπιστεύκαμεν, τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. In Socrates, i. c. 9 this passage has been altered. ⁵ Constantinus Epist. ad Episcopos, qui Conc. Nicaeno non interfuerunt (Euseb. de vita Const. iii. 20, and Socrates, i. 9) says generally: Πᾶν γὰρ, εἴ τι δ' ἂν ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις τῶν ἐπισκόπων συνεδρίοις πράττηται, τοῦτο πρὸς τὴν θεῖαν βούλησιν ἔχει τὴν ἀναφοράν. Thus Athanasius places the Concil. Antiochen. A.D. 269, to which his opponents appealed in defense of their rejection of the term ὁμοούσιον, on an equality with the Nicene in point of theological authority. De Synodis, c. 43: Συγκροεῖν μὲν γὰρ τούτους πρὸς ἐκείνους ἄπρεπές· πάντες γὰρ εἰσι πατέρες· διακρίνειν δὲ πάλιν, ὡς οὗτοι μὲν καλῶς, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ τούναντιον εἰρήκασιν, οὐχ ὅσιον· οἱ πάντες γὰρ ἐκοιμήθησαν ἐν Χριστῷ. Οὐ χρὴ δὲ φιλονεικεῖν, οὐδὲ τῶν συνελθόντων τὸν ἀριθμὸν συμβάλλειν, ἵνα μὴ δοκῶσιν οἱ τριακόσιοι τοὺς ἐλάττωνας ἐπικρύπτειν· οὐδ' ἂν πάλιν τὸν χρόνον ἀναμετρεῖν, ἵνα μὴ δοκῶσιν οἱ προλαβόντες ὑφάνιζειν τοὺς μετὰ ταῦτα γενομένους· οἱ πάντες γὰρ καθὰ προεῖρηται πατέρες εἰσὶ.

GROWING IMPORTANCE OF THE CLERGY.

The Christian emperors enlarged the privileges already granted by Constantine to the church and the clergy (Div. I. § 56, note 30, ff.), by new tokens of their favor. They released church lands and the clergy from certain civil liabilities,¹ but by no means from all taxes;² gave a legal confirmation to the decisions which the bishops pronounced in ecclesiastical affairs,³ and which they also gave as chosen umpires in civil disputes,⁴

¹ Besides the municipal offices (see Div. I. § 56, note 30), both the clergy and church property were freed from the muneribus sordidis and extraordinariis (cf. Cod. Theod. lib. xi. tit. 15, de extraordinariis sive sordidis muneribus and Gothofredi paratitlon), from the metatis (Cod. Th. l. vii. t. 8, de metatis), the angariis and parangariis (Cod. Th. l. vii. t. 5, de cursu publico, angariis et parangariis), and finally the immunity of the clerici negotiantes from the lustralis conlatio (Cod. Th. l. xiii. t. 1, de lustrali conlatio comp. Hege- wisch Hist. Versuch über die röm. Finanzen, S. 307, ff.). Comp. besides the works cited Cod. Theod. l. xvi. ii. 8, 19, etc. Comp. Binghami Orig. eccl. vol. ii. p. 227. Planck, i. 289.

⁴ Respecting these episcopal arbitration-decisions comp. Div. I. § 69, note 6. It had been always reckoned unchristian to depart from them, and thus public opinion demanded for them the preference, so that they laid the foundation of an actio rei judicatae. This privilege has been usually ascribed to Constantine, with reference to Eusebius de vita Const. iv. 27: Τούς τῶν ἐπισκόπων ὄρους τούς ἐν συνόδοις ἀποφανθέντας ἐπεσφραγίζετο allowed the clergy to be bound by these judicial decisions,⁵ and even put them in cases of discipline under spiritual courts,⁶ without however conceding to the bishops a civil jurisdiction.⁷

ὡς μὴ ἐξεῖναι τοῖς τῶν ἐθνῶν ἄρχουσι, τὰ δόξαντα παραλύειν· παντὸς γὰρ εἶναι δικαστοῦ τοῖς ἱερεῖς τοῦ θεοῦ δοκιμωτέρους: in which σύνοδος according to Conc. Carthag. iv. c. 23 (see Div. I. § 69, note 11) is understood of the presbytery. These arbitrations, however were not pronounced by the collegia, but by the bishop, and by him sometimes committed to individual presbyters and deacons; by Sylvanus bishop of Troas, even wholly to an honest layman (Socrates, vii. 37); see Bingham. vol. i. p. 130; and thus that passage appears to refer to the decisions and sentences of the provincial synods. Sozomen i. c. 9 is indeed more distinct: Τῶν δὲ Ἐπισκόπων ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὴν κρίσιν ἐπέτρεψε (Κωνσταντῖνος) τοῖς δικαζομένοις, ἣν βούλωνται τοὺς πολιτικούς ἄρχοντας παραιτεῖσθαι· κυρίαν δὲ εἶναι τὴν αὐτῶν ψήφον, καὶ κρείττω τῆς τῶν ἄλλων δικαστῶν, ὡσαυεὶ παρὰ τοῦ Βασιλέως ἐξενεχθεῖσαν· εἰς ἔργον δὲ τὰ κρινόμενα ἄγειν τοὺς ἄρχοντας, καὶ τοὺς διακονομένους αὐτοῖς στρατιώτας· ἀμετατρέπτους ■ εἶναι τῶν Συνόδων τοὺς ὄρους. Still this seems to be only an amplified interpretation of that passage in Eusebius. The oldest law extant on the subject is A.D. 408 (Cod. Justin. i. iv. 8). Honor. et Theod. AA. Theodoro P. P. Episcopale iudicium ratum sit omnibus, qui se audiri a Sacerdotibus elegerint: eamque illorum iudicationi adhibendam esse reverentiam iubemus, quam vestris deferri necesse est potestatibus, a quibus non licet provocare. Per iudicium quoque Officia, ne sit cassa episcopalis cognitio, definitioni executio tribuatur. Cf. Augustin. in Psalm xxv. § 13 (about 415): Principes saeculi tantum detulerunt Ecclesiae, ut quidquid in ea iudicatum fuerit, dissolvi non possit. But as a like privilege was granted to the Jewish patriarchs as early as 398 (Cod. Theod. ii. i. 10), we may fairly assume that the Christian bishops also were earlier possessed of it. H. M. ⁵ Conc. Carthag. iii. ann. 397, c. 9: Item placuit, ut quisquis Episcoporum, Presbyterorum, et Diaconorum, seu Clericorum, cum in Ecclesia ei crimen fuerit intentatum, vel civilis causa fuerit commota, si relicto ecclesiastico iudicio, publicis iudiciis purgari voluerit, etiamsi pro ipso fuerit prolata sententia, locum suum amittat, et hoc in criminali iudicio. In civili vero perdat quod evicit, si locum suum obtinere voluerit. Cui enim ad eligendos iudices undique patet auctoritas, ipse se indignum fraterno consortio iudicat, qui de universa Ecclesia male sentiendo de iudicio seculari poscit auxilium, cum privatorum Christianorum causas Apostolus ad Ecclesiam deferri, atque ibi terminari praecipiat. Conc. Chalced. c. 9: Εἰ τις κληρικὸς πρὸς κληρικὸν πρᾶγμα ἔχει, μὴ καταλιπαρᾷ τὸν οἰκεῖον Ἐπίσκοπον, καὶ ἐπὶ κοσμικῇ δικαστήρια κατατρέχέτω.—εἰ δὲ τις παρὰ ταῦτα ποιῆσει, κανονικοῖς ὑποκείσθω ἐπιτιμίοις.

⁷ The limits of episcopalis audientia are definitely given by Valentiniiani iii. novella de episcopali iudicio A.D. 442, (ed. Gothofred. nov. Val. tit. xii. ed. Haenell nov. xxxiv.): De episcopali iudicio diversorum saepe causatio est. Ne ulterius querela procedat, necesse est praesenti lege sanciri. Itaque cum inter clericos iurgium vertitur, et ipsis litigatoribus

But the old ecclesiastical rights of the clergy, particularly the right of superintending morals, and the duty of interference on behalf of all the unfortunate, received quite another importance after they had been recognized by the state, by the elevation of Christianity into the state religion. The persons of magistrates also now became subject to them as inspectors of the public morals; yea, even the emperors themselves, as far as they were Christians; and the duty of interference on behalf convenit. habeat, Episcopus licentiam judicandi, praeunte tamen vinculo compromissi. Quod et laicis, si consentiant, auctoritas nostra permittit. Aliter eos judices esse non patimur, nisi voluntas jurgantium interposita, sicut dictum est, conditione praecedat: quoniam constat, Episcopos et Presbyteros foram legibus non habere, nec de aliis causis, secundum Arcadii et Honorii divalia constituta, quae Theodosianum corpus ostendit, praeter religionem, posse cognoscere. Sin vero petitor laicus, seu in civili seu criminali causa, cujuslibet loci Clericum adversarium suum, si id magis eligat, per auctoritatem legitimam in publico judicio respondere compellat. Quam formam etiam circa Episcoporum personam observari oportere censemus. Ut si in hujuscemodi ordinis homines actionem pervasionis et atrocium injuriarum dirigi necesse fuerit, per procuratorem solemniter ordinatum apud judicem publicum inter leges et jura configant, judicati exitu ad mandatos sine dubio reversuro. Quod iis religionis et sacerdotii veneratione permittimus. Nam notum est, procuracionem in criminalibus negotiis non posse concedi. Sed ut sit ulla discretio meritorum, Episcopis et Presbyteris tantum id oportet impendi. In reliquis negotiis criminalibus juxta legum ordinem per se judicium subire coguntur.

⁸ Conc. Arelatense, ann. 314, c. 7: De praesidibus, qui fideles ad praesidatum prosiliunt, placuit ut, cum promoti fuerint, literas accipiant ecclesiasticas communicatorias (Comp. Div. I. § 41, note 5): Ita tamen ut in quibuscunque locis gesserint, ab Episcopo ejusdem loci cura de illis agatur, et cum coeperint contra diciplinam agere, tum demum a communione excludantur. Similiter et de his qui rempublicam agere volunt. Gregor. Naz. Orat. xvii. p. 271, thus addresses the δυνάσται καὶ ἄρχοντες: ὁ τοῦ Χριστοῦ νόμος ὑποτίθησιν ὑμᾶς τῇ ἐμῇ δυναστείᾳ καὶ τῷ ἐμῷ βήματι ἄρχομεν γὰρ καὶ αὐτοὶ, προσθήσω δ' ὅτι καὶ τὴν μείζονα καὶ τελειωτέραν ἄρχήν. ἢ δεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα ὑποχωρῆσαι τῇ σαρκί, καὶ τοῖς γηϊνοῖς τὰ ἐπουράνια; Thus Athanasius excommunicated a governor of Libya on account of cruelty and excesses; and Basil the Great assures him (Ep. 61,) after he had made known this excommunication in his church, ὑποτρόπαιον αὐτὸν πάντες ἠγήσονται, μὴ πυρὸς, μὴ ὕδατος, μὴ σκέπης αὐτῇ κοινωνοῦντες. Comp. the excommunication which Synesius bishop of Ptolemais, uttered against the prefect Andronicas, Synesii Epist. 58: Ἀνδρονίκω καὶ τοῖς αὐτοῦ μηδὲν ἀνοιγνέσθω πέμενος τοῦ θεοῦ· ἅπας αὐτοῖς ἱερὸς ἀποκεκλείσθω καὶ σῆκόσω καὶ περίβολος· οὐκ ἔστι τῷ Διαβόλῳ, μέρος ἐν Παραδείσῳ ὅς κἀν λάθῃ διαδῆς, ἐξελαύνεται. Παραιῶ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἰδιώτῃ παντὶ καὶ ἄρχοντι, μήτε ὁμορόφιον αὐτῷ, μήτε ὁμοτρέπεζον γίνεσθαι· ἱερεῦσι δὲ διαφερόντως, οἱ μήτε ζῶντας αὐτοὺς προσεροῦσι, μήτε τελευτήσαντας συμπροπέμψουσιν, κ. τ. λ. Cf. Clausen de Synesio. Hafn. 1831. 8, p. 152, ss. The bishops of Alexandria, in particular, made themselves objects of fear to the officials of that place. Cyril obtained this see by fighting, although the leader of the army there was against him. Socrates vii. 7: Καὶ γὰρ ἐξ ἐκείνου ἡ Ἐπισκοπὴ Ἀλεξανδρείας παρὰ τῆς ἱερατικῆς τάξεως κατὰδυναστεύειν τῶν πραγμάτων ἔλαβε τὴν ἄρχήν. Comp. Socrates, vii. c. 13, on the disputes between Cyril and Orestes, prefect of Egypt: Ὁρέστης δὲ καὶ πρότερον μὲν ἱμῖσι τὴν δυναστείαν τῶν ἐπισκόπων, ὅτι παρηροῦντο πολὺ τῆς ἐξουσίας τῶν ἐκ βασιλείως ἄρχειν τεταγμένων· μάλιστα δὲ ὅτι καὶ ἐποπτεύειν αὐτοῦ τὰς διατυπώσεις· Κύριλλος ἐβούλετο.—Theodosius I. was compelled to do penance by Ambrose (Rufinus, xi. 18; Sozom. vii. 25; Theodoret. v. 17. Comp. Neander's K. G. ii. i. 384). Of Theodosius II. Theodoret, v. 36, relates that a monk came to him, περὶ τινος δέμενος, ἐπειδὴ δὲ τοῦτο δράσας πολλῶν οὐκ ἔτυχε, τῆς ἐκκλησιαστικῆς αὐτὸν κοινωνίας ἐκώλυσε, καὶ τὸν δεσμῶν of the unfortunate established a right of intercession with the civil power,⁹ which often exhibited itself in a very stormy way in cases where the punishment of death, which the Christians of that time regarded with horror, was decreed.¹⁰ In like manner the acknowledgment of this right of the clergy facilitated the transfer of the right of asylum from heathen temples to the Christian churches.¹¹ All these rights had long since grown

Cap. 29: Egregie hinc vestrum enitescit ministerium, si suscepta impressio potentis, quam vel vidua vel orphani tolerare non queant, Ecclesiae subsidio cohibeatur, si ostendatis plus apud vos mandatum Domini, quam divitis valere gratiam. ¹⁰ Macedonius, vicar of the diocese of Africa, writes respecting it to Augustine (August. Ep. 152): Officium sacerdotii vestri esse dicitis intervenire pro reis, et nisi obtineatis, offendi, quasi quod erat officii vestri, minime reportetis. Hic ergo vehementer ambigo, utrum istud ex religione descendat. Nam si a Domino peccata adeo prohibentur, ut ne poenitendi quidem copia post primum tribuatur; quemadmodum nos possumus ex religione contendere, ut nobis quaecumque illud erimen fuerit, dimittatur? quod utique, cum impunitum volumus, probamus, etc. To this Augustine replies, Ep. 153, ex. gr. § 3: Morum corrigendorum nullus alius quam in hac vita locus est.—Ideo compellimur humani generis caritate intervenire pro reis, ne istam vitam sic finiant per supplicium, ut ea finita non possint finire supplicium. Noli ergo dubitare hoc officium nostrum ex religione descendere, etc. Comp. the intercession for the Circumcelliones who were to have been executed for murders, August. Ep. 133, ad Marcellinum Tribunum: Si non audis amicum petentem, audi Episcopum consulentem. Quamvis quoniam Christiano loquar, maxime in tali causa, non arroganter dixerim, audire te Episcopum convenit jubentem. Against violent interferences of the clergy, as they took place for example in Antioch (Chrysostomi Ep. ad Olympiadem and Orat. ad popul. Antioch. 17.) Theodosius I. A. D. 392, and Arcadius, A. D. 398, enacted laws (Cod. Theod. ix. xl. 15 and 16.) The latter: Ad dictos supplicio, et pro criminum immanitate damnatos, nulli Clericorum vel Monachorum—per vim atque usurpationem vindicare liceat ac tenere. Quibus in causa criminali humanitatis consideratione, et tempora suffragantur, interponendae provocationis copiam non negamus.—Reos tempore provocationis emenso ad locum poenae sub prosecutione pergentes, nullus aut teneat aut defendat.—Si tanta Clericorum ac Monachorum audacia est, ut bellum potius quam judicium futurum esse existimetur, ad Clementiam Nostram commissa referantur, ut nostro mox severior ultio procedat arbitrio. Ad Episcoporum sane culpam redundabit, si quid forte in ea parte regionis, in qua ipsi populo christianae religionis, doctrinae insinuatione, moderantur, ex his quae fieri hac lege prohibemus, a Monachis perpetratum esse cognoverint, nec vindicaverint.

naturally out of the old ecclesiastical notions before the emperors began to confirm them severally by laws.¹²

On the other side, ecclesiastical possessions became very considerable, partly by the liberality of the emperors,¹³ partly by the legal permission to accept of inheritances and gifts, which alas, was often abused by the clergy, so as to become legacy-hunting.¹⁴ All these external advantages attracted many to the spiritual profession,¹⁵ the number of clergy was swelled beyond measure, and to the already existing classes were added parabolani, copiatae.¹⁶ The emperors were obliged to meet this

pressure, which became dangerous to the state, with stringent laws.¹⁷

Under these circumstances the power of the bishops particularly rose. At the head of a numerous clergy completely subject to them, they alone had power to decide on the appropriation of the church estates,¹⁸ and controlled ecclesiastical legislation by their exclusive privilege of having a voice at synods. Hence they continued to make the country bishops more subservient to them;¹⁹ to the other churches in cities and in the country (ecclesia plebana, titulus), except the head church (eccl. cathedralis) they sent according to their own free choice, presbyters (parochus, plebanus),²⁰ to conduct the worship of God, who were entirely dependent on them even in the matter of maintenance. The first person next to the bishop was the archdeacon,²¹ who helped him to manage the revenues. The arch-presbyters,²² an order which arose about the same time, were of far inferior rank. All the lower clergy and the presby-

Theod.* xvi. ii. 3): Nullum deinceps Decurionis, vel ex Decurione progenitum, vel etiam instructum idoneis facultatibus, atque obeundis publicis muneribus opportunum, ad Clericorum nomen obsequiumque confugere: sed eos de cetero in defunctorum duntaxat Clericorum loca subrogari, qui fortuna tenues, neque muneribus civilibus teneantur obstricti. Constantius allowed in 361 (Cod. Th. xii. i. 49) every curialis admission into the clerical office, curia promente consensus, maxime si totius populi vocibus expetatur: otherwise he should give over his property to his children, or relatives, or the senate. This resigning of goods became afterward a general law (Cod. Th. xii. i. 59, 99, 104, 115, 121, 123, 163, 172, etc.). Riffel, i. 164.

¹⁹ See Div. I. § 68, note 2. Conc. Antioch. ann. 341, can. 10: Τοὺς χωρεπισκόπους, εἰ καὶ χειροθεσίαν εἶεν ἐπισκόπων εὐληφότες, ἔδοξε τῇ ἁγίᾳ συνόδῳ—καθιστᾶν ἀναγνώστας καὶ ὑποδιακόνους καὶ ἐφορκιστὰς,—μήτε δὲ πρεσβύτερον μήτε διάκονον χειροτονεῖν τομῶν δίχα τοῦ ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐπισκόπου, ἢ ὑπόκειται αὐτὸς τε καὶ ἡ χώρα,—χωρεπίσκοπον δὲ γίνεσθαι ὑπὸ τοῦ τῆς πόλεως, ἢ ὑπόκειται, ἐπισκόπου. Conc. Laodiceni (between 320 and 372) Can. 57: Ὅτι οὐ δεῖ ἐν ταῖς κόμαις, καὶ ἐν ταῖς χώραις καθιστασθαι ἐπισκόπους, ἢ ἀλλὰ περιουθεντῶν· τοὺς μέντοι ἤδη προκατασταθέντας μηδὲν πράττειν ἄνευ γνώμης τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τοῦ ἐν τῇ πόλει. Ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους μηδὲν πράττειν ἄνευ τῆς γνώμης τοῦ ἐπισκόπου. Probably it was not meant by this canon to do away with the existing country bishops, but only to prevent the establishment of new bishoprics. Accordingly we find frequent mention of country bishops long after. Basil the Great had fifty in his diocese (Gregor. Naz. de vita sua, p. 8), Theodoret, Ep. 113, names two of his suburbans, etc.

ters too were now chosen by the bishop alone. The choice of bishops mostly depended on the other bishops of the provinces, except when the emperors interfered. Still, however, the consent of the people was required, and was not without weight, especially in the west.²³

Under these external advantages, it is not surprising that the prevailing notions of priestly dignity, and especially of the bishops' authority rose higher and higher; and that the bishops externally enjoyed the highest demonstrations of respect, their claims as the vicars of Christ and the successors of the apostles being capable of indefinite development.²⁴ Yet their overweening pride often gave just cause for complaint²⁵

²³ The bishop was chosen Ἐπισκόπων συνέδω, ψήφω κληρικῶν, αἰτῆσει λαῶν (Petri Alex. Epist. in Theodoretī H. E. iv. 19). The person elected by the clergy was either accepted by the voice of the people crying out Ἄξιος, bene meritus, bene dignus; or they cried Ἀνάξιος (Augustini Epist. 110. Philostorgius, ix. 10. Constitut. Apost. viii. 4). Leo Epist. 10, c. 3: Qui praefturus est omnibus, ab omnibus eligatur. Thomassini, p. ii. lib. 2, c. 2 and 3. Bingham, vol. ii. p. 90, ss. Staudenmaier's *Gesch. d. ²⁴ The assertion, so pregnant with consequences, that the priesthood stands above royalty, in which during the third century nothing but a secret pride could take delight (Div. I. § 69, note 1), was not only repeated (see Chrysost. Homil. 4, de verbis Isaiaae, de Sacerdotio, iii. c. 1, Homil. 15, in Epist. ii. ad Corinth. comp. Gregor. Naz. above, note 8), but was now also outwardly manifested in the conduct. Standing titles of the bishops were Domīnus beatissimus (comp. Wiggers' Augustinismus, ii. 37) or sanctissimus, reverendissimus, δεσπότης ὀσιώτατος, αἰδεσιμώτατος, Beatitudo, Sanctitas tua, ἡ σὴ χρηστότης, μακαριότης or ἁγιότης. Marks of reverence which were paid them even by emperors were the ὑποκλίνειν κεφαλὴν and καταφιλεῖν τὰς χεῖρας. See Bingham, vol. i. p. 134. When Eusebia, spouse of the emperor Constantius, did not observe such things in receiving the salutations of the bishops, the Eusebian bishop of Tripolis, Leontius, declared to her (Philostorgius, ap. Suidam, s. v. Λεόντιος), that he would appear before her only under the following conditions: Ἴν' εἰσέλθοιμι μὲν ἐγὼ, σὺ δ' αὐτίκα τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ ὑψηλοῦ κατὰβασα, μετ' αἰδοῦς ὑπαντήσεαις ἐμοί, καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ὑπόσχῃς ταῖς ἐμαῖς χερσίν, εὐλογιῶν ἄξιουμένην· κάπειτα καθεσθείην μὲν ἂν ἐγὼ, σὺ δ' ἂν ἐσθήκοις αἰδομένην, ὅπταν δὲ κελεύσαιμι, καθεδουμένην, ἡνίκα δοίην τὸ σύνθημα. Εἰ οὕτως αἰρήσῃ, ἀφικοίμην παρά σε, κ. τ. λ. Comp. the conduct of bishop Martinus at the court of Maximus. At table the emperor ordered the cup to be first presented to him (Sulp. Severus de vita Mart. c. 20), expectans atque ambiens, ut ab illius dextera poculum sumeret. Sed Martinus ubi ebibit, pateram presbytero suo tradidit, nullum scilicet existimans digniorem, qui post se biberet. At another time the empress waited on him at table (Sulp. Severi Dial. ii. 6). Comp. generally: Chrysost. de Sacerdotio. The work de Dignitate, found among the writings of Ambrose, is not by him, but by Gerbert (Sylvester II. about 1000). See Mabillon Analecta, p. 103.

DEPENDENCE OF THE HIERARCHY ON THE STATE.

Notwithstanding these outward honors enjoyed by the hierarchy, they could the less escape from a dependence on the state in many ways,¹ as they presented a vulnerable side to it by their acquisition of property;² and as the government of the Roman emperors, since the removal of their residence to the east, began to assume an oriental despotic character.³

The first occasion of interference in ecclesiastical matters was offered by the hierarchy itself when involved in an uninterrupted series of controversies.⁴ The emperors wished, and also ought, according to the desire of the hierarchy, to tolerate only the catholic church;⁵ but as this name was claimed exclusively by so many parties, the emperors were obliged to decide to which it belonged, and what doctrine accordingly should be considered the catholic doctrine.⁶ To this end they summoned councils, allowing them to consult under the superintendence of their commissioners;⁷ and then gave imperial confirmation to their

Besides these great party questions, individuals among the clergy had also many particular cases in which the interference of the emperors was solicited, although councils soon forbade

were distinguished from the other metropolitans by having several provinces under their oversight. This institution came up for discussion at the council of Nice, probably on occasion of the Meletian schism in Egypt; and was confirmed by the 6th can.¹ At the same time provincial synods were still acknowledged at this council as the highest ecclesiastical authority.²

But during the subsequent Arian commotions, the provincial synods were too weak to be able to withstand, in the eternal party-strife, powerful opponents who were often supported by state authority. By this means the bishops were induced to form still larger hierarchical associations by which they might individually obtain greater security. In the political, often ecclesiastical separation of the east and west, this new hierarchical development proceeded in a different mode in the two empires.

² Can. Nic. 4 confirms to the provincial synod its influence in the election of bishops. Canon 5 recognizes it as the highest court of appeal in cases of excommunication. Conc. Antioch. ann. 341, c. 15: Εἰ τις ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ τισιν ἐγκλήμασιν κατηγορηθεὶς, κριθεὶς ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν ἐν τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ ἐπισκόπων, πάντες τε σύμφωνοι μίαν κατ' αὐτοῦ ἐξευέγκωιν ψῆφον τοῦτον μηκέτι παρ' ἑτέροις δικάζεσθαι, ἄλλὰ μένειν βεβαίαν τὴν σύμφωνον τῶν ἐπὶ ἐπαρχίας ἐπισκόπων ἀπόφασιν. In case of division among the provincial bishops, the metropolitan, according to canon 14, is empowered to summon bishops from the neighboring province.

In the east, the political division of the provinces had been followed from the first in the development of the metropolitan institution, and the fundamental principle became more and more established, that the ecclesiastical should constantly follow the political division of provinces.³ Accordingly, in the formation of larger hierarchical bodies,⁴ they adhered to the political distribution of the realm into dioceses, which had been made by Constantine.⁵ The bishops of every diocese became more closely connected with each other; the bishop of the chief city in the diocese was their common president, and was elevated by this means above the other metropolitans. Yet his rights were defined according to earlier ecclesiastical relations, and for this reason were not alike in all dioceses. In Egypt, the bishop of Alexandria had almost monarchical power;⁶ the power of the bishop of Antioch in the east was less;⁷ less still was that of

³ Conf. Conc. Antiochen. can. 9, see Div. I. § 68, note 4. When Cappadocia was divided into two provinces, A.D. 371, Basil was disposed to resist the application of this principle against the bishop of Tyana, Gregor. Naz. Orat. xliiii. c. 58 (ed. Coloni, Orat. xx. p. 355). Ullmann's Gregorius v. Naz. S. 118, ff. On the other hand, Conc. the bishop of Ephesus in the Asiatic, and that of the bishop of Caesarea Cappadociae, in the Pontian diocese. In the Thracian diocese, Constantinople had become the political capital instead of Heraclea, and as it was also the chief city of the empire, the power of the bishop of Constantinople, supported by his influence with the emperor, and the consent of the numerous bishops who were always assembled at court (σύνοδος ἐνδημοῦσα),⁸ soon extended far beyond the Thracian diocese; but the degree of power depended very much on the personal relations of the reigning patriarch. Such was the state of things when the second general council (381), approved of those relations between the bishops of one diocese (can. 2), elevated the diocesan synods above the provincial synods so as to be the highest ecclesiastical court (can. 6), and gave the bishop of Constantinople the first rank after the bishop of Rome (can. 3).⁹

Thus in the east the bishops of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Ephesus, and Caesarea, had obtained an important elevation above the other metropolitans, for they had subjected to themselves the other metropolitans of their dioceses. They received the distinctive names: Ἐξάρχος, Ἀρχιεπίσκοπος,¹⁰ and shortly before the council of Chalcedon, the appellation Πατρι-

⁹ Canon II.: Τοὺς ὑπὲρ διοίκησιν ἐπισκόπους ταῖς ὑπερορίοις ἐκκλησίαις μὴ ἐπιέναι, μηδὲ συγγέειν τὰς ἐκκλησίας· ἄλλὰ κατὰ τοὺς κανόνας τὸν μὲν Ἀλεξανδρείας ἐπίσκοπον τὰ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ μόνον οἰκονομεῖν· τοὺς δὲ τῆς Ἀνατολῆς ἐπισκόπους τὴν Ἀνατολὴν μόνην διοικεῖν, φυλαττομένων τῶν ἐν τοῖς κανόσι τοῖς κατὰ Νικαίαν πρεσβείων τῇ Ἀντιοχείῳ ἐκκλησίᾳ· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Ἀσιανῆς διοικήσεως ἐπισκόπους τὰ κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν μόνην οἰκονομεῖν· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Ποντικῆς τὴν τῆς Ποντικῆς μόνον· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Θρακίης τὴν τῆς Θρακικῆς μόνον οἰκονομεῖν. Canon III.: Τὸν μόντοι Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἐπίσκοπον ἔχειν τὰ πρεσβεία τῆς τιμῆς μετὰ τὸν τῆς Ρώμης ἐπίσκοπον, διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτὴν νέαν Ῥώμην. (Cf. P. de Marca de Constantinopolitani Patriarchatus institutione (in Boehmer's edition, p. 155, ss.) Canon VI.: Εἰ δὲ συμβαίῃ ἄδυνατῆσαι τοὺς ἐπαρχιώτας πρὸς διόρθωσιν τῶν ἐπιφερομένων ἐγκλημάτων τῷ ἐπίσκοπῳ, τότε αὐτοὺς προσίεναι μεῖζονι συνόδῳ τῶν τῆς διοικήσεως ἐπισκόπων ἐκείνης, ὑπὲρ τῆς αἰτίας ταύτης συγκαλουμένων.

ἀρχῆς¹¹ was appropriated to them exclusively. But political relations and hierarchal ambition soon altered this arrangement. The bishops of Constantinople, favored by their position, soon gained an influence over the affairs of other dioceses also,¹² which manifested itself decidedly in the neighboring dioceses of Asia and Pontus in particular.¹³ At first, indeed, they met with resistance; but since it was of moment to the emperors of the eastern Roman empire to make the bishop of their chief city powerful, as being their principal instrument in ruling the church and to make him equal in rank to the bishop of the capital of the western Roman empire, the council of Chalcedon formally invested the patriarch of Constantinople with the same rank as the bishop of Rome, the superintendence over those three dioceses,¹⁴ and the right of receiving complaints from all

Καὶ γὰρ τῷ θρόνῳ τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης, διὰ τὸ βασιλεύειν τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην, οἱ πατέρες εἰκότως ἀποδεδώκασι τὰ πρεσβεῖα, καὶ τῷ αὐτῷ σκοπῷ κινούμενοι οἱ ρν' θεοφιλεστάτοι ἐπίσκοποι τὰ ἴσα πρεσβεῖα ἀπένεμαν τῷ τῆς νέας Ῥώμης ἁγιωτάτῳ θρόνῳ, εὐλόγως κρίναντες, τὴν βασιλεία καὶ συγκλήτῳ τιμηθεῖσαν πόλιν καὶ τῶν ἴσων ὑπολαύουσαν πρεσβείων τῇ πρεσβυτέρῃ βασιλίδι Ῥώμῃ (cf. lex Theodos. Cf. Edm. Richerii Hist. Concill. generall. lib. i. c. 8. § 37, ss. Even here the Grecian principle ruled that the rank of their bishops should be determined by the political rank of the cities (see above, note 3). Rome was always βασιλῆς or βασιλεύουσα: Constantinople, as being Roma Nova, received forthwith the same privileges, but was yet second in rank, ἡ δευτέρα βασιλεύουσα (Themistii Orat. iii. p. 41). In accordance with this, the Council of Constantinople, 381, determined the rank of the two bishops (see note 9). But after the division of the empire, the east Roman emperors would not allow their chief city to stand behind in any respect (Cod. Theod. xvi. ii. 45, A. D. 421: urbs Constantinopolitana; quae Romae veteris praerogativa laetatur). Agreeably to that opinion the position of its bishop was determined at Chalcedon. Cf. Spanhemius de Usu et praestantia

the dioceses against metropolitans.¹⁵ Thus the exarchs of Ephesus and Caesarea were put back into the middle rank between patriarchs and metropolitans. The bishops of Antioch endeavored likewise to draw over Cyprus into their ecclesiastical diocese, as it belonged to the political diocese of Asia; but the Cyprian bishops received from the Alexandrian party at the council of Ephesus the assurance of their independence. The bishops of Jerusalem, supported by the precedence which had been conceded to them at the council of Nice,¹⁶ after having long endeavored in vain to shake themselves free of their metropolitan in Caesarea, succeeded at last in rising to the rank of patriarchs, by an edict of Theodosius II., and by the synod of Chalcedon, the three Palestines were assigned them as their ecclesiastical domain.¹⁷ At the close of this period, therefore, we have four patriarchs in the east, viz. of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem.¹⁸ In their dioceses they were looked upon as ecclesiastical centers, to which the other bishops had to attach themselves for the preservation of unity;¹⁹ and

² Ammianus Marcellinus, xxvii. c. 3: Damasus et Ursinus supra humanum modum ad rapiendam Episcopatus sedem ardentis, scissis studiis asperissime conflictabantur, ad usque mortis vulnerrumque discrimina adjumentis utriusque progressis: quae nec corrigere sufficiens Juventius (Praef. urbi) nec mollire, coactus vi magna secessit in suburbanum. Et in concertatione superaverat Damasus, parte quae ei favebat instante. Constatque in basilica Sisinii, ubi ritus Christiani est conventiculum, uno die cxxxvii. reperta cadavera peremtorum: efferatamque diu plebem aegre postea delinitam. Neque ego abnuo, ostentationem rerum considerans urbanarum, hujus rei cupidos ob impetrandum, quod appetunt, omni contentione laterum jurgari debere: cum id adepti, futuri sint ita securi, ut ditentur oblationibus matronarum, procedantque vehiculis insidentes, circumspecte vestiti, epulas

suburbicarian ones,³ and at the same time, on account of his residence in the principal city of the world. The easterns, according to their political principle, could not but concede the first place among the bishops, and afterward among the patriarchs, to the bishop of the chief city; while the westerns estimated the dignity of the episcopal seat by another principle,⁴ viz. the grade of its apostolic descent; and considered the apostolic seats as the heads and centers of the whole church.⁵

curantes profusas, adeo ut eorum convivia regales superent mensas. Qui esse poterant beati reverca, si magnitudine urbis despecta quam vicis (conviciis?) opponunt, ad imitationem Antistitum quorundam provincialium viverent: quos tenuitas edendi potandique parcissime, vilitas etiam indumentorum, et supercilia humum spectantia, perpetuo numini vorisque ejus cultoribus ut puros commendant et verecundos. Hieronymi Ep. 38 (al. 61), ad Pammachium: Miserabilis Praetextatus, qui designatus consul est mortuus, homo sacrilegus, et idolorum cultor (respecting him see § 78, note 6, § 79, note 1), solebat ludens beato papae Damaso dicere: "Facite me Romanae urbis episcopum, et ero protinus Christianus." Hence the arrogance of the Roman bishops as the stewards of such rich possessions, complained of even by Jerome Epist. 101, ad Evangelum, see Pseudo-Augustini perhaps Hilarii Diaconi (about 380) Quaest. Vet. et Nov. Test. (in August. Opp. t. iii. P. ii. Append.) Quaest. 101: Quia Romanae Ecclesiae ministri sunt, idcirco honorabiliores putantur, quam apud ceteras Ecclesias, propter magnificentiam urbis Romae, quae caput esse videtur omnium civitatum. Si itaque sic est, hoc debent et sacerdotibus suis vindicare: quia, si ii, qui inferiores sunt, crescunt propter magnificentiam civitatis, quanto magis, qui potiores, sublimandi sunt?

³ Suburbicaria loca in the versio Prisca of the 6th Nicene canon, see above § 93, note 1. Rufinus Hist. Eccl. x. 6, gives this canon as follows: Et ut apud Alexandriam et in urbe Roma vetusta consuetudo servetur, ut vel ille Aegypti, vel hic suburbicariarum ecclesiarum sollicitudinem gerat.—Eccles. suburbic. mean, according to Baronius and Bellarmine, Eccl. totius orbis; according to Perronius, Valesius, J. Morinus, Natalis Alexander, Eccl. occidentis; according to J. Gothofredus (Conjectura de suburbicariis regionibus et ecclesiis. Francof. 1617), Claud. Salmasius, J. Launojus, the two Basnages, etc., only the four provinces which were under Praef. urbi (intra centesimum ab urbe lapidem). On the other hand Jac. Sirmond (Censura Conjecturae anonymi script. de suburb. regg. et eccl. 1618) has justly asserted that the provinces subject to the Vicarius urbis, or the Dioecesis Romae, were, 1. Campania. 2. Tuscia et Umbria. 3. Picenum suburbicarium. 4. Sicilia. 5. Apulia et Calabria. 6. Bruttii et Lucania. 7. Samnium. 8. Sardinia. 9. Corsica. 10. Valeria. That these constituted the Roman diocese is also evident from Conc. Sardic. synodica ad Julium P. (Mansi, iii. p. 41): Tua autem excellens prudentia disponere debet, ut per tua scripta, qui in Sicilia, qui in Sardinia, et in Italia sunt fratres nostri, quae acta sunt et quae definita, cognoscant (cf. ⁵ The fundamental principle of Augustine is given by Pelagius, i. ad Episcopos Tusciae, A.D. 556 (ap. Mansi, ix. 716; also in Agobardus de comparatione utriusque regimini, c. 2): Beatissimus Augustinus dominicae sententiae memor, qua fundamentum Ecclesiae in apostolicis sedibus collocavit, in schismate esse dicit, quicumque se a praesulis [Agob. praesulum] earumdem sedium auctoritate vel communione suspenderit; nec aliam manifestat esse ecclesiam, nisi quae in pontificibus [Agob. pontificalibus] apostolicarum sedium est solidata radicibus. Hence against the Donatists Augustinus Epist. 43 (al. 162), § 7: Non de Presbyteris aut diaconibus aut inferioris ordinis clericis, sed de collegis agebatur,

Hence, even according to this principle, Rome stood pre-eminent, being a church founded by the two chief apostles, and the only apostolic community of the west.⁶

The same need of security which led the bishops of the dioceses to unite with one another during the Arian controversy in the east, procured to bishop Julius of Rome decisions in the synod of Sardica (347),⁷ giving him the privilege of appointing qui possent aliorum collegarum iudicio, praesertim apostolicarum ecclesiarum, causam suam integram reservare. Idem contra litteras Petiliani, ii. 51: Verumtamen si omnes per totum orbem tales essent, quales vanissime criminari, cathedra tibi quid fecit Ecclesiae Romanae, in qua Petrus sedit, et in qua hodie Anastasius sedet: vel Ecclesiae Hierosolymitanae, in qua Jacobus sedit, et in qua hodie Joannes sedet, quibus nos in catholica unitate connectimur, et a quibus vos nefario furore separastis? In connection with these passages the following can only be rightly explained: Contra duas Epp. Pelag. ad Bonifac. Rom. Eccl. Episcopum, i. 2: Communis omnibus nobis, qui fangimur Episcopatus officio (quamvis ipse in ea praeemineas celsiore fastigio) specula pastoralis Epist. 43, § 7: Romana Ecclesia, in qua semper apostolicae cathedrae viguit principatus.

(from the Dionysiorum Exig. cod. can. ap. Mansi, iii. 23): Osius Episcopus dixit: Quod si aliquis Episcoporum iudicatus fuerit in aliqua causa, et putat se bonam causam habere, ut iterum concilium renovetur; si vobis placet, sancti Petri Apostoli memoriam honoremus, ut scribatur ab his, qui causam examinarunt, Julio Romano Episcopo: et si iudicaverit renovandum esse iudicium, renovetur, et det iudices. Si autem probaverit, talem causam esse, ut non refricentur ea quae acta sunt; quae decreverit confirmata erunt. Si hoc omnibus placet? Synodus respondit: Placet. Can. iv.: Gaudentius Episcopus dixit: Addendum, si placet, huic sententiae, quam plenam sanctitate protulistis; ut, cum aliquis Episcopus depositus fuerit eorum Episcoporum iudicio, qui in vicinis locis commorantur, et proclamaverit, agendum sibi negotium in urbe Roma: alter Episcopus in ejus cathedra, post appellationem ejus qui videtur esse depositus, omnino non ordinetur, nisi causa fuerit in iudicio Episcopi Romani determinata. Can. vii. (in Graeco v.): Osius Episcopus dixit: Placuit autem, ut, si Episcopus accusatus fuerit, et iudicaverit congregati Episcopi regionis ipsius, et de gradu suo eum dejecerit; si appellaverit qui dejectus est, et confugerit ad Episcopum Romanae ecclesiae, et voluerit se audiri: si justum putaverit, ut renovetur examen, scribere his Episcopis dignetur, qui in finitima et propinqua provincia sunt, ut ipsi diligenter omnia requirant, et juxta fidem veritatis definiant. Quod si is qui rogat causam suam iterum audiri, deprecatione sua moverit Episcopum Romanum, ut de latere suo Presbyterum mittat, erit in potestate Episcopi, quid velit, et quid aestimet. Et si decreverit, mittendos esse, qui praesentes cum Episcopis iudicent, habentes ejus auctoritatem, a quo destinati sunt, erit in suo arbitrio. Si vero crediderit Episcopus sufficere, ut negotio terminum imponat, faciet, quod sapientissimo consilio suo iudicaverit. Comp. de Marca de Concord. But when the divided choice between Damasus and Ursicinus (366),⁸ although Valentinian I. decided in favor of the former,⁹ gave rise to a tedious schism which spread into other provinces also, and to the greatest bitterness between two parties; Gratian gave Damasus the right of judging in the case of condemned bishops,¹⁰ in order that the schismatic clergy might not be at the mercy of worldly, and for the most part as yet, heathen officers.¹¹ At the same time the emperor, at the instance of a Roman synod (378), assured him of the support of the civil power as far as it might be necessary for the bishop's purpose.¹² Both privileges conferred on Julius and Damasus were transitory, as well as the relations which gave rise to them.¹³ The rights of provincial synods remained still inviolate, and their decrees were considered as binding even by the bishop of Rome.¹⁴

A permanent kind of influence was opened up to the latter by the custom of referring questions about apostolic doctrine and practices to the bishop of the only apostolic and common mother-church,¹⁵ which happened all the more readily¹⁶ as similar questions were also referred to distinguished bishops in the east.¹⁷

¹⁴ So Siricius replied (392) to Anysius, bishop of Thessalonica, and to the other bishops in Illyria, when they had asked advice from him respecting Bonosus (Siricii Ep. 9, ap. Constant, erroneously given among the epistles of Ambrose, as Ep. 79, and also falsely ascribed to Damasus, see Constantii monitum) : Cum hujusmodi fuerit concilii Capuensis judicium, ut fluitimi Bonoso atque ejus accusatoribus judices tribuerentur, et præcipue Macedones, qui cum Episcopo Thessalonicensi de ejus factis vel cognoscerent; advertimus, quod nobis judicandi forma competere non posset. Nam si integra esset hodie synodus, recte de iis, quæ comprehendit vestrorum scriptorum series, decerneremus. Vestrum est igitur, qui hoc recepistis judicium, sententiam ferre de omnibus, nec refugiendi vel elabendi vel accusatoribus vel accusato copiam dare. Vicem enim synodi recepistis, quos ad examinandum synodus elegit. Ambrose replied to Bonosus: Omnia modeste, patienter, ordine gerenda, neque contra sententiam vestram tentandum aliquid; ut quod videretur vobis justitiæ convenire, statueretis, quibus hanc synodus dederat auctoritatem. Ideo primum est, ut ii judicent, quibus judicandi facultas est data: vos enim totius, ut scripsimus, synodi vice decernitis; nos quasi ex synodi auctoritate judicare non convenit.

¹⁷ Innocentii I. Ep. 25, ad Decentium, A.D. 416, ap. Constant, ap. Mansi, iii. 1028: Quia cum nesciat, aut non advertat, id quod a principe Apostolorum Petro Romanæ Ecclesiæ traditum est, ac nunc usque custoditur, ab omnibus debere servari; nec superduci aut introduci aliquid, quod auctoritatem non habeat, aut aliunde accipere videatur exemplum? Præsertim cum sit manifestum, in omnem Italiam, Gallias, Hispanias, Africam atque Siciliam, et insulas interjacentes, nullum instituisse Ecclesias, nisi eos, quos venerabilis Apostolus Petrus aut ejus successores constituerint sacerdotes. Aut legant, si in his provinciis alius Apostolorum invenitur, aut legitur docuisse. Qui si non legunt, quia nusquam inveniunt, oportet eos hoc sequi, quod Ecclesia Romana custodit, a qua eos principium accepisse non dubium est; ne, dum peregrinis assertionibus student, caput institutionum videantur omittere. Ambrose, however, says of the practice of feet-washing, which did not prevail at Rome, but in Milan most probably, de Sacramentis, iii. 1: In omnibus cupio sequi Ecclesiam Romanam: sed tamen et nos homines sensum habemus: ideo quod alibi rectius servatur, et nos recte custodimus.

If it was usual in the latter case, so much the more would it occur in the former, especially as it was customary before this time to consider the current laws of Rome as a standard in doubtful cases of civil jurisprudence.¹⁸ Hence the Roman bishops took occasion to issue a great number of didactic letters (epistolae decretales),¹⁹ which soon assumed the tone of apostolic ordinances, and were held in very high estimation in the west, as flowing from apostolic tradition. All these circumstances had the effect of bringing about such a state of things, that in the beginning of the fifth century the Roman bishops could already lay claim to a certain oversight of the western church.²⁰

The eastern bishops, it is true, would not allow the least interference of the western in their ecclesiastical affairs. They gave a decided repulse to Julius I., when, at the head of the western bishops, he wished to interfere on behalf of the persecuted Athanasius.²¹ The fundamental principle of the mutual independence of the occidental and oriental church, was universally maintained in the east.²² Still the period of the doctrinal controversies had a very important influence in promoting the power of the Roman bishop. The speculative questions which split the east into factions excited little interest in the west. On this very account the westerns united very soon and easily in the opinion to be embraced, in which they chiefly followed the bishop of Rome, who was almost the only organ of communication with the east,²³ and by means of whom they also be-

οὕτως γεγενῆσθαι τὴν κρίσιν· ἔδει γραφῆναι πᾶσιν ἡμῖν, ἵνα οὕτως παρὰ πάντων ὀρισθῇ τὸ δίκαιον. ἐπίσκοποι γὰρ ἦσαν οἱ πάσχοντες, καὶ οὐχ αἱ τυχοῦσαι ἐκκλησίαι αἱ πάσχουσαι, ἀλλ' ὡν αὐτοὶ οἱ Ἀπόστολοι δι' ἐαυτῶν καθηγῆσαντο. Διὰ τὴν δὲ περὶ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρέων ἐκκλησίας μάλιστα οὐκ ἐγράφετο ἡμῖν; ἢ ἄγνοεῖτε ὅτι τοῦτο ἔθος ἦν, πρότερον γράφεσθαι ἡμῖν, καὶ οὕτως ἐνθεν ὀρίζεσθαι τὰ δίκαια; Εἰ μὲν οὖν τι τοιοῦτον ἦν ὑποπτευθὲν εἰς τὸν ἐπίσκοπον τὸν ἐκεῖ, ἔδει πρὸς τὴν ἐνταῦθα ἐκκλησίαν γραφῆναι. Julius, therefore, did not pretend to pronounce judgment on Athanasius and Marcellus alone, but in conjunction with all the bishops (comp. below, note 26). This demand grew out of the western notions respecting the superior dignity of the bishops of apostolic communities (see above, note 5), as those two were. See de Marca de concord. Sac. et Imp. lib. vii. c. 4, § 2, 6, ss. On the other hand the orientals reply in the epist. synodalis Sardicensis (Philippopolii habitae) ad Donatum (in Hilarii Fragm. lib. ii. ap. Mansi, iii. 136): Hanc novitatem moliebantur inducere, quam horret vetus consuetudo ecclesiae, ut in concilio orientales Episcopi quidquid forte statuissent, ab Episcopis occidentalibus refricaretur: similiter quidquid occidentalium partium Episcopi, ab orientalibus solveretur. Sed hoc ex illo suo pravissimo sensu tractabant. Verum omnium conciliorum juste legitimique actorum decreta firmanda, majorum nostrorum gesta consignant. Nam in urbe Roma sub Novato et Sabellio et Valentino haereticis factum concilium, ab Orientalibus confirmatum est: et iterum in oriente sub Paulo a Samosatis quod statutum est, ab omnibus est signatum.—Nos vero nulli injuriam facimus, sed legis praecepta servamus. Nam injuriati et male tractati sumus ab iis qui volebant ecclesiae catholicae regulam sua pravitate turbare: sed ante oculos habentes timorem Dei, iudicium Christi, verum et justum considerantes, nullius personam accepimus, neque alicui pepercimus, quo minus ecclesiasticam disciplinam servaremus. Unde Julium urbis Romae, Osium et Protogenem, et Gaudentium et Maximinum a Treveris damnavit omne concilium secundum antiquissimam legem: Julium vero urbis Romae, ut principem et ducem malorum, qui primus januam communionis sceleratis atque damnatis aperuit, ceterisque aditum fecit ad solvenda jura divina, defendebatque Athanasium praesumentur atque audaciter, hominem, cujus nec testes noverat, nec accusatores.

²² Constantii Imp. Ep. ad Syn. Ariminensem, A.D. 359 (ap. Mansi, iii. 297): Non enim de orientalibus Episcopis in concilio vestro patitur ratio aliquid definiri. Proinde super his tantum, quae ad vos pertinere cognoscit gravitas vestra, tractare debebitis.—Quae cum ita sint, adversus orientales nihil statuere vos oportet, aut si aliquid volueritis contra eosdem praedictis absentibus definire, id quod fuerit usurpatum irrito evanesceat effectu. At the Council. Aquilejense, ann. 381, Palladius being accused of Arianism, replied (Mansi, iii. 602): Absentibus sacerdotibus nostris nos repondere non possumus. Ambrosius Episcopus dixit: Qui sunt consortes vestri? Palladius dixit: Orientales Episcopi.—Cf. Leo Allatus de Eccles. occid. et orient. perp. consens. lib. i. c. 10. came acquainted with its controversies. Thus in all these controversies the west stood united and steadfast, with the bishop of Rome at its head, in contrast with the east split into parties and wavering; and when matters came to a final decision, it turned the scale in the balance of parties, when merely as a heavy weight. This phenomenon, which was constantly reappearing, was first manifested in the final victory of the Nicene faith. When these doctrines began to spread in the east likewise, under Valens, it is true the new Nicene orientals could not entirely unite with the west, and believed that they had much reason to complain of the arrogance of the westerns;²⁴ but yet the west was their only stay and support in opposition to all other parties. And though the council of Constantinople (381), afterward arranged the affairs of the oriental church without any reference to the west, and even openly took the part of the Miletians, whom the occidentals had rejected;²⁵ though not long after the interference of the Italian bishops, in the matter of the rival bishop of Constantinople, Maximus, was entirely disregarded;²⁶ yet it could not but be seen, that in the great theological question of the day occidental steadfastness had obtained the victory over the wavering east. But whatever influence the west gained in the east, it gained only for the reputation of the Roman bishop,²⁷ who, at the head of the west, was the only

organ of direct communication with the east. From this time forth there was no important ecclesiastical controversy in the east in which each party did not endeavor to gain over the bishop of Rome, and through him the west, to its side,²⁸ for which purpose both flatteries were applied, and a presumptuous tone submitted to.²⁹ At the councils, his legates were treated with peculiar deference. Chalcedon was the first general council where they presided.³⁰

As the west was accustomed to estimate the dignity of the episcopal seat according to its apostolic derivation,³¹ and since the decrees of the council of Sardica imparted certain privileges to the Roman see out of deference to the apostle Peter; so also the Romish bishops derived all their claims to distinction from the position that they were the successors of Peter.³² At the same time, they opposed the opinion universally adopted in the east, that they and the other patriarchs owed their elevation merely to the importance of the cities in which they resided;³³ and therefore they set themselves so much against the privileges of the bishop of Constantinople, which rested only on this ground. But though, on tracing back their claims, they supported the normal authority of their church on the basis of its apostolic origin, and its parental relation to the whole western church,³⁴ they acknowledged notwithstanding, that the peculiar privileges of their see did not originally belong to it, but had been granted by the fathers.³⁵ On the idea of Peter having been the first apostle they could hardly find any particular pre-eminence in the fourth century, since there was conceded to him only a primatus honoris, in so far as Christ had first given him alone those rights which he afterward transferred to all the apostles, and through them to all bishops equally.³⁶ And as, according

Out of these and similar passages arose the remarkable view of Antoine Arnauld, that Peter and Paul were alike the heads of the church (see de l'autorité de St. Pierre et de St. Paul, résidant dans le Pape leur successeur. of Rome could the less pretend to have inherited from Peter a peculiar spiritual power reaching beyond that of the other bishops.³⁸

But after the rights of the Romish bishops had become older in the west, and their authority had been so much increased in the east likewise since the end of the Arian controversy, they began at Rome in like proportion to enlarge the notion of Peter's primacy, and to regard all the honors and rights of the Romish bishop as inherited from Peter,³⁹ a view which appears first to have been fully developed by Leo. In the east they could not concur with this representation, because there they were accustomed to attribute the primacy to the church of Jerusalem and James, at least during the first century.⁴⁰ In Jerusalem itself they endeavored even now to establish hierarchical claims on the ground of its being the mother congregation of the whole church;⁴¹ but in the external insignificance of this see little stress could be laid on these claims, especially since the authority of churches generally, in the east, was not determined according to their original importance, but the political rank of the cities in which they existed.⁴²

High as was the dignity which the Roman bishops enjoyed in the west, their influence was yet very different in the different provinces. They had the full rights of patriarchs only in the diocese of Rome. In the diocesis Italiae, the bishop of Milan exercised quite independently of them a hierarchical power similar to that of the patriarchs; in addition to whom the bishop of Aquileia also,⁴³ and at a later period the bishop of Ravenna,⁴⁴ raised themselves to the rank of more independent hierarchs. In the mean time, the Roman bishops, by a skillful use of opportunities, succeeded in attaching East Illyria to their patriarchate.⁴⁵ During the Arian disputes, Illyria had belonged to the western empire, and the Illyrian church had continued true to the Nicene council,⁴⁶ attaching itself to the bishop of Rome for its defense, as did the whole west. When, therefore, Gratian, A.D. 379, divided Illyria, and annexed Illyricum orientale to the eastern empire, the bishops of East Illyria, who had for so long a time maintained no communion with the east, could not have much inclination to attach themselves ecclesiastically to the east, during the strife of parties by which it was then distinguished; while the bishop of Thessalonica, the ecclesiastical head of East Illyria, must have been averse to a union of this kind, which would have made him subject to a superior so near, viz. the bishop of Constantinople.

Under these circumstances, it was easy for the Roman bishops to persuade the bishop of Thessalonica to exercise the patriarchal rights, in the new prefecture of East Illyria, as vicar of the Roman see. Damasus and Sirivius made this arrangement; Innocent I. looked upon it as already fixed.⁴⁷ The East Illyrian bishops, indeed, who by this means were entirely at the mercy of the bishop of Thessalonica, remote as they were from Rome, soon found cause of dissatisfaction; but their attempt to procure the ecclesiastical union of their province with the patriarchate of Constantinople by an imperial law was frustrated.⁴⁸

Another favorable opportunity for extending their power presented itself to the Roman bishops in Gaul.⁴⁹ When metropolitan relations began to be established here at the end of the

Quisquis vero posthac contra apostolicæ sedis statuta et praecepta majorum, omisso metropolitano Episcopo, in provinciis supradictis quemquam ordinare praesumerit, vel is qui ordinari se illicite siverit, uterque sacerdotio se carere cognoscat.—Sane quoniam metropolitanae Arelatensium urbi vetus privilegium minime derogandum est, ad quam primum ex hac sede Trophimus summus antistes, ex cujus fonte totae Galliae fidei rivulos acceperunt, directus est; idcirco quascunque paroecias in quibuslibet territoriis, etiam extra provincias suas, ut antiquitus habuit, intemerata auctoritate possideat. The Roman bishops were least successful in obtaining influence in Africa, where the ecclesiastical relations had long been firmly fixed, and there was on this account an aversion to the new development of the hierarchy.⁵⁸ Their ecclesiastical legislation, too, had been all along cultivated with an evident predilection.⁵⁹ As early as the Pelagian controversy, Zosimus had learned by experience how little his decision was respected in Africa (§ 87, notes 12–16). It is true, he procured restoration to his office for the presbyter Apiarius who had been then deposed by appealing to the canons of the Sardican council as Nicene; but his successor, Boniface I. (418–423), was reminded on this account of the humility suitable to him under such circumstances.⁶⁰ But when Caelestinus I. (323–432) wished to have the twice-deposed Apiarius restored,⁶¹ the Africans in the Quae si ibi—continerentur, eoque ordine vel apud vos in Italia custodirentur; nullo modo nos talia, qualia commemorare jam nolumus, vel tolerare cogemur, vel intolerabilia pateremur. Sed credimus—quod tua Sanctitate Romanae ecclesiae praesidente non sumus jam istum typhum passuri; et servabuntur erga nos, quae nobis etiam non disserentibus custodiri debeant cum fraterna caritate, quae secundum sapientiam atque iustitiam, quam tibi donavit Altissimus, etiam ipse perspicis esse servanda, nisi forte aliter se habeant canones Concilii Nicaeni. This mistake was caused by the form of the collection of canons then in use, in which those of later synods were appended to the Nicene without distinction. Quesnell has published such a collection annexed to the Opp. Leonis; also Mansi, vi. 1183. Hence later canons are often cited as Nicene. See Ballerini de Ant. collect. can. also considerably extended the power of that see, both by his own personal qualities and good fortune. The controversy with Hilary, bishop of Arles, led him to obtain a law from Valentinian III. (445) by which the Romish bishop became the supreme head of the whole western church.⁶⁶ The catholic bishops of Africa, now oppressed by the Arian Vandals, attached themselves the more closely on this account to the Roman see, and allowed Leo to act as a patriarch in their dioceses without opposition.⁶⁷ At the council of Chalcedon, Leo, whose legates had the presidency there, hoped to make good his claims as head of the whole church; but he met with much opposition among the orientals,⁶⁸ which at last manifested itself decidedly in decreeing the bishop of Constantinople to be on an equality with the bishop of Rome. This measure Leo had foreseen, and in vain attempted to avert.⁶⁹ He protested against it;⁷⁰ and Anatolius, bishop of Constantinople, was actually obliged to send an humble letter to him, for the oriental emperor's sake.⁷¹ Still the decrees of the synod continued in force; and thus began the contest of jealousy that lasted for centuries, between the bishops of Rome and Constantinople.

It is worthy of remark, that the Romish bishops were distinguished by no peculiar titles in the west. In the east, the honorable appellation of patriarchs was certainly given them; but these titles were as yet common to all bishops in the west.⁷²

On this so fearful an outcry arose, that the Illyrian bishops called out (actio v. ap. Mansi, vii. 105): Οἱ ἀντιλέγοντες Νεστοριανοὶ εἰσὶν· οἱ ἀντιλέγοντες εἰς Ῥώμην ἀπέθλωσιν.

⁷¹ In Epist. Leonis ap. Quesn. appended to Epist. 105, ap. Baller. Ep. 132.

Solitude and asceticism were universally looked upon in this age as means of approximation to the Deity. The New Platonists recommended them.¹ The Jewish Essenes and Therapeutae lived in this manner.² Thus Anthony (Div. I. § 73), appeared to have set forth the ideal of a Christian wise man; he soon found many imitators, and other hermits fixed themselves in his neighborhood. Many more were concealed in inaccessible places, of whom one, Paul of Thebes († 340), who had lived in the desert ever since the Decian persecution, is said to have become known to Anthony shortly before his death.³ After a number of hermits had been brought into a kind of connection with one another by Anthony, Pachomius founded a place of habitation where they might dwell together (κοινόβιον, μάνδρα, claustrum.—Κοινοβίτης, Συνοδίτης), on the island Tabenna in the Nile (about 340), with a system of rules for the government of its inmates, by which strict obedience to the president (Ἀββᾶς, Ἠγούμενος, Ἀρχιμανδρίτης) was particularly enforced. At the same time Amun founded a society of monks on the Nitrian mountain (τὸ τῆς Νιτρίας ὄρος); and *Macarius the elder*⁴ in the neighboring wilderness of Sketis.⁵ Both were soon peopled by the monks, and became the most celebrated resorts. Hilarion assembled in the desert near Gaza, a company of monks, and from thence the system spread through Palestine and Syria.⁶ The Eusebian Eustathius, afterward bishop of Sebaste, introduced it into Armenia and Asia Minor.⁷ The peculiarities of the monkish life of this period consisted in solitariness, manual labor, spiritual exercises,⁸ restraint of the bodily appetites for the purpose of mortifying the sensual nature, and allowing the spirit with less disturbance to be absorbed in the contemplation of divine things.⁹ The rules of the monasteries made, indeed, more moderate demands on the abstinence of the inmates;¹⁰ but the majority of the monks did more than was required, of their own free choice, and many even withdrew from the cells of the convents into the desert (Ἀναχωρηταί), that they might suppress sensual desires by the most ingenious self-tortures, and attain the highest degree of holiness. In many cases these measures had only the contrary effect, and temptations increased;¹¹ many Epitaph. Paulae Epist. 27, 10, Epist. 7 ad Laetam; according to Chrysostom. in 1 Tim. Hom. xiv. the monks had the same hours. Basil also, de Instit. monach. sermo, prescribes these six; but that there may be seven, agreeably to Psalm cxix. 164, the prayer of noon is directed to be divided into that before and that after eating. When six public hours for prayer are prescribed to the churches in the apostolic constitutions, viii. 34, the writer follows the view which arose in the fourth century, viz., that in the apostolic churches for which he pretends to write, a monastic institute prevailed. Even in his day there were daily but two religious services, as at an early period (ἐν ἑσπέρᾳ καὶ ἐν πρωΐᾳ, Chrysost. in 1 Tim. Hom. vi.).

monks were driven to despair by a sense of the hopelessness of their efforts;¹² in the case of others, complete madness was superinduced by that excessive asceticism, and by the pride associated with it, under the influence of a burning climate.¹³ From that diseased excitement of the imagination, and that spiritual pride, arose also those strange miraculous occurrences which befel the monks only in solitude. The lesser marvelous things which they wrought in the circles of enthusiastic admirers must be explained by the impression they made on the feelings of reverence entertained toward the persons of the monks, and by the magnifying nature of tradition.¹⁴

Pachomius says, Vita Pachomii, § 61 (Acta SS. Καὶ πολλοὶ ἐθανάτωσαν ἑαυτοὺς, ὁ μὲν ἐπάνωθεν πέτρας ἑαυτὸν ῥίψας ὡς ἐκστατικὸς, καὶ ἄλλος μαχαίρα ἀπέπτυσεν τὴν κοιλίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπέθανεν, καὶ ἄλλοι ἄλλως. Cf. Chrysostomi ad Stagiriam, lib. iii. (Opp. i. 153) to a monk who believed that he had been tempted by Satan to commit suicide. Others sought assistance in their struggle against desire in immoderate sleep. Nili, lib. iii. Ep. 224.

¹³ Hieronymi Ep. 95 (al. 4), ad Rusticum: Sunt, qui humore cellarum, immoderatisque jejuniis, taedio solitudinis ac nimia lectione, dum diebus ac noctibus auribus suis personant, vertuntur in melancholiam, et Hippocratis magis fomentis quam nostris monitis indigent. Ejusd. Ep. 97 (al. 8) ad Demetriadem: Novi ego in utroque sexu per nimiam abstinentiam cerebri sanitatem quibusdam fuisse vexatam: praecipueque in his, qui in humectis et frigidis habitaverunt cellulis, ita ut nescirent quid agerent, quove se verterent: quid loqui, quid tacere deberent. Hence his disapprobation of extreme fasting in Ep. 57 (al. 7) ad Laetam and Jo. Cassian. Instit. v. 9.

Very soon in the east monachism was received with enthusiastic admiration, and the number of monks swelled to an enormous extent.¹⁵ Since there were no more persecutions, and no more opportunities of martyrdom; since Christianity had even acquired external dominion; the erroneous notion was spread abroad that there was no longer an opportunity in the world for the full exercise of Christian virtue.¹⁶ The general corruption¹⁷ or consciousness of individual guilt caused many to seek solitude. Many sought escape from the oppressive circumstances of life.¹⁸ Others wished to make a figure and obtain an influence. Others were attracted by sloth;¹⁹ and lastly, others were drawn away

Sulpicius Severus, dial. ii. 4, relates that St. Martin often told him, nequaquam sibi in episcopatu eam virtutum gratiam suppetisse, quam prius se habuisse meminisset. Quod si verum est, immo quia verum est, conicere possumus, quanta fuerunt illa, quae monachus operatus est, et quae teste nullo solus exercuit, cum tanta illum in episcopatu signa fecisse, sub oculis omnium viderimus. ¹⁵ Pachomius had in his convent 1300 monks, and in all upward of 7000 under his superintendance (Sozom. iii. 14). In a monastery at Thebais were 5000 monks (Cass. de Instit. iv. 1), in Nitria were fifty convents (Sozom. vi. 31), etc.

The most distinguished teachers of the church, Athanasius, Ambrose, Basil the Great, Gregory of Nazianzum, Chrysostom, Jerome, and Augustine, were the most zealous panegyrists of the new mode of life (φιλοσοφία, ἀγγελικὴ διαγωγή).²² Examples in favor of it were soon discovered even in the Old Testament;²³ and by new

Hos igitur atque hujusmodi, intra Aegyptumprehensos, per comitem Orientis crui e latebris consulta praeceptione mandavimus, atque ad munia patriarum subeunda revocari, aut pro tenore nostrae sanctionis familiarium rerum carere illecebris, quas per eos censuimus vindicandas, qui publicarum essent subituri munera functionum. After the death of his milder brother (Orosii Hist. vii. 33: illico post fratris obitum), Valens became more violent against the monks, see Hieron. Chron. ann. 375: Multi monachorum Nitriae per tribunos et milites caesi. Valens enim lege data, ut monachi militarent, nolentes fastibus interfici jussit. This raised the courage of the numerous opponents of monachism, and therefore Chrysostom wrote at that time πρὸς τοὺς πολεοῦντας τοῖς ἐπὶ τὸ μονάζειν ἐνάγουσιν libb. iii. (ed. Montf. t. i.)

Orat catech. c. 18), ἡ κατὰ θεὸν φιλοσοφία (Nilus de Monast. exercitatione, c. 8). Serapion, bishop of Thmuis, about 350, writes in the Epist. ad monachos (Spicilegium Romanum, iv. p. liv.) to them: Ἰσάγγελοι ἐστὲ τῇ πολιτείᾳ: ὡσπερ γὰρ ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει τῶν νεκρῶν οὔτε γαμοῦσιν οὔτε γαμίσκονται, ἀλλ' ὡς ἄγγελοι εἰσὶν ἐν οὐρανῷ οἱ δίκαιοι, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ ἡμεῖς οὕτω συμβιοτεύοντες, προελάβετε τῷ πόθῳ τὸ ἐσόμενον. Entering on the life of a monk is called by Jerome, Ep. 22 (al. 25), ad Paulam: Secundo quodammodo propositi se baptismo lavare. Subsequently Dionys. Arcop. de Eccles. hierarch. c. 6, reckons the vow of monks (μυστήριον μοναχικῆς τελεωώσεως) among the sacraments.

For a long time the monks appeared to have been able to dwell only in deserts. Individuals, indeed, sometimes showed potissimum Monachorum genus habitari coepta sit. Quidam enim alius repetentes q̄ b̄ Elia et Johanne sumere principium. Quorum et Elias plus nobis videtur fuisse, quam Monachus: et Johannes ante prophetare coepisse, quam natus sit. Alii autem, in quam opinionem vulgus omne concessit, asserunt Antonium hujus propositi caput, quod ex parte verum est. Non enim tam ipse ante omnes fuit, quam ab eo omnium incitata sunt studia. Anathes vero et Macarius, discipuli Antonii, e quibus superioris magistri corpus sepelivit, attamen affirmant, Paulum quendam Thebaicum principem istius rei fuisse, non nominis, quam opinionem nos quoque probamus. On the contrary, the same Jerome observed, about 395, Ep. 49 (al. 13), ad Paulinum: Nos autem habeamus propositi nostri principes Pauli et Antonii, Julianum, Hilariionem, Macarium. Et et ad scripturarum auctoritatem redeam: noster princeps Helias, noster duces filii prophetarum, qui habitabant in agris et solis illius, et habitabant sibi tabernacula prope sancta Jerusalem. De his sunt et illi filii Rechab (Jerem. xxxv), qui vinum et siccam non bibebant, qui morabantur in tentoriis, etc. Sozomenus, i. 12: Ταύτης δὲ τῆς ἀρίστης φιλοσοφίας ἠρξάτο, ὃς τινες λέγουσιν, Ἠλίας ὁ προφήτης, καὶ Ἰωάννης ὁ βαπτιστής.

²¹ Cod. Theodos. xii. 1, 63 (A.D. 365): Quidam ignaviae sectatores desertis civitatum muneribus captant solitudines ac secreta, et specie religionis cum coetibus monazouton congregantur. Hos igitur atque hujusmodi, intra Aegyptum deprehensos, per comitem Orientis erui e latebris consulta praeceptione mandavimus, atque ad mania patriarum subeunda revocari, aut pro tenore nostrae sanctionis familiarium rerum carere illecebris, quas per eos censuimus vindicandas, qui publicarum essent subituri munera functionum. After the death of his milder brother (Orosii Hist. vii. 33: illico post fratris obitum), Valens became more violent against the monks, see Hieron. Chron. ann. 375: Multi monachorum Nitriae per tribunos et milites caesi. Valens enim lege data, ut monachi militarent, nolentes fastibus interfici jussit. This raised the courage of the numerous opponents of monachism, and therefore Chrysostom wrote at that time πρὸς τοὺς πολεμοῦντας τοῖς ἐπὶ τὸ μονάζειν ἐνάγουσιν libb. iii. (ed. Montf. t. i.)

For a long time the monks appeared to have been able to dwell only in deserts. Individuals, indeed, sometimes showed potissimum Monachorum eremus habitari coepta sit. Quidam enim altius repetentes, a b. Elia et Johanne sumserunt principium. Quorum et Elias plus nobis videtur fuisse, quam Monachus: et Johannes aute prophetare coepisse, quam natus sit. Alii autem, in quam opinionem vulgus omne consensit, asserunt Antonium hujus propositi caput, quod ex parte verum est. Non enim tam ipse ante omnes fuit, quam ab eo omnium incitata sunt studia. Amathas vero et Macarius, discipuli Antonii, e quibus superior magistri corpus sepelivit, etiam nunc affirmant. Paulum quemdam Thebaeum principem istius rei fuisse, non nominis; quam opinionem nos quoque probamus. On the contrary, the same Jerome observed, about 395, Ep. 49 (al. 13), ad Paulinum: Nos autem habeamus propositi nostri principes Paulos et Antonios, Julianos, Hilarionem, Macarios. Et ut ad scripturarum auctoritatem redeam: noster princeps Helias, noster duces filii prophetarum, qui habitabant in agris et solitudinibus, et faciebant sibi tabernacula prope fluenta Jordanis. De his sunt et illi filii Rechab (Jerem. xxxv.), qui vinum et siceram non bibebant, qui morabantur in tentoriis, etc. Sozomenus, i. 12: Ταύτης δὲ τῆς ἀρίστης φιλοσοφίας ἡρξάτο, ὡς τινες λέγουσιν, Ἡλίας ὁ προφήτης, καὶ Ἰωάννης ὁ βαπτιστής.

themselves in cities to oppose heathens and heretics, but they always withdrew again very soon into their solitude.²⁵ Basil the Great was the first who established a company of monks in the vicinity of Caesarea in Cappadocia, in order to suppress Arianism, by their influence with the people.²⁶ From this time monasteries became more frequent in the neighborhood of cities; but since there were as yet no strict rules, wandering companies of monks were also found. Thus their influence in Church and State became stronger, but, at the same time, more dangerous.

It is true that the monks made a strong moral impression by their strict life, dedicated to God in solitude. Even heathens frequently repaired to them in numbers, for the sake of receiving their blessing, and were converted by them.²⁷ But the honor and power they possessed not unfrequently caused the passions within them, which were suppressed in regard to their sensual manifestations, to break forth still more strongly in the form of spiritual pride,²⁸ and wild fanaticism, against those who thought differently from themselves. From the time of Theodosius I., they opposed heathenism with fury and barbarousness;²⁹ and they also mingled in ecclesiastical controversies in a manner no less violent. Since they despised all learning, and founded their judgment of orthodoxy merely on an obscure feeling of what looked like piety, and what did not,³⁰ it was seldom difficult for a superior head to excite their fanaticism in favor of a certain view. Thus the ambitious bishops of Alexandria, Theophilus, Cyril, and Dioscurus, knew well how to make use of them, partly to work upon the people, partly to overpower their opponents by acts of violence.³¹ The rude mass were as easily excited, in a fanatical manner, against a Chrysostom, at the point of death,³² as against idolaters and Arians. The limits of civil law, and the dignity of magistrates, appear to have been disregarded by them.³³ In them religious fanaticism was united with a cynical indifference to propriety or duty; and too often indolence and vice also were concealed under this mask of piety.³⁴

Contemplation, which was regarded as the most important duty of the monk, as though it led him to an internal union with God, was usually, in the absence of mental cultivation, either a suffering resignation to feeling, without a distinct consciousness of it,³⁵ or a play of anthropomorphic images of the fancy. Hence anthropomorphism was very common among them.³⁶ But incessant occupation with religious subjects, over-

strained views, and self-conceit, joined with the want of culture, occasionally led them to other aberrations also from the doctrine of the Church.³⁷ Audius in Mesopotamia was still worthy of respect, who separated from the Church on account of its corruption, and founded a sect of monks (Audiani) about A.D. 340.³⁸ But the Messalians (ⲙⲉⲥⲁⲗⲓⲁⲓ) or Εὐχίται,³⁹ who also arose in Mesopotamia (about 360), were mere fanatics, wandering hordes of beggars, who supposed that incessant prayer could alone blot out all sins while they undervalued public worship, and were led into the most absurd notions by their coarse imagination. Even Eustathius, the founder of monachism in Armenia, came to reject marriage absolutely, and was, on this account, condemned with his followers by the Synod of Gangra (between 362 and 370).⁴⁰

In the mean time monachism was developed in forms the most various. Many monks (Rhemoboth or Sarabaitae),⁴¹ still continued to live in society⁴² like the old ascetics, but were less dum, quod scilicet impugnare Scripturae sanctae sententiam videretur, negans omnipotentem Deum humanae figurae compositione formatum, cum ad ejus imaginem creatum Adam Scripturae manifestissime testaretur. When Seraphin, an old monk highly esteemed, was convinced of his error, he was so smitten with remorse (cap. 3) eo quod illam Anthropomorphitarum imaginem Deitatis, quam proponere sibi in oratione consueverat, aboleri de suo corde sentiret, ut in amarissimos fletus crebrosque singultus repente prorumpens, in terramque prostratus, cum ejulatu validissimo proclamaret: heu me miserum, tulerunt a me Deum meum, et quem nunc teneam non habeo, vel quem adorem aut interpellem jam nescio. So the Anthropomorphites generally (cap. 5) nihil se retinere vel habere credentes, si propositam non habuerint imaginem quandam, quam in supplicatione positi jugiter interpellent, eamque circumferant mente, ac prae oculis teneant semper affixam. On the Anthropomorphism of Abraames see Theodoret. Hist. rel. c. 3.

⁴⁰ The acts of this synod (ap. Mausii, ii. 1095) are the chief source for the knowledge of his doctrines. Socrat. ii. 43. Sozom. iv. 24. Walch, iii. 536. In the synodical decree it is also reckoned among their errors in doctrine: Πρεσβυτέρων γεγαμηκότων ὑπερφρονοῦντες, καὶ τῶν λειτουργιῶν τῶν ὑπ' αὐτῶν γινομένων μὴ ἀπτόμενοι. On the contrary, can. iv.: Εἰ τις διακρίνοιτο παρὰ πρεσβυτέρων γεγαμηκότος, ὡς μὴ χρῆναι λειτουργήσαντος αὐτοῦ προσφορᾶς μεταλαμβάνειν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. ⁴² Also with the συννείσακτα in Ambros. Sermo. 65. Gregorii Naz. Carm. in several passages. See Walch, l. c. p. 23, s. Moreover, there were still ascetics who abstained highly esteemed. Others wandered about in companies (Βοσκόι)⁴³ in Mesopotamia. Those who lived together in convents were called coenobites, each convent having its peculiar constitution, among whom the most distinguished since the fifth century, were the ἀκοίμητοι, watchers, for whom Studius, in 460, founded one of the most celebrated convents in Constantinople (Studitae).⁴⁴ But among the people, the anchorites were reckoned the most holy, for they carried their artificial self-tortures the farthest, and vied with each other in inventing new modes of cruelty against their own persons.⁴⁵ The highest point in this art was reached by Simeon, who, from the year 420, dwelt on a pillar in the neighborhood of Antioch.⁴⁶ In this he was imitated by others, and although at first the example was found by individuals to be doubtful,⁴⁷ yet it was wondered at by the mass. Even so late as the twelfth century, similar pillar-saints (στηλίτης or στυλίτης) appeared in the east.

The female sex could not imitate the men in all these kinds of asceticism, though there were convents for them as early as for the male sex (Ascetriae, Monastriae, Castimoniales, Sanctimoniales, Nonnae).⁴⁸

It is true that the resolution of devoting themselves to a monastic life was now to be declared, and penance was imposed on those who drew back; but yet the teachers of the Church looked upon this retraction not merely as possible, without farther permission, but even advisable under certain circumstances.⁴⁹

MONACHISM IN THE WEST.

Jo. Mabillon Observ. de monachis in Occidente ante Benedictum. (Acta SS. Ord. Bened. Saec. I. Praef. p. 7.)

Monachism was first acknowledged in the west by Athanasius, although it was generally looked upon as an excrescence of oriental fanaticism, with a surprise which not unfrequently amounted to contempt and hatred. Yet it also found numerous warm friends, many of whom went as far as Egypt and Palestine, for the purpose of being initiated into the new mode of life.¹ Ambrose and Jerome were the influential promoters of it in Italy. The former established a monastery at Milan.² At for sanctus, castus, or according to Benedicti regula, c. 63, paterna reverentia: according to Jablonski Opusc. ed. te Water, t. i. p. 176, properly Ennueneh or Nueneh, i. e., quae non est hujus saeculi, quae saeculo renunciavit.—The lady president was called mother, ἀμμάς (Pallad. l. c. c. 42).

The mode of life of the western monks was far less strict than that of the eastern; partly in consequence of the climate, and partly out of regard to the general feeling of the people.¹⁵ Another important point of difference was that the monks in the west soon abandoned mechanical labor.¹⁶ Here also there was not uniformity among them.¹⁷ Besides the monks and nuns who lived in convents, some wandered about,¹⁸ others led an ascetic life, occasionally at considerable expense, in the cities,¹⁹ others imitated the most striking asceticism of the orientals, frequently indeed only in appearance.²⁰

RELATION OF THE MONKS TO THE CLERGY.

The monks, as such, belonged to the laity, the convents forming separate churches whose presbyters were usually abbots¹ standing in the same dependent relation to bishops as did the other churches with their people. As monachism was considered the perfection of Christianity, it was natural to choose clergymen from the monks. At first the stricter monks were much dissatisfied with this arrangement;² but the aversion to it soon ceased, and even at the end of the fourth century, monastic life was considered to be the usual preparation, and monachism the nursery for the clergy, especially for bishops.³

The idea of transferring monachism, as much as possible, entirely to the clergy, was natural in these circumstances; and it was especially adopted in the west. The venerable Paphnutius had prevented the celibacy of the clergy from being enacted as an ecclesiastical law, in Nicaea;⁴ but now this regulation took Neuter enim sinit eum, quem semel suae familiaritati devinxerit, vel quieti cellulae ulterius operam dare, vel divinae theoriae per sanctarum rerum intuitum purissimis oculis inhaerere. FIFTH CHAPTER.

HISTORY OF PUBLIC WORSHIP.

The church had triumphed over heathenism. It had acquired riches, external influence, and power. The effect of this was seen in the increasing splendor of its ceremonial. At the same time, a great number of those who now pressed into the church brought with them that purely external tendency peculiar to heathen religions, which turned on the sensuous forms of worship, partly with a one-sided aesthetic interest, and partly Synesius, when about to be bishop of Ptolemais, wrote, among other things, even to his brother Euoptius (Ep. 105): 'Ἐμοὶ ὁ τε θεὸς, ὁ τε νόμος, ἢ τε ἱερὰ Θεοφίλου χεὶρ γυναικὰ ἐπιδέδωκε· προαγορεύω τοῖνον ἅπασι καὶ μαρτύρομαι, ὡς ἐγὼ ταύτης οὔτε ἀλλοτρῴσσομαι καθάπαξ, οὔτε ὡς μοιχὸς αὐτῇ λάθρα συνέσομαι· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἤκιστα εἴσεβες, τὸ δὲ ἤκιστα νόμιμον· ἀλλὰ βουλήσομαι τε καὶ εὖξομαι, συχνά μοι πάνυ καὶ χρηστὰ γενέσθαι παιδία. Ullmann's Gregor v. Naz. S. 551, ss.) Whether Gregory of Nyssa was married is matter of dispute. Rupp (Gregor's v. Nyssa Leben u. Meinungen, S. 24), with Clemencet and others, denies it. Nicephorus Callistus first mentions this marriage; Tillemont also recognizes it. St. P. Heyns Disp. de Gregorio Nysseno, Lugd. Γενόμενος κληρικὸς ἐκεῖ, ἦν νόμος γαμήσας πρὶν κληρικὸς γίνηται, μετὰ τὸ κληρικὸς γενέσθαι συγκαθενδήσας αὐτῇ, ἀποκήρυκτος γίνεται· τῶν ἐν ἀνατολῇ πάντων γνώμη ἀπεχομένων, καὶ τῶν ἐπισκόπων, εἰ καὶ βούλοιντο, οὐ μὴν ἀνάγκη νόμου τοῦτο ποιοῦντων. with a superstitious veneration. Even those who were capable of higher views yielded to this tendency, either that the pagans might be the more readily won over to Christianity, or from a desire to show honor to a supposed pious intention.¹ But in proportion as the internal life evaporated from the Church, and its external reputation increased, the more usual did it become to impress the character of a law externally binding on ecclesiastical usages which had been gradually developed. Thus the entire ecclesiastical life was overburdened with forms which were merely tolerated at first, but finally converted into laws.²

been accustomed to pay their heroes.³ This took place the more readily as the scrupulous aversion to excessive veneration of the creature died away in the church after the victory over heathenism; and the despotic form of government became accustomed to a slavish respect for the powerful.⁴ Thus the old custom of holding meetings for public worship at the graves of the martyrs now gave occasion to the erection of altars and churches (Μαρτύριον, Memoria)⁵ over them. In Egypt, the Christians, following an old popular custom, began to preserve the corpses of men reputed to be saints in their houses;⁶ and since the

Zachæus: Istud quidem nec debeo probare nec possum, quia evidentibus Dei dictis non Angelos, nec quoslibet coeli ac terræ vel aëris principatus adorare permittimur. Divini enim speciale hoc nomen officii est, et altior omni terrena veneratione reverentia: sed sicut in hujusmodi malum primum adulatio homines impulit, sic nunc ab errore consuetudo vix revocat; in quo tamen incautum obsequium, non aliquem divinum deprehenditis cultum. Sed propter similitudinem amabilium vultuum gaudia intenta plus faciunt, quam hi forte exigant, quibus defertur, aut perfungi oporteat deferentes; et licet hanc incautioris obsequii consuetudinem strictiores horreant Christiani, nec prohibere desinant sacerdotes, non tamen Deus dicitur cujus effigies salutatur, nec adoleunt thure imagines, aut colendæ aris superstant, sed memoria pro meritis exponuntur, ut exemplum factorum probabilium posteris præsentent, aut præsentent pro abusione castigent. ⁶ A practice strongly disapproved by St. Anthony. Comp. Athanasius in vita Antonii (Opp. t. ii. p. 502): Τῶν δὲ ἰδελῶν βιαζομένων μείναι αὐτὸν παρ' αὐτοῖς, κάκεά τελειω- idea of communion with the martyrs was always increasingly associated with the vicinity of their mortal remains, the latter were drawn forth from their graves and placed in the churches,⁷ especially under the altars.⁸ Thus respect for the martyrs received a material object to center itself on, and became in consequence more extravagant and superstitious. To the old idea of the efficacy of the martyrs' intercession,⁹ was now added the belief, that it was possible to communicate the desires to them directly; an opinion partly founded on the popular notion that departed souls still hovered about the bodies they had once inhabited;¹⁰ partly on the high views entertained of the glorified state of the martyrs¹¹ who alone abide with the Lord. As Origen first laid the foundation of this new kind of respect for martyrs, so the Origenists were the first who addressed them in their sermons, as if they were present and besought their intercession.¹² But though the orators were somewhat extravagant tores vitæ, actuumque nostrorum.—Pseudo-Ambrosii (perhaps Maximi Taurinensis about 430) Sermo vi. de Sanctis : Cuncti martyres devotissime percolendi sunt, sed specialter ii venerandi sunt a nobis, quorum reliquias possidemus. Illi enim nos orationibus adjuvant, isti etiam adjuvant passione : cum his autem nobis familiaritas est. Semper enim nobiscum sunt, nobiscum morantur, hoc est, et in corpore nos viventes custodiunt, et de corpore recedentes excipiunt : hic ne peccatorum labes assumat, ibi ne inferni horror invadat.

¹¹ So that people attributed to them a kind of omnipresence, as the heathen did to the demons (Hesiodi Opera et Dies, v. 121, ss.); cf. Hieronymus adv. Vigilantium : Tu Deo leges pones ? Tu Apostolis vincula injicies, ut usque ad diem judicii teneantur custodia, nec sint cum Domino suo, de quibus scriptum est : Sequuntur agnum, quocumque vadit (Apoc. xiv. 4) ? Si agnus ubique, ergo, et hi, qui cum agno sunt, ubique esse credendi sunt. Gregorii Naz. Orat. xviii. in laudem Cypriani, p. 286 : Σὺ δὲ ἡμᾶς ἐποπτεύεις ἄνωθεν ἰλεως, καὶ τὸν ἡμέτερον διεξάγεις λόγον καὶ βίον, καὶ τὸ ἱερὸν τοῦτο ποιμνιον ποιμαίνεις, ἢ συμποιμαίνεις, κ. τ. λ. Prudentius Peristephanon hymn. i. v. 16, ss. ix. v. 97, and often. Sulpicius Severus Ep. ii. de Obitu b. Martini (ed. Lips. 1709, p. 371) : Non deerit nobis ille, mihi crede, non deerit : intererit de se sermocinantibus, adstant orantibus : quodque jam hodie præstare dignatus est, videndum se in gloria sua sæpe præbebit, et assidua, sicut ante paullulum fecit, benedictione nos proteget. Ep. iii. p. 381 : Martinus hic pauper et modicus coelum dives ingreditur : illinc nos ut spero custodiens, me hæc scribentem respicit te legentem. At first, Vigilantium (404) resisted this opinion (see below, § 106, note 6), and Jerome defended it against him (see above). On this Augustine also combated it, while he endeavored at the same time to defend independently of it, the practice of praying to the martyrs, which had been already established. Cf. Augustinus de Cura gerenda pro mortuis (A.D. 421) c. 13 : Si rebus viventium interesset animæ mortuorum, et ipsæ nos quando eas videremus alloquerentur in somnis ; ut de aliis taceam, me ipsum pia mater nulla nocte desereret, quæ terra marique secuta est, ut mecum viveret.—Isaias propheta dicit (lxiii. 16) : Tu es enim pater noster : quia Abraham nescivit nos, et Israel non cognovit nos. Si tanti Patriarchæ quid erga populum ex his procreatum ageretur ignoraverunt, quomodo mortui vivorum rebus atque actibus cognoscendis adjuvandisque miscerentur ? With regard to the martyrs, he is not indisposed indeed to allow a miraculous exception (cap. 16), but proceeds : Quamquam ista quaestio vires intelligentiæ meæ vincit, quemadmodum opitulentur Martyres iis, quos per eos certum est adjuvari ; utrum ipsi per se ipsos adsint uno tempore tam diversis locis,—sive ubi sunt eorum Memoriae, sive præter suas Memorias ubicumque adesse sentiuntur : an ipsis in loco suis Meritis congruo ab omni mortalium conversatione remotis, et tamen generaliter orantibus pro indigentibus supplicantium,—Deus—exaudiens Martyrum preces, per angelica ministeria usquequaque diffusa præbeat hominibus ista solatia, quibus in hujus vitæ miseria judicat esse præbenda : et suorum merita Martyrum, ubi vult, quando vult, quomodo vult, maximeque per eorum Memorias, quoniam hoc novit expedire nobis ad aedificandum fidem Christi—mirabili atque ineffabili potestate ac bonitate commendet. Res hæc altior est, quam ut a me possit attingi, et abstrusior, quam ut a me valeat perscrutari : et ideo quid horum duorum sit, an vero fortassis utrumque sit, ut aliquando fiant per ipsam præsentiam Martyrum, aliquando per Angelos suscipientes personam Martyrum, definire non audeo : malleam a scientibus ista perquirere. Cf. de Civit. Dei, xxii. c. 9. In his sermons he does not attack the usual opinion, ex. gr. sermo de Diversis 316 (al. 94) : Ambo (Paulus et Stephanus) modo sermonem nostrum auditis : ambo pro nobis orate.

in this respect, the poets, who soon after seized upon the same theme, found no colors too strong to describe the power and glory of the martyrs.¹³ Even relics soon began to work miracles, and to become valuable articles of commerce on this account, like the old heathen instruments of magic.¹⁴

In proportion as men felt the need of such heavenly intercessors, they sought to increase their number. logue; and thus a still more comprehensive saint-worship arose out of the veneration paid to martyrs.¹⁶ Martyrs before unknown announced themselves also in visions; others revealed the places where their bodies were buried. Till the fifth century, prayers had been offered even for the dead saints;¹⁷ but at that time the practice was discontinued as unsuitable.¹⁸ It is true that the more enlightened fathers of the church insisted on a practical imitation of the saints in regard to morality as the most important thing in the new saint-worship,¹⁹ nor were

Age, numquid tam demens est aliquis, aut salutis suae immemor, ut honorificentiam regis vindicet comiti, cum de hac re si qui etiam tractare fuerint inventi, jure ut rei damnentur majestatis? Et isti se non putant reos, qui honorem nominis Dei deferunt creaturae, et relicto Domino conservos adorant; quasi sit aliquid plus, quod reservetur Deo. Nam et ideo ad regem per tribunos aut comites itur, quia homo utique est rex, et nescit quibus debeat republicam credere. Ad Deum autem, quem utique nihil latet (omnium enim merita novit), promerendum suffragatore non opus est, sed mente devota. Ubicumque enim talis loquutus fueret ei, respondebit illi. Possunt pro peccatis rogare nostris, qui proprio sanguine etiam si qua habuerunt peccata laverunt. Isti enim sunt Dei martyres, nostri praesules speculatores vitae actuumque nostrorum. Non erubescamus eos intercessores nostrae infirmitatis adhibere, etc. Even Chrysostom recommends (de Sanctis martyr. Serm. 68, Opp. v. 872), the worship of martyrs and their relics as a means of procuring the forgiveness of sins, and virtues.

for patrons, so patron-saints were now selected.²³ And since the heathen had been so bitterly accused at an earlier period by the Christians of worshiping dead men,²⁴ they could not now be blamed in their turn for ridiculing the new saint-worship.²⁵

In the fourth century no peculiar reverence above other saints was as yet shown to the Virgin Mary. In consequence of monastic ideas (see § 95, note 23), the Christians merely attributed a high value to her perpetual virginity; and for this reason began to declare the opinion that she had afterward borne children to Joseph²⁶ to be heretical; as, for instance, Epiphanius

Though it was the general belief that angels guarded men, and presented their prayers to God, it was still thought unal-

Et virgo, quantum a viro; non virgo, quantum a partu. Clemens Alex. Strom. vii. p. 889: Τοῖς πολλοῖς καὶ μέχρι νῦν δοκεῖ ἡ Μαριὰμ λεχῶ εἶναι διὰ τὴν τοῦ παιδίου γέννησιν, οὐκ οὔσα λεχῶ· καὶ γὰρ μετὰ τὸ τεκεῖν αὐτὴν μαιωθεῖσαν φασὶ τινες παρθένον εἶρηθῆναι. Epiphanius, Haer. lxxviii. § 19, does not hesitate to say, in reference to Luke ii. 23, Exod. xiii. 2: Οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ἀνοίγων μύτραν μητρός. On the contrary, Ambrosius, Ep. 42 (al. 81, al. 7), ad Siricum P.: Haec est virgo, quae in utero concepit: virgo, quae peperit filium. Sic enim scriptum est: Ecce virgo in utero accipiet, et pariet filium (Es. vii. 14), non enim concepturam tantummodo virginem, sed et parituram virginem dixit. Quae autem est illa porta sanctuarii, porta illa exterior ad Orientem, quae manet clausa; et nemo, inquit, pertransibit per eam, nisi solus Deus Israel (Ezech. xlv. 2)? Nonne haec porta Maria est, per quam in hunc mundum redemptor intravit? . . . de qua scriptum est, quia Dominus pertransibit per eam, et erit clausa post partum; quia virgo concepit et genuit. Hieronymus adv. Pelagianos, lib. ii. (Opp. ed. Martian. t. iv. P. ii. p. 512): Solus enim Christus clausas portas vulvae virginalis aperuit quae tamen clausae jugiter permanserunt. Haec est porta orientalis clausa, per quam solus Pontifex ingreditur et egreditur, et nihilominus semper clausa est.

Their heresy was: Ἀντὶ Θεοῦ ταύτην παρεισάγειν σπουδάζοντες,—ὡς εἰς ὄνομα τῆς ἁειπαρθένου κολλυρίδα τινα ἐπιτελεῖν, καὶ συνάγεσθαι ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ,—καὶ εἰς ὄνομα αὐτῆς ἱερουργεῖν διὰ γυναικῶν. This usage is perhaps explained by Jerem. xlv. 19, where the women offer cakes to the Queen of Heaven; perhaps by Conc. Quinisexti, can. 79: "The birth of the Virgin was ἀλόχευτος: hence no cake (σεμίδαλις) shall be presented after the birthday of Christ προφάσει τιμῆς λοχεῶν τῆς ἀχράντου παρθενότητος."

lowable to address them, because of the passages, Coloss. ii. 18, Revelation of John xix. 10; xxii. 8, 9.³² Ambrose is the first who recommends seeking the intercession of the guardian angel;³³ but as yet the Christians had not adopted a more general worship of angels.³⁴

The cross, always a highly honored symbol among Christians,³⁵ had been more superstitiously venerated ever since the time when Constantine believed that he owed to it his victory over Maxentius.³⁶ But after the tradition had spread, from the end of the fourth century, that Helena (326) had discovered the true cross of Christ,³⁷ relics and even imitations of it began to

In the time of Sozomen there was, as it is true, a church in Constantinople, named Μιχαήλιον, but solely for this reason (Sozom. ii. 3): *Καθότι πεπίστευται ἐνθάδε ἐπιφαίνεσθαι Μιχαὴλ τὸν θεῖον Ἀρχάγγελον.

³⁷ This story is false. Eusebius de vita Const. iii. 25, relates at great length how the holy sepulcher was cleared out at the command of Constantine, not of Helena, and the church of the resurrection built over it, but says nothing of the discovery of the cross. Then not till c. 41, ss. does he speak of the journey of Helena to Palestine, and how she built churches at the spot where Christ was born in Bethlehem, and on the locality of the ascension on the Mount of Olives. The Gaul also, who was in Jerusalem a.d. 333, and mentions all the holy objects in the city in his Itinerarium (Vetera Rom. Itineraria, ed. P. Wesseling, p. 593), knew nothing of the holy cross and its finding. The oldest testimony alleged for it, but which notwithstanding does not speak of Helena, in Cyrilli Hieros. Epist. ad Constantium, professedly written about a.d. 351, is a later interpolation. It can not have been known before the fifth century, for Jerome, in Catal. s. v. Cyrillus, does not mention it, and Ambrose Orat. de obitu Theodosii, Jo. Chrysostomus Hom. 85 (al. 84), Paulinus Nolanus Epist. 31 (al. 11), Rufinus Hist. eccl. x. 7, 8, Socrates, i. 17, Sulpic. Sever. Hist. sacr. ii. 34, are ignorant of it; since otherwise they would not have related the circumstances of the finding, and especially the recognition of the true cross so differently. The

Helena set the first example of a pilgrimage to Palestine, which was soon extensively imitated.⁴⁰ By this means ideas of the holiness of that country had increased so much, even to the grossest superstition,⁴¹ that many teachers of the Church openly discouraged these pilgrimages.⁴²

credulous Sozomen (ii. 1) first speaks of this letter of Cyril. The conclusion of it, in which the emperor is designated as δοξάζων τὴν ὁμοούσιον τριάδα is decidedly adverse to its authenticity. For Cyril, in the time of Constantius, was not an adherent of the Nicene faith, and that this emperor was not so might have been unknown a considerable time after, in different places. Comp. (On the other hand, Epist. 47, ad Desiderium: adorasse, ubi steterunt pedes Domini, pars fidei est, et quasi recentia nativitatis et crucis ac passionis vidisse vestigia.) Especially zealous is Gregorii Nysseni Epist. περὶ τῶν ἀπίοντων εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα against these pilgrimages (reprinted also as an appendix to J. H. Heidegger de Peregrinationibus religiosis. Turici. 1670. 8). We see from his letters that even then Jerusalem was remarkable for corruption of morals, as places of pilgrimage usually are: Εἰ ἦν πλέον ἢ χάρις ἐν τοῖς κατὰ Ἱεροσόλυμα τόποις οὐκ ἂν ἐπεχωρίαζε τοῖς ἐκεῖ ζώσιν ἡ ἁμαρτία. Νῦν μὲντοι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀκαθαρσίας εἶδος, ὃ μὴ τολμᾶται παρ' αὐτοῖς, καὶ πονηρίαί, καὶ μοιχεῖαι, καὶ κλοπαί, καὶ εἰδωλολατρεῖαι, καὶ φαρμακεῖαι, καὶ φθόνοι, καὶ φόνοι.

but also of other distinguished men.⁴⁴ On the other hand, it was still reckoned a heathen practice to represent objects of worship by pictures.⁴⁵ At first, allegorical representations of sacred doctrines, and historical pictures taken from the Scriptures or from the history of martyrs, were allowed in the churches. Of these the earliest instances in the east are mentioned by Gregory of Nyssa; ⁴⁶ in the west, by Paulinus, bishop of Nola (409—

The first pictures of this kind which we find in a Gallic Church at the end of the fifth century do not, it is true, imply that they were worshiped;⁴⁹ but soon after, superstition connected itself with the likenesses of miracle-working persons, which were placed in houses.⁵⁰ Under Leo the Great, we find the first picture of Christ in a Romish Church.⁵¹

Since *basilicae*¹ had frequently been converted into churches after the time of Constantine, and churches had been built in the form of basilicae,² the name basilica was also the more readily transferred to the churches themselves,³ because it was susceptible in this instance of a signification so appropriate. The churches, now large and splendid, were divided into three parts: the νάρθηξ (πρόναος, ferula) porch, from which the beautiful gates, πόλαι ὡραίαι (according to Acts iii. 2–10), led into the body of the church, ναός, navis (where was the ἄμβων, pulpitum), which again was divided from the βῆμα, sacrarium, sacristy, by cancelli, κιγκλίδες, a lattice-work. There were usually other buildings attached to the churches, and especially a baptistery, βαπτιστήριον, with the font, piscina, fons, κολυμβήθρα. All the buildings were situated in an inclosed court (αἶθριον, αὐλή, atrium), in which was also a reservoir or large vessel of water (κρήνη, cantharus) for washing the hands before entering the church, after the ancient, originally Jewish fashion.

christl. Kirchen vom 5ten bis zum 14ten Jahrh. von J. G. Müller. Trier. 1835. 8. S. 42, ss.). These Salvator-pictures continue for a long time the only ones. Pictures of the crucified, the Ecce-homo, the dead Christ in the bosom of the mother, belong to the middle ages. The caput radiatum or the nimbus was taken from heathen and transferred to Christian art. See Schoepflin Comment. hist. et crit. p. 69, Münter's Sinnbilder, ii. 23.—The Thomas-Christians in India suppose that Cyril introduced the to them hateful pictures. See La Croze Hist. du Christianisme des Indes, a la Haye, 1724: 4. p. 243. Assemanus Bibl. Orient. iii. ii. 401, endeavors indeed to prove that this tradition can not be very old; but it is a remarkable fact that it is also related by the Copt Elmacin (about 1250) on whose authority it is repeated by Makriz (about 1400). (See Renaudot Hist. Patr. Alex. p. 114, Makrizii Hist. Coptorum ed. Wetzer. Solisb. 1828. 8. p. 53.) On any supposition, it is historically established that pictures were introduced into churches in the time of Cyril.

¹ The Roman basilica, an imitation of the στοὺ βασιλική in Athens, consisted partly of an oblong four-cornered space, which served principally for a place of merchandise, and partly of a second space situated over against the entrance which formed a semicircle, and in which a court was held, the so called tribunal. See Vitruv. v. i. Hirt's Baukunst, iii. 180. Dr. F. Kugler's Handbuch der Kunstgeschichte. Stuttgart. 1842.

² On the form of the churches, see the description of the city of Rome by Platner, Bunsen, Gerhard, and Röstell, i. 419. Die Basiliken des christl. Roms. Kupfertafeln u. Erklärung (von Bunsen). München. 1843. fol.

³ Hieronymus Ep. 35; epitaph. Nepotiani: basilicas ecclesiae.

Fasts, hitherto voluntary, were now prescribed by the Church.⁴ Festival days were more regularly arranged, and, at the same time, multiplied. In the east, the Epiphany was celebrated as the festival⁵ both of the birth and baptism of our Lord; in the west, the 25th December had been adopted as the birth-day ever since the middle of the fourth century;⁶ the custom proceeding from Rome and spreading into the different parts of the empire. This festival began now to obtain in the east;⁷ and at last, also (shortly before 431) in Egypt.⁸ The Epiphany was observed in addition as the day of baptism, and came to be kept as such even in the west.⁹ The celebration of the passover, as customary in Asia Minor, had been rejected at the council of Nice;¹⁰ and since that time, those who still retained it were regarded as heretics, Τεσσαρεσκαίδεκατῖται, Quartodecimani.¹¹ With respect to the appointment of the Easter festival, they followed for the most part the patriarch of Alexandria;¹² yet not always, especially in the west; and thus Easter was sometimes observed on different Sundays in different provinces.¹³ The Paschal festival, which was announced at the

Emiseni homilia λεχθεῖσα κθ' Χοιῶκ (25 Dec.) ἐν τῇ μεγάλῃ ἐκκλησίᾳ Ἀλεξανδρείας—εἰς τὴν γέννησιν τοῦ Κυρίου, κ. τ. λ. About the same time under bishop Juvenalis the festival was also adopted in Jerusalem, which was united with Alexandria against Antioch. See Basilides Seleuc. de S. Stephano, in S. Joannis Chrysostomi de Educandis liberis lib. ejusdem tractatus alii quinque, etc. ed. Franc. Combefis. Paris. 1656. 8. p. 302.

⁹ The first trace of it is in 360, when Julian, according to Ammian. Marcell. xxi. c. 2, celebrated the Epiphany in the church at Vienne. In the west, the commemoration of the arrival of the Magi (i. e., three kings, according to Psalm lxxii. 10) and the first miracle in Cana were united with this feast. Bingham, vol. ix. p. 80. Studuerunt itaque sancti Patres occasionem hujus erroris auferre, omnem hanc curam Alexandrino Episcopo delegantes (quoniam apud Aegyptios hujus supputationis antiquitus tradita esse videbatur peritia), per quem quotannis dies praedictae solemnitatis Sedi apostolicae indicaretur, cujus scriptis ad longinquiores Ecclesias indicium generale percurreret.

Epiphany, was preceded by the Quadragesima (τεσσαρακοστή)¹⁴ and divided into the πάσχα σταυρώσιμον, hebdomas magna, the great week, in which the feria quinta (ἡ ἁγία πέμπτη), the παρασκευή, and the Sabbatum magnum were distinguished from one another; and into the πάσχα ἀναστάσιμον, the week of the resurrection, which ended with the Dominica in albis (καινὴ κυριακή). This festival was followed by the Quinquagesima (πεντηκοστή), which included the ascension (ἀνάληψις), and ended with pentecost (πεντηκοστή).

The nightly service (vigiliae, παννυχίδες) which preceded the Easter festival was observed with great splendor;¹⁵ but now similar vigils were also annexed to other festivals, especially to those in honor of martyrs.

RITEs AND CEREMONIES OF WORSHIP.

Christian worship was now invested with a splendor hitherto unknown. The clergy began to wear a peculiar costume while engaged in holy things.¹ In some of the services lights were and in the west, the cycle of eighty-four years. With the Alexandrians, Easter festival must fall between 22d March and 25th April; with the Latins, between the 18th March and the 21st April. Hence there was a difference in the keeping of Easter, and hence arose the discussions respecting it. Ideler, ii. 254, ff. For this reason, Leo M. Ep. 121 (see note 12), applied to the emperor Marcian: Obscero clementiam vestram, ut studium vestrum praestare dignemini, quatenus Aegyptii, vel si qui sunt alii, qui certam hujus supputationis videntur habere notitiam, scrupulum hujus sollicitudinis absolvant, ut in eum diem generalis observantia dirigatur, qui nec paternarum constitutionum normam relinquat, nec ultra praefixos terminos evagetur. Quicquid autem pietas vestra de hac consultatione cognoverit, ad meam jubeat mox notitiam pervenire, ut in divinis mysteriis nulla dissonantiae culpa nascatur.

also used in the day-time;² and in the fifth century frankincense began to be employed.³ More attention was paid to the music. The custom of singing in responses, first introduced into the Church at Antioch,⁴ soon spread in the east, and was transferred to the Western Church by Ambrose.⁵ The disciplina arcani (distinction between the initiated and uninitiated) reached its highest development in the fourth century,⁶ but afterward gradually disappeared as heathenism ceased. Public worship (λειτουργία,⁷ missa)⁸ was divided on account of it into several the east; in the west it was not yet in use (cf. Pertsch de Origine, usu et auctoritate pallii archiepiscopalis. Helmst. 1754. 4. p. 91, ss). That no tonsure was ever practiced either by monks or clergymen may be inferred from Hieronymus ad Ezech. xlv. 20: Quod sequitur: caput suum non radent neque comam nutrient, sed tondentes attondebunt capita sua, perspicue demonstratur, nec rasis capitibus, sicut sacerdotes cultoresque Isidis ac Serapis nos esse debere, nec sursum comam demittere, quod proprie luxuriosorum est, barbarorumque et militantium, sed ut honestus habitus sacerdotum facie demonstraretur, etc. Comp. ³ The first certain trace of it is found in Pseudo-Dionys. Areop. de Eccl. hier. c. 3. It had been used before as a mark of honor to the emperors. See § 99, note 4.

⁴ According to Theodoretus H. E. ii. 19. Flavianus and Diodorus, two monks in Antioch, in the time of Constantius, were its originators: Οὔτοι πρῶτοι, διχῆ διελόντες τοῖς τῶν ψαλλόντων χοροῖς, ἐκ διαδοχῆς ἄδειν τὴν Δαντικὴν ἐδίδαξαν μελωδίαν· καὶ τοῦτο ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ πρῶτον ἀρξάμενον πάντοσε διέδραμε, καὶ κατέλαβε τῆς οἰκουμένης τὰ τέρματα. According to Theodore of Mopsvestia in Nicetæ Acomin. Thesaurus orthodoxiæ, v. 30, they first only translated Antiphonics from the Syriac into Greek: and Socrates, vi. 8, attributes the first introduction of this kind of music to Ignatius (Augusti Diss. de hymnis Syrorum. Vratisl. 1814. 8. Hahn über den Gesang in der syrischen Kirche, in the Kirchenhist. Archive für 1823, iii. 52). The custom of singing in responses was especially diffused by the monks (τῶ ἀντίφωνον, ἀντίφωνοι ὕμνοι). Comp. generally M. ⁸ Missa, i. e. missio: as remissa, offensa, for remissio, offensio. Avitus (archbishop of Vienne about 490) in Epist. i.: In Ecclesiis, Palatiisque, sive Prætoriiis missa fieri pronuntiatur, cum populus ab observatione dimittitur. In the first part of the service, which consisted of psalms, readings, and sermon, even the unbelieving portion of the people were permitted to join. After their retiring, the proper missa catechumenorum followed, which was a series of prayers, whereby the catechumens, penitents, and possessed, were dismissed in classes (by the call οἱ ἀκοινωνῆτοι περιπατήσατε. μή τις τῶν κατηχουμένων), etc. (Cf. Conc. Carthag. iv. ann. 398, can. 84: Ut Episcopus nullum prohibeat ingredi

parts (missa catechumenorum, and missa fidelium),⁹ and received more definite formularies.¹⁰

Baptism, now preceded by unction, was frequently delayed as long as possible.¹¹ Against this abuse several teachers of the Church zealously remonstrated.¹² The baptism of infants did Ecclesiam, et audire verbum Dei, sive gentilem, sive haereticum, sive Judaeum, usque ad missam catechumenorum. Augustini Sermo 49, § 8: Ecce post sermonem fit missa catechumenis: manebunt fideles, venietur ad locum orationis). According to this analogy, the last part of public worship was called missa fidelium, i. e., the service with which the fideles were dismissed, and which ended with the call ἀπολύεθε, i. e., missa est (this dismissal was among the Greeks, ἡ ἀπόλυσις τῆς ἐκκλησίας). Since the last part was the most important, it was also called in particular missa (cf. Ambrosii Ep. 20, al. 14, ad Marcellinam sororem: post lectiones atque tractatum dimissis catechumenis—missam facere coepi). Finally the name was transferred to every public service. Thus it is applied to the meetings of the monks for prayer, Cassian. Institt. ii. c. 13, missa nocturna, iii. c. 5, missa canonica.

¹⁰ The arrangement of public worship and single formularies had been already established for a long time; but now there were added to them formularies of prayer too; complete liturgies were made, and those of the apostolic churches were soon derived from their founders. Proclus Episc. Constantinop. (about 440) de traditione divinae Missae (in Gallandii Bibl. In the fifth century the liturgy of Basil had been spread almost over all the east. But in addition to it, that of Chrysostom also, proceeding from Constantinople, gradually obtained acceptance. The Alexandrians derived their liturgy from Mark, the Romans from Peter, the Milanese from Barnabas and Ambrose. No liturgy of this period, with the exception of that in the Constitut. apost., has been preserved free from alteration. Comp. Leonis Alatii de Libris ecclesiasticis Graecorum, diss. ii. not become universal until after the time of Augustine. The baptism of heretics was still, in the fourth century, rejected for the most part in the east; and afterward the baptism of single parties only was excepted.¹³ On the contrary Augustine established the milder practice of the west on firm principles.¹⁴

As to the Lord's Supper, the Christians of that period recognized in it the flesh and blood of Christ, and even spoke of a transformation; but only in a figurative sense.¹⁵ As this rite

C. 78: Dicimus, accipientibus non prodesse (baptismum), cum in hæresi accipiunt consentientes hæreticis: et ideo veniunt ad catholicam pacem atque unitatem, non ut baptismum accipiant, sed ut eis prodesse incipiat quod acceperant.

was looked upon in the light of a sacrifice,¹⁶ the idea was naturally suggested, that God could be propitiated by it, and in this way it was even already abused, and that frequently, by superstition.¹⁷ The Agapae had been, for a considerable time past, in most countries separated from the Supper,¹⁸ and converted didly acknowledged that the fathers, to Chrysostom, and particularly Augustine, did not teach the doctrine of transubstantiation. Very clear passages on this subject are furnished by the polemical demonstrations against Eutyches and the Monophysites, so far as they had been always accustomed to compare the union of the earthly with the heavenly in the Supper, with the incarnation of Christ, and now borrowed a proof from the rite in favor of the fact, that the human nature in Christ did not cease to exist after the union. So Theodoretus Eranistes, Dial. ii. (ed. Schulze, t. iv. p. 126): Οὐδὲ μετὰ τὸν ἀγιασμὸν τὰ μυστικὰ σύμβολα τῆς οἰκειας ἐξίσταται φύσεως· μένει γὰρ ἐπὶ τῆς προτέρας οὐσίας καὶ τοῦ σχήματος, καὶ τοῦ εἶδους·—νοεῖται δὲ ἄπερ ἐγένετο, καὶ πιστεύεται καὶ προσκυνεῖται, ὡς ἐκεῖνα ὄντα ἄπερ πιστεύεται. First to this controversy is to be assigned Chrysostom's Epist. ad Caesarium, although even Leontius Hierosolym. (or Byzantium, about 600) in Maji Scriptt. vett. coll. vii. i. 130, 135, Joannes Damasc., and others, cite this letter as belonging to Chrysostom. The same is preserved in Latin, in a codex Florentinus, and was first discovered and employed by Peter Martyr. The first edition by Bigot (appended to Palladii vita Chrysostom, see above, § 85, note 6), was torn out of the copies by royal command (see Chauferpié and Bayle, in their Dictionnaires, art. Bigot). The second edition appeared, according to a copy of Scipio Maffei, with Greek fragments, in Canisii Lectt. aut ed. Basnage, i. 235. Comp. especially Salig de Eutychianismo ante Eutychen, p. 367. In this letter it is said: Antequam sanctificetur panis, panem nominamus, divina autem illum sanctificante gratia, mediante sacerdote, liberatus est quidem appellatione panis, dignus autem habitus est dominici corporis appellatione, etiamsi natura panis in ipso permansit. Comp. How value was still attributed to the fact, that the laity also received the cup, may be seen from Leo I. Sermo iv. de Quadrages. (§ 86, note 6). Chrysostom. in Epist. ii. ad Cor. Hom. 18: Ἔστι δὲ ὅπου οὐδὲ δέιστηκεν ὁ ἱερεὺς τοῦ ἀρχομένου, οἶον ὅταν ὑπολαύειν δέη τῶν φρικτῶν μυστηρίων· ὁμοίως γὰρ πάντες ἀξιοῦμεθα τῶν αὐτῶν· οὐ καθάπερ ἐπὶ τῆς παλαιῆς τὰ μὲν ὁ ἱερεὺς ἤσθιε, τὰ δὲ ὁ ἀρχόμενος, καὶ θέμις οὐκ ἦν τῷ λαῷ μετέχειν, ὡν μετέχειν ὁ ἱερεὺς· ἀλλ' οὐ νῦν· ἀλλὰ πᾶσιν ἐν σῶμα πρόκειται, καὶ ποτήριον ἐν.

into entertainments which families prepared on the death of relatives, churches on the anniversaries of martyrs, and at which clergy and poor were regular guests.¹⁹ But because the heathen notions of the people found in them the reappearance of their Parentalia and sacrificial festivals, drunkenness soon pervaded them.²⁰ Hence they began to be discountenanced and opposed, so it was also believed that even in the time of the Apostles the agapae were observed after the Supper. Chrysost. Hom. xxvii. in 1 Cor. (on xi. 27); Pelagius in 1 Cor. xi. 20; Theodoret. in 1 Cor. xi. 16.—Remains of the old custom were still found in several parts of Egypt, in which the Lord's Supper was observed on the Sabbath, after the evening meal, Socrates, v. 22; Sozom. vii. 19; and in the African mode to celebrate the Supper after the evening meal on the Thursday before Easter. Conc. Carthag. iii. ann. 397, c. 29: Ut sacramenta altaris non nisi a jejunis hominibus celebrentur, excepto uno die anniversario, quo coena domini celebratur. Cf. Augustin. Ep. 54, ad Januarium, c. 9.

¹⁹ Comment. in Job (among the works of Origen, belonging to the fourth century), lib. iii. p. 437: Celebramus (diem mortis) religiosos cum sacerdotibus convocantes, fideles una cum clero, invitantes adhuc egenos et pauperes, pupillos et viduas saturantes, ut fiat festivitas nostra in memoriam requiei defunctis animabus, quarum memoriam celebramus, nobis autem efficiatur in odorem suavitatis in conspectu aeterni Dei. Augustini Ep. xxii. ad Aurelium, c. 6: Istae in coemeteriis ebrietates et luxuriosa convivia non solum honores martyrum a carnali et imperita plebe credi solent, sed etiam solatia mortuorum. Id. contra Faustum, xx. 20: Agapes nostrae pauperes pascunt sive frugibus, sive carnibus—plerumque in agaribus etiam carnes pauperibus erozantur. Theodoret. Graec. affect. curat. disp. viii. (ed. Schulze, iv. 923): Ἀπὸ τῶν Πανδίων καὶ Διασίων καὶ Διονυσίων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἡμῶν ἑορτῶν, Πέτρον καὶ Παῦλον—καὶ Ἀντωνίου καὶ Μανρικίου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων μαρτύρων ἐπιτελοῦνται δημοθροναίαι· καὶ ἀντὶ τῆς πάλαι πομπείας καὶ αἰσχροουργίας—σώφρονες ἑορτάζονται πανηγύρεις, οὐ μέθην ἔχουσαι, καὶ κῶμων, καὶ γέλωτα, ἀλλ' ἕμνους θείοις, καὶ ἱερῶν λογίων ἀκρόασιν, καὶ προσευχῆν ἄξιπταίνοις κοσμουμένην δακρύοις. Juliani Imp. fragm. (ed. Spanhem. p. 305): Ὡσπερ οἱ τὰ παιδία διὰ τοῦ πλακοῦντος ἐξαπατῶντες—πίθεισιν ἀκολουθεῖν ἑαυτοῖς—τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ αὐτοὶ πρόπον ἀρξάμενοι (οἱ δυσσεβεῖς Γαλιλαῖοι) διὰ τῆς λεγομένης παρ' αὐτοῖς ἀγάπης καὶ ὑποδοχῆς καὶ διακονίας τραπέζων—πιστοὺς ἐπήγαγον εἰς τὴν ἠθεότητα. The use of these Agapae was defended by the council of Gangra against the darker asceticism of the Eustathians. Can. 11: Εἰ τις καταφρονοῖ τῶν ἐκ πίστεως ἀγάπας ποιοῦντων καὶ διὰ τιμὴν τοῦ κυρίου συγκαλοῦντων τοὺς ἀδελφούς, καὶ μὴ ἐθέλοι κοινωνεῖν ταῖς κλήσεσι, διὰ τὸ ἐξετελιζεῖν τὸ γινόμενον, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

²⁰ Even teachers of the church compared them with those heathen festivities. See Theodoret, note 19. Chrysostom (Hom. xlvii. in S. Julianum) advises his hearers to partake of the meal to be appointed in honor of the martyr beside his church (τοῦ μαρτυρίου πλησίον ὑπὸ σκῆν ἢ ἄμπελον), instead of joining in the heathen feasts in Daphne, a suburb of Antioch. Hence some even supposed that they had been appointed by their ancestors as a substitute for those heathen banquets. See Gregorius Nyss. in vita Gregor. Thaum. Div. I. § 70, note 9. So also Augustine explains the origin of them to his church (Ep. xxix. ad Alypium, c. 9): Post persecutiones—cum facta pace turbae gentilium in christianum nomen venire cupientes hoc impedirentur, quod dies festos cum idolis suis solerent in abundantia epularum et ebrietate consumere, nec facile ab his—voluptatibus se possent abstinere, visum fuisse majoribus nostris, ut huic infirmitatis parti interim parceretur, diesque festi post eos quos relinquebant alii in honorem SS. Martyrum vel non simili sacreligio, quamvis simili luxu celebrarentur. On the drunkenness at these meals. Ambrosius de Elia et Jejunio, c. 17: Calices ad sepulchra Martyrum deferunt, atque illic ad vesperam bibunt, et aliter se exaudiri posse non credunt. Augustin. Ep. 22, ad Aurelium, c. 3: Comestiones et ebrietates ita concessae et licita putantur, ut in honorem etiam

and even banished from the Church where it could be done without offense, while the clergy were forbidden to take part in them.²¹ Thus these festivals ceased in most countries, though in some they still continued beyond the present period.²²

beatissimorum Martyrum non solum per dies solemnes, sed etiam quotidie celebrantur. Gregorius Naz. Carm. ccxvii. thus addresses those who took part in such feasts :

*Nῦν δὲ τί τάρβος ἔχει με, ἀκούσατε ὦ φίλόκομοι,
Πρὸς τοὺς δαιμονικοὺς αὐτομολεῖτε τύπου.*

On the festivals of the martyrs, traders sold in the sanctuary that which was necessary for the feasts, Basilii M. regula major, qu. xl. : 'Αλλ' οὐδὲ τὰς ἐν τοῖς μαρτυρίοις γινόμενας ἀγορασίας οἰκείας ἡμῖν ὁ λόγος δεικνυσιν (he then mentions how Christ drove the sellers out of the temple). Paulinus Nol. nat. S. Felicis ix. : Divendant vina tabernis. Sancta precum domus est Ecclesia. Thus the Manichaean Faustus, not without reason, reproached the Catholics (Augustin. contra Faust. xx. 4) : Sacrificia eorum (gentilium) vertistis in agapas, idola in Martyres, quos votis similibus colitis : defunctorum umbras vino placatis et dapibus.

²¹ In the east, the Laodicean council enacted (probably 363) can. 28 : Ὅτι οὐ δεῖ ἐν τοῖς κυριακοῖς ἢ ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις τὰς λεγομένας ἀγάπας ποιεῖν, καὶ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ τοῦ θεοῦ ἐσθίειν καὶ ἀκούβιτα στρωννύειν. Accordingly they were, even in Antioch, celebrated beside the places dedicated to the martyrs. See Chrysostom, note 20. About 392 they were no longer observed in the greatest part of the west out of Africa. See Augustini Ep. xxii. ad Aurelium, c. 4 : Per Italiae maximam partem, et in aliis omnibus aut prope omnibus transmarinis Ecclesiis partim nunquam facta sunt, partim vel orta vel inveterata—Episcoporum diligentia et inimadversione exstincta atque deleta sunt. In Milan, Ambrose had forbidden them (Augustin. Confess. vi. 2, ne ulla occasio se ingurgitandi daretur ebriosis, et quia illa quasi parentalia superstitioni gentilium essent simillima). In Rome, Alethius, at the funeral of his wife, entertained all the poor in the basilica S. Petri (Paulinus Nol. Ep. 33) ; Pammachius on the contrary gave rich alms on a similar occasion (Hieron. Ep. 26, ad Pammach. c. 2). In Nola they kept vigils on the festival of the birth of St. Felix, while all the night through they ate and drank in the church of the saint. Paulinus, since he could not abrogate this practice, endeavored by means of pictures which he brought into the church to give a more serious direction to the joy (Paulini nat. Felicis ix. Compare above § 99, note 47). In Africa, where those festivals were universal (August. de Moribus eccl. cath. i. 34) : Novi—multos esse qui luxoriosissime super mortuos bibant, et epulas cadaveribus exhibentes, super sepultos se ipsos sepeliant, et voracitates ebrietatesque suas deputent religioni. Augustine used his influence against them. He first of all motioned for their abolition from Aurelius, bishop of Carthage, in the Epist. xxii. ad Aurelium, cf. c. 6 : Mihi videtur facilius illic dissuaderi posse istam foeditatem,—si—oblationis pro spiritibus dormientium, quas vere aliquid adjuvare credendum est, super ipsas memorias non sint sumptosae, atque omnibus petentibus sine typho et cum alacritate praebeantur : neque vendantur (that is, when that which was intended to serve as oblations is not offered for sale there), sed si quis pro religioni aliquid pecuniae offerre voluerit, in praesenti pauperibus eroget. Afterward he effected their abrogation in Hippo ; in what way is related by him Ep. xxix. ad Alypium, in the year 395. Finally it was enacted by the Conc. Carthag. iii. ann. 397, c. 30 : Ut nulli Episcopi vel Clerici in Ecclesia convivantur, nisi forte transeuntes hospitiorum necessitate illic reficiantur : populi etiam ab hujusmodi convivii quantum fieri potest prohibeantur.

²² In Syria they are mentioned at a time so late as that of Theodoret, without blame, see note 19, and Theodoret's Hist. eccles. iii. 11, where he relates how the martyrs, Juveninus and Maximinus in Antioch, were honored, μέχρι δὲ τήμερον ἐτησίῳ δημοθουίῳ γεραίρονται.—The council Quinisextum, A.D. 692, repeats can. 74 of the can. HISTORY OF MORALS.

HISTORY OF CHRISTIAN ETHICS.¹

The disposition already manifested in the preceding period to lay too much stress on certain forms of external discipline, had now been much increased by the influence of monachism. Fasting and almsgiving,² as well as prayer, were regarded as expiatory of sins. The theater, dancing, and other amusements,³ were branded as absolutely sinful; oaths,⁴ the taking of interest for money lent,⁵ every kind of self-defense,⁶ capital punishments,⁷ and second marriages,⁸ were rejected. In the fourth century, indeed, those who had been legally divorced were still universally allowed to marry again,⁹ though this was discouraged as well as second marriages generally; but in the fifth century, the Latin church began to forbid the divorced person to marry as long as the other party lived.¹⁰ So prevalent was now the spirit of monachism, that the married state began to be considered as something impure,¹¹ and only a tolerated evil.¹² Even certain kinds of food were forbidden.¹³

Contumelia enim creatoris solvit jus matrimonii circa eum, qui relinquitur, etc. Epiphanius. Haer. 59, § 4: 'Ο δὲ μὴ δυννηθεὶς τῇ μᾶ ἄρκεσθῆναι τελευτησάσῃ, [ἡ] ἐνεκὲν τίνος προφάσεως, πορνείας ἢ μοιχείας, ἢ κακῆς αἰτίας χωρισμοῦ γενομένου, συναφθέντα δευτέρα γυναῖκί ἢ γυνῇ δευτέρῳ ἀνδρὶ, οὐκ αἰτιάται ὁ θεὸς λόγος, οὐδὲ ἀπὸ τῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ τῆς ζωῆς ἀποκηρύττει, ἀλλὰ διαβαστάζει διὰ τὸ ἄσθενές, οὐχ ἵνα δύο γυναῖκας ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ σῆψῃ ἐτι περιούσης τῆς μᾶς, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ μᾶς ἀποσχεθεὶς δευτέρα, εἰ τύχοιεν, νόμῳ συναφθῆναι. Cf. Asterius, below, § 105, note 18. Bingham, vol. ix. p. 301, ss. 349, ss.

¹² Hieronymus adv. Jovinian. i. 4, with reference to 1 Cor. vii. 1: Si bonum est mulierem non tangere, malum est ergo tangere: nihil enim bono contrarium est nisi malum. Si autem malum est, et ignoscitur; ideo conceditur, ne malo quid deterius fiat.—Oro, te quare illud bonum est, quod orare prohibet? quod corpus Christi accipi non permittit? Quando impleo mariti officium, non impleo Christiani. Yet he was obliged in the Epist. 30 (al. 50) ad Pammachium, pro libris adv. Jovinianum apologia to make some concession. Among other things he writes: Cum toties et tam crebro lectorem admonuerim,—me ita recipere nuptias, continentes viduas virginesque praeferrem: debuerat prudens et benignus lector etiam, ea, quae, videntur dura, aestimare de ceteris, etc. Augustine is more moderate in the work called forth by this very controversy between Jovinian and Jerome, de Bono conjugali. Among other things, he writes. c. 8: Duo bona sunt concubium et continentia, quorum alterum est melius. Cap. 10: Certe dubitare fas non est, nuptias non esse peccatum. Non itaque nuptias secundum veniam concedit Apostolus (1 Cor. vii. 6).

morals now assumed the aspect of a series of arbitrary, divine, despotic commands.¹⁴ And since those rigorous principles were not at all observed by most people, they promoted the spirit of indifference toward the divine precepts generally, and prepared the way for the unfortunate distinction between a higher virtue, which was solely for the monks, and a lower, which was sufficient for common Christians.¹⁵

It seems at first sight contradictory to this external strictness, yet it is in fact intimately connected with it, that most of the church fathers of this period maintained, in addition to that apparent moral severity,¹⁶ lax principles concerning veracity, which threatened the very foundations of genuine virtue.¹⁷ order.⁵ This corruption of the clergy was not a little increased by the interference of the emperors with ecclesiastical disputes. While, on the one side, the clergy were always carrying their spiritual pride higher,⁶ on the other, they frequently changed their opinions at the beck of the court. Synods were the theater on which this new pharisaism of the Christian clergy, along with a rough passionateness, was chiefly exhibited.⁷

647. Ἐπειτα χαλκὸς χρυσὸν ἠμφοισμένους,
Ἦ καὶ χαμαιλέοντος ἑκστασις χροῶς;
Πῶγων, κατηφῆς ἦθος; ἀχένους κλάσις,
Φωνῇ βραχεῖα, πιστὸς ἔσκευασμένος,
651. Νωθρὸν βάδισμα, πάντα, πλὴν φρενὸς, σοφός.
696. Αἰσχυρῶν μὲν οὖν αἰσχιστον ἢ τρόπου πλάσις.

Thus it became the custom, especially in consequence of the example of the monks (see Bingham, vol. ii. p. 189, ss.), seemingly to decline receiving ecclesiastical honors when presented. Cf. lex Leonis, A.D. 469 (Cod. Justin. i. 3, 31): Nemo gradum sacerdotii pretii venalitate mercetur:—Cesset altaribus imminere profanus ardor avaritiæ, et a sacris adytis repellatur piaculare flagitium.—Nec pretio, sed precibus ordinetur antistes. Tantum ab ambitu debet esse sepositus, ut quaeratur cogendus, rogatus recedat, invitatus effugiat: sola illi suffragetur necessitas excusandi. Profecto enim indignus est sacerdotio, nisi fuerit ordinatus invitus. This priestly decorum led of course, very frequently, merely to a mock reluctance and hesitation. Cf. Gregorius Naz. Orat. xvii. de se ipso, p. 466: Οὐ γὰρ ἵνα ζητηθῶμεν ἀποκρυστόμεθα· οὐδ' ἵνα πλείονος ἄξιοι δόξωμεν τιμῆς.

In like manner he calls the bishops (Carmen de vita sua, p. 28) Χριστέμποροι. When he was invited to the synod at Constantinople, A.D. 382, he replied, Epist. 55, ad Procopium: Ἐχω μὲν οὕτως, εἰ δεῖ τάληθες γράφειν, ὥστε πάντα σύλλογον φεύγειν ἐπισκόπων, ὅτι μηδεμιᾶς συνόδου τέλος εἶδον χρηστὸν, μηδὲ λύσειν κακῶν μᾶλλον ἐσχηκίας, ἢ προσθήκην. In the mean time, however, zeal for morality among the clergy was not rare. This zeal for morality fearlessly found fault with sin where it existed, opposed with spirit tyrannical barbarity,⁸ took under its powerful protection all that needed help,⁹ and left behind even permanent monuments of benevolence and concern for the public good.¹⁰

MORAL INFLUENCE OF THE CHURCH ON THE PEOPLE.

The clergy thus sinking into degeneracy were now called to solve the most difficult problem that could ever, perhaps, be presented to an order of Christian teachers. A highly cultivated people, but one sunk in unbelief and superstition of every kind, now crowded into the church,¹ impelled, for the most part, by interested motives; a people either for the most part fully devoted to paganism in their heart,² or apprehending Christianity from a heathen point of view,³ and transferring into it even heathen customs or Jewish practices.⁴ In addition to this, the new converts were demoralized by all the vices which follow in the train of over-refinement, and confirmed in them by the example of the court which had been growing more corrupt ever since its removal to the east, and by the example of the nobility.⁵ Christian knowledge and Christian faith, in place of unbelief and superstition, and piety for vice, had to be infused into this spiritually dead mass. To be successful, the Gospel needed to be proclaimed in its spiritual aspect with apostolic zeal; but the greater portion of the clergy depended for the most part on external means; and thereby gave Christianity the character of a compulsory institute, promoting the superstitious and external view of it.

The Christians soon forgot the principles of religious toleration which they had so prominently exhibited and insisted on in their former persecutions;⁶ and fanatical voices were raised among them calling for a violent suppression of paganism.⁷ It was not without the co-operation of the Christian clergy that the prohibitions of heathenism were always assuming a stricter tone, and that the laws against Judaism were more and more circumscribing.⁸ The treatment of heretics, too, became more severe.⁹ At first the Catholic Christians were contented to render them innocuous by interdicting their meetings or by banishment.¹⁰ The execution of Priscillian (§ 86) was still universally regarded with abhorrence.¹¹ At the same time, however, Augustine allowed himself to be persuaded that corporal punishments against heretics were allowable and fit;¹² and Leo

Paulus cum in theatro spectaculum ipse esset, Christo ecclesiam congregabat?—Aut non manifesta se tum Dei virtus contra odia humana porrexit: cum tanto magis Christus praedicaretur, quanto magis praedicari inhiheretur? At nunc, proh dolor! divinam fidem suffragia terrena commendant: inopsque virtutis suae Christus, dum ambitio nomini suo conciliatur, arguitur. Terret exiliis et carceribus Ecclesia, credique sibi cogit, quae exiliis et carceribus esse credita: pendet a dignatione communicantium, quae persequentium esse consecrata terrore: fugat sacerdotes, quae fugatis est sacerdotibus propagata: diligi sese gloriatur a mundo, quae Christi esse non potuit, nisi eam mundus odisset. Haec de comparatione traditae nobis olim Ecclesiae, nunc quam perditae, res ipsa, quae in oculis omnium est atque ore, clamavit.

¹¹ Not only by Latinus Pacatus, in his Panegyricus Theodosio dictus, c. 29, but also by bishops: Sulpic. Severus Hist. sacr. ii. 50: Namque tum Martinus (bishop of Turouum) apud Treveros constitutus, non desinebat increpare Ithacium, ut ab accusatione desisteret: Maximum orare, ut sanguine infelicium abstineret: satis superque sufficere, ut Episcopali sententia haeretici iudicati Ecclesiis pellerentur: novum esse et inauditum nefas, ut causam Ecclesiae iudex saeculi iudicaret. How he behaved when he came again to Treves, after the murder of Priscillian may be seen in Sulpic. Sever. Dial. iii. c. 11–13. Maximus wished that the persecution of the Priscillianists should be continued in Spain; but pia erat sollicitudo Martino, ut non solum Christianos, qui sub illa erant occasione vexandi, sed ipsos etiam haereticos liberaret. Besides cavit cum illa Ithacianae partis communiione misceri. Ambrose, too, who was with Maximus as ambassador from Valentinian II., A. D. 387, endeavored there (Ambros. Ep. 24, ad Valentin.) abstinere ab episcopis,—qui aliquos devios licet a fide ad necem petebant. Cf. Ep. 26. Indeed, at that time every kind of capital punishment was pretty generally regarded as forbidden.

the Great went so far as to approve the putting of them to death.¹³ Besides, the bishops endeavored by means of ecclesiastical laws, not only to prevent all contact of the faithful with the opponents of the church,¹⁴ but ventured even to absolve individuals from the obligation of duties which they manifestly owed to heretics.¹⁵

hujus animositatis perniciem detestari, ut in ea nunquam fuisse credatur, etc. Cf. Retract. ii. 5. How the Donatists attack these new principles, and how Augustine defends them, may be seen in ejusd. contra litt. Petiliani lib. ii. Contra Gaudentium lib. i. Epist. 185, ad Bonifacium, among other things, § 21, it is written: Melius est quidem—ad Deum colendum doctrina homines duci, quam poenae timore vel dolore compelli. Sed non quia isti meliores sunt, ideo illi qui tales non sunt, negligendi sunt. Multis enim profuit (quod experimentis probavimus et probamus) prius timore vel dolore cogi, ut postea possent doceri. Then he refers, § 24 the cogite intrare (Luc. xiv. 23) to this point: ipse Dominus ad magnam coenam suam prius adduci jubet convivas, postea cogi.—In illis ergo, qui leniter primo adducti sunt, completa est prior obedientia, in istis autem, qui coguntur, inobedientia coercetur. Still Epist. 100, ad Donatum, Procons. Africae: Unum solum est, quod in tua justitia, pertinescimus, ne forte—pro immanitate facinorum, ac non potius pro lenitatis christianae consideratione censeas coëcendum, quod te per Jesum Christum ne facias obsecramus.—Ex occasione terribilium judicium ac legum ne in aeterni judicii poenas incidant, corrigi eos cupimus, non necari; nec disciplinam circa eos negligi volumus, nec supplicii, quibus digni sunt, exerceri. So, too, Epist. 139, ad Marcellinum: Poena sane illorum, quamvis de tantis sceleribus confessorum, rogo te, ut praeter supplicium mortis sit, et propter conscientiam nostram, et propter catholicam mansuetudinem commendandam. Cf. Ph. a Limborch Historia inquisitionis. (Amst. 1692. fol.) lib. i. c. 6. J. Barbeyrac Traité de la morale des pères, c. 16, § 19. Jerome, however, says, Epist. 37 (al. 53) ad Riparium, adv. Vigilantium: Non est crudelitas pro Deo pietas. Unde et in lege dicit: si frater tuus et amicus et uxor, quae est in sinu tuo, depravare te voluerit a veritate, sit manus tua super eos, et effunde sanguinem eorum, et auferes malum de medio Israel (Deut. xiii. 6, ss.). Chrysostom, indeed, recommends Christian love toward heretics and heathen (Hom. 29 in Matth.), but would yet have them restrained, and their assemblies forbidden, and declares himself only against putting them to death (Hom. 46 in Matth.). Thus also, he caused their churches to be taken from the Novatians, Quartodecimani, and other heretics in Asia, and many considered his misfortunes a righteous retribution for this. ¹³ The first law of a Christian emperor, authorizing capital punishment against certain heretics, is that of Theodosius I. A.D. 382, against the Manichaeans. Sozomen, however, vii. 12, says of all the laws of this emperor against heretics: Χαλεπὰς τοῖς νόμοις ἐπέγραψε τιμωρίας, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐπέζηει· οὐ γὰρ τιμωρεῖσθαι, ἀλλ' εἰς θεὸς καθιστᾶν τοὺς ὑπηκόους ἐσπούδαζεν. (Cf. Socrates, v. 20): and Socrates, vii. 3, still maintains: Οὐκ εἰωθὸς διώκειν τῇ ὀρθοδόξῳ ἐκκλησίᾳ. On the other hand, Leo M. Epist. 15, ad Tarribium:—Etiā mundi principes ita hanc sacrilegam amentiam (Priscillianistarum) detestati sunt, ut auctorem ejus cum plerisque discipulis legum publicarum ense prosternerent.—Profuit diu ista districtio ecclesiasticae lenitati, quae etsi sacerdotali contenta judicio, cruentas refugit ultiones, severis tamen christianorum principum constitutionibus adjuvatur, dum ad spiritale nonnumquam recurrit remedium, qui timent corporale supplicium.

right path, in her measures instituted for the purpose of gaining over the masses of external professors to the side of Christianity internally. She endeavored to give her service the external attractions of the heathen worship, and thus only strengthened the tendency to externalities; thus she herself invited men to substitute for a genuine interest in religion and the service of God a feeling quite foreign to piety. On the one hand, many were confirmed in the heathenish, superstitious notion of looking for works acceptable to God in the external rites of his worship; on the other hand, there were not a few, especially in the cities, who went to the churches as if to the theater, with a mere aesthetic interest; and followed the spiritual orators as they would rhetoricians;¹⁶ while, on the contrary, they did not remain to be present at the Lord's Supper,¹⁷ a circumstance which necessarily led to the command to partake of it.¹⁸ Meetings for public worship began to be even abused, as occasions for sensual excesses.¹⁹ Finally, the theological disputes of this period were also an important obstacle in preventing Christianity from exercising its full power on the men of the age. While they were contending about definitions, as if the essence of Christianity consisted in them; the interest of the understanding being in a one-sided way excited in favor of it;²⁰ it was no wonder that among many Greeks the interest in favor of Christianity was of the same nature with an interest in sophistical problems;²¹ the holiest relations being torn asunder at the same time by hatred and discord.²² And then, again, as the prevailing systems changed, sometimes one and sometimes another being enforced by wordly power, it was almost an unavoidable consequence that the people should either be made suspicious of Christianity and indifferent to it, or else tempted to employ falsehood and hypocrisy in the most sacred things.²³

It is true that monachism appeared likely to subordinate every thing to a striving after the highest, by means of its example in giving a wholesome stimulus to the enervated race;²⁴ but it was itself too impure in most of its manifestations to be able to give pure impressions, while it brought confusion into moral ideas by its arbitrary mode of worship. In former times, this external strictness of morals had found a corresponding internal basis in the minds of men; but now it was to be made prominent, in a degree much increased by monachism, among a people devoid of faith. Of course the people endeavored to make the pressure of the new law as light as possible,²⁵ to which monachism itself contributed most readily by making a distinction between a higher and a lower virtue.²⁶ To introduce a Christian morality into the life of society, the church began to extend its penance to smaller offenses likewise,²⁷ and at the numerous councils an extensive code of laws was formed, which fixed certain ecclesiastical punishments for different ecclesiastical and moral transgressions, according to their external form. In the eastern church, this penance was left to the free-will of the transgressors, in the case of private offenses; particularly after Nectarius, bishop of Constantinople, had abolished (about 391) the πρεσβύτερος ἐπὶ τῆς μετανοίας (see Div. I. § 71, note 11).²⁸ But in the western church, they began to consider it a necessary condition of forgiveness for all gross sins,²⁹ and in order

Respecting the latter: § 9: Implicatus igitur tam mortiferorum vinculis peccatorum detrectat, aut differt, aut dubitat confugere ad ipsas claves Ecclesiae, quibus solvatur in terra, ut sit solutus in caelo: et audet sibi post hanc vitam, quia tantum Christianus dicitur, salutem aliquam polliceri?—Judicet ergo se ipsum homo—et mores convertat in melius. Et cum ipse in se protulerit severissimae medicinae, sed tamen medicinae sententiam, veniat ad antistites, per quos illi in Ecclesia claves ministrantur: et tamquam bonus jam incipiens esse filius, maternorum membrorum ordine custodito, a praepositis sacramentorum accipiat satisfactionis suae modum.—Ut si peccatum ejus non solum in gravi ejus malo, sed etiam in tanto scandalo aliorum est, atque hoc expedire utilitati Ecclesiae videtur antistiti, in notitia multorum, vel etiam totius plebis agere poenitentiam non recuset, non resistat, non letali et mortiferae plagae per pudorem addat tumorem. However, de Symbolo ad Catechumenos, c. 7: Illi, quos videtis agere poenitentiam, scelera commiserunt, aut adulteria, aut aliqua facta immania: inde agunt poenitentiam. Mediator enim Dei et hominum homo Christus Jesus hanc praepositas Ecclesiae tradidit potestatem, ut et confitentibus actionem poenitentiae darent et eosdem salubri satisfactione purgatos ad communionem sacramentorum per januam reconciliationis admitterent. Cui utique operi inaccessibiliter ipse Salvator intervenit, nec unquam ab his abest, quae ministris suis exequenda commisit, dicens: Ecce ego vobiscum sum, etc. (Matth. xxviii. 20), ut si quid per servitum nostram bono ordine et gratulando impletur effecta, non ambigamus per Spiritum Sanctum fuisse donatum. Cf. SEVENTH CHAPTER.

ATTEMPTS AT REFORMATION.

The new tendencies of Christian life could not slide in unnoticed, especially as it is certain that the Catholic church was frequently reproached with them by the older Christian parties.¹ Nor were the morally dangerous aspects of these tendencies entirely overlooked by the more acute; though they were too often excuplated on the ground of pious intentions.² The men who Augustin. contra Faust. xx. 4): Vos, qui desciscentes a gentibus monarchiæ opinionem primo vobiscum divulsistis, id est, ut omnia credatis ex Deo; sacrificia vero eorum vertistis in agapas, idola in Martyres, quos votis similibus colitis; defunctorum umbras vino placatis et dapibus; solemnes gentium dies cum ipsis celebratis, ut calendas, et solstitia; de vita certe mutastis nihil; estis sane schisma, a matrice sua diversum nihil habens nisi conventum. The Novatians also rejected the worship of martyrs and relics. See Eulogius Patr. Alex. (about 580) contra Novatianos lib. Vto. (ap. Photius Cod. 280; cf. Cod. 182): perhaps also Eustathius (Conc. Gangr. c. 20, comp. however, Dallæus adv. Latinorum de cultus religiosi objecto tradit. p. 151). Eunomius was an opponent of martyr-worship (auctor hujus hæreseos. Hieron. adv. Vigilant.) and of monachism (Gregor. Nyssen. contra Eunom. lib. ii.).

² As Hieronym. adv. Vigilant. (Opp. iv. ii. p. 284): Cereos autem non clara luce accendimus, sicut frustra calumniaris, sed ut noctis tenebras hoc solatio temperemus.—Quod si aliqui per imperitiam et simplicitatem saecularium hominum, vel certe religiosarum feminarum, de quibus vere possumus dicere: confiteor, zelum Dei habent, sed non secundum scientiam (Rom. x. 1) hoc pro honore Martyrum faciunt, quid inde perdis? Causabantur quondam et Apostoli, quod periret unguentum; sed Domini voce correpti sunt (Matth. xxvi. 8, ss.). Neque enim Christus indigebat unguento, nec Martyres lumine cereorum: et tamen illa mulier in honore Christi hoc fecit, devotioque mentis ejus recipitur; et quicumque accedunt cereos, secundum fidem suam habent mercedem, dicente Apostolo: unusquisque in suo sensu abundet (Rom. xiv. 5). Augustin. ad Januarium lib. ii. (Epist. 55) § 35: Quod autem instituitur præter consuetudinem, ut quasi observatio sacramenti sit, approbare non possum, etiamsi multa hujusmodi propter nonnullarum vel sanctarum vel turbulentarum personarum scandala devitanda, liberius improbare non audeo. Sed hoc nimis doleo, quod multa, quae in divinis libris saluberrime praecepta sunt, minus curantur; et tam multis praesumptionibus sic plena sunt omnia, ut gravius corripatur, qui per octavas suas terram nudo pede tetigerit (namely neophytus, cf. Tert. de Cor. mil. c. 3. See Div. I. § 53, note 25), quam qui mentem violentia sepelierit. Omnia itaque talia, quae neque sanctarum scripturarum auctoritatibus continentur, nec in conciliis episcoporum statuta inveniuntur, nec consuetudine universae ecclesiae roborata sunt, sed pro diversorum locorum diversis moribus innumerabiliter variantur, ita ut vix aut omnino nunquam inveniri possint causae, quas in eis instituentis homines secuti sunt, ubi facultas tribuitur, sine ulla dubitatione reseccanda existimo. Quamvis enim neque hoc inveniri possit, quomodo contra fidem sint: ipsam tamen religionem, quam

SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY.

IN THE EAST.

In Persia, where there were numerous churches under the metropolitan bishop of Seleucia and Ctesiphon, Christianity had become an object of suspicion ever since it had prevailed in the Roman empire. The recommendation of Constantine, therefore, in favor of the Persian Christians, had no permanent or good influence with the king (Sapor II. 309-381).¹ When a war broke out soon after between the Romans and Persians, Sapor began a tedious and horrible persecution of the Christians with the execution of Simon, bishop of Seleucia and Ctesiphon (343), under the pretense of his being a spy of the Romans.² After Sapor's death, indeed, this persecution ceased, Jezdegerd I. (400-421) being at first even a friend to the Christians; but the fanatic Abdas, bishop of Susa, by the destruction of a fire-temple (414) brought on another persecution as severe, which was finally extinguished by Theodosius II. making war on the Persians (422).³ The Persian church was always in close connection with the Syrian, and exhibited the same theological tendency. When, therefore, Nestorianism in its native land was forced to give way to violence, it found a secure asylum among Persian Christians; from which time the Persian church separated itself from that of the Roman empire.⁴

Christianity had also been introduced into Armenia as early as the second century.⁵ In the time of Diocletian, it was spread more widely by Gregory the Illuminator,⁶ who gained over king Tiridates himself to its side, and was consecrated first metropolitan of Armenia in 302 by Leontius, bishop of Caesarea.⁷ The long contests that followed, with the adherents of the old religion, had an important political character, so far as the one party was supported by the Persian, the other by the Roman emperors.⁸ But when, after the greatest part of Armenia had come under the Persian dominion (428), the Persian kings wished to procure by violence a victory for the Zend-doctrine over Christianity, they found such determined opposition, that they were at last obliged to allow the Christians the free exercise of their religion, after a lengthened war (442–485).⁹ In the fifth century, Mesrop gave the Armenians their alphabet and a version of the Bible.¹⁰—Christianity was carried into Iberia under Constantine the Great.¹¹

At the same time it was introduced into Ethiopia by Fruementius; first at court, and, very soon after, throughout the country.¹² In southern Arabia among the Homerites, Constantius endeavored to establish Christianity by means of Theophilus (about 350).¹³ He seems, however, not to have produced any considerable effect.

IN THE WEST.

In the preceding period Christianity had been known among the Goths (Div. I. § 57), and there was even a Gothic bishop at the council of Nice.¹ After Arianism had been fathered upon them by their ecclesiastical connection with Constantinople,² Ulphilas, who was consecrated bishop in 348 at Constantinople, became their apostle.³ When the Christian Goths were oppressed by a persecution, he led a great multitude of them into the habitation about Nicopolis in Moesia, which Constantius had assigned them (355), where, after inventing the Gothic alphabet, he translated the Bible into Gothic.⁴ Afterward, Frithigern broke off from Athanarich, the leader of the Visigoths, who persecuted the Christians, with a part of the people, was supported by Valens, and spread Christianity among his subjects. And when the Huns pressed upon the Goths, this portion of the Visigoths received a place of residence from Valens, in Thrace, on condition of their becoming Christians (375); and Ulphilas was especially active in their conversion. Soon after, Arianism was overthrown by Theodosius. Ulphilas died in Constantinople (388), where he endeavored in vain to revive it. Efforts were now made at Constantinople to procure acceptance for the Nicene confession among the Goths, but without much success.

² According to Theodoret. H. E. iv. 33, Ulfila led away the Goths to Arianism, while he told them ἐκ φιλοτιμίας γεγενῆσθαι τὴν ἔριν, δογματῶν δὲ μηδεμίαν εἶναι διαφορᾶν. It is true, indeed, that the Goths had such a view of the controversy.

Arian Christianity was diffused by the Visigoths with surprising rapidity among the other wandering German tribes, while it was suppressed in the Roman empire.⁵ The fact of the Arian doctrine being more easily apprehended, and hatred to the Romans, procured the confidence of the Germans in Arianism; and it soon obtained the reputation of being as generally the Christianity of the Germans as Homousianism was of the Romans.

The Ostrogoths and Vandals first received Arian Christianity from their countrymen.⁶ The Burgundians had passed indeed into the Catholic Church after their wandering into Gaul (413); but they afterward (about 450) adopted Arianism, along with their kings, belonging to the Visigothic race. In like manner, Catholic Christianity had been at first received by the Suevi in Spain; but Arianism was subsequently disseminated among them by the Visigoths (469). The older Catholic inhabitants of the countries in which these German tribes had settled suffered oppression only from the Visigoths and Vandals.⁷ They were especially persecuted by the latter in a most horrible manner after Africa (431–439) had been conquered by them under their first two kings, Genesic († 477) and Humerich († 484).⁸ The Christianity of the Germans was still mixed, to a considerable degree, with heathenism: what rude notions they entertained of the former may be seen in the practice of buying off crimes with money, which they soon transferred to Christian repentance.⁹

ENTIRE SUPPRESSION OF PAGANISM IN THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

In the east, the remains of paganism disappeared under Jus-tinian I. (527-565), who abolished the New Platonic school at Athens (529),¹ and compelled the heathen to submit to baptism.² Only the free Maenotts in the Peloponnesus clung obsti-nately to it.³ Even in the west it was not yet completely extirpated. Theodoric was obliged to prohibit sacrifices to the gods on pain of death;⁴ and at the end of the fifth century many heathen practices were still continued at Rome, and could not be abolished without resistance.⁵ Still longer did various

The decisions of the council of Chalcedon were regarded by the Egyptian party as completely Nestorian.¹ There was therefore an insurrection of monks in Palestine, led on by one of their number, Theodosius, against Juvenal, bishop of Jerusalem, and favored by the widowed empress Eudoxia, which was finally crushed after much bloodshed (451-453).² But in Alexandria, a considerable party, headed by the presbyter, Timothy ó αἰλουρος, and the deacon Peter ó μογγός (i. e., blaesus, Liberat. c. 16), separated from the newly-appointed bishop Proterius. The greatest part of this faction continued to maintain the doctrine of one nature, rejected the council of Chalcedon, and considered Dioscurus as unjustly deposed;³ while, on the contrary, they

¹ So also the Monophysites related that Leo the Great and Theodoret had been completely reconciled to Nestorius; that the latter had been invited to the Synod of Chalcedon by the Emperor Marcian, but had died on the way. See Zachariae Hist. eccl. in Maji Scriptt. vett. nova coll. x. 361, and Xenayas, bishop of Mabug, about 500, in Assemani Bibl. or. ii. 40. On the other hand, it is remarked by Evagrius, ii. 2, that Nestorius had died previously.

³ The most important representative of this tendency which we have is Severus, Monophysite patriarch of Antioch, from A.D. 513. (See below, note 19.) Comp. my Comm. qua Monophysitarum veterum variae de Christi persona opiniones imprimis ex ipsorum effatis recens. editis illustrantur (Partic. ii. Götting. 1835, 38. 4), i. 9, ss. Severi locus (prim. ed. Mansi, vii. 831. Gallandius, xii. 733, is, according to Maji Scriptt. vet. nova coll. vii. i. 136, from Severi lib. contra Grammaticum, Joannem Ep. Caesareae): Ἐὶς τὰς φύσεις ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ νοοῦμεν, τὴν μὲν κτιστὴν, τὴν δὲ ἄκτιστον· ἀλλ' οὐδεὶς ἐγράψατο τὴν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον τὴν ἄλογον ταύτην γραφῆν, τί δήποτε δύο φύσεις ἠνόμισαν περὶ τῆς τοῦ Ἐμμανουὴλ ἐνώσεως διαλαμβάνοντες. οὐδεὶς ταύτην ἔστησε τὴν κατηγορίαν, ἀλλ' ἔκεινην μίλα δικάως, τί δήποτε μὴ ἠκολοθήσαντες τῷ ἁγίῳ Κυρίλλῳ ἐκ δύο φύσεων ἔφασαν εἶναι τὸν Χριστόν. Οὐ πανσόμεια λέγοντες, ὡς δειξάτω τις τὴν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον ἢ τὸν τόμον Λέοντος τὴν καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἔνωσιν ὁμολογήσαντας, ἢ σύνοδον φυσικὴν, ἢ ἐξ ἁφοῶν ἓνα Χριστόν, ἢ μίαν φύσιν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου σεσαρκωμένην· καὶ τότε γνωσόμεθα, ὡς κατὰ τὸν σοφώτατον Κύριλλον θεωρεῖς μόνῃ ἀνακρίνοντες τὴν οὐσίωδη διαφορὰν τῶν συνεχεθέντων ἀπορήτως εἰς ἓν ἴσασι· καὶ ὡς ἕτερα ἢ τοῦ λόγου φύσις, καὶ ἕτερα ἢ τῆς σαρκὸς, καὶ ὡς δύο τὰ ἀλλήλοις συννηνεγμένα καθορώσι τῷ νῷ, διιστώσι δὲ οὐδαμῶς. Ex ejusd. epist. iii. ad Joannem ducem ap. Majum, l. c. p. 71: Ἐὼς ἂν οὖν εἰς ἔστιν ὁ Χριστὸς, μίαν ὡς ἐνὸς αὐτοῦ τὴν τε φύσιν καὶ τὴν ὑπόστασιν καὶ τὴν ἐνέργειαν σύνθετον ἐπ' ὄρους ὑψηλοῦ, τὸ δὴ λεγόμενον, ἀναβάντες κηρύττομεν, ἀναθεματίζοντες καὶ πάντας τοὺς ἐπ' αὐτοῦ μετὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν δυάδα φύσεων καὶ ἐνεργειῶν δογματίζοντας.—Collatio Catholicorum cum Severianis habita Constantinop. anno 531, ap. Mansi, viii. 822: Quod ex duabus quidem naturis dicere unam significat Dei verbi naturam incarnatam, secundum b. Cyrillum et SS. Patres: in duabus autem naturis duas personas et duas substantias significat. At the same time they allowed that Christ is κατὰ σάρκα ὁμοούσιος ἡμῖν (Leontius de Sectis, act. 5. Evagrius, iii. 5).—Severus ap. Anastasius Sinaita (about 560) in the Ὁδῆγός adv. Acephalos (prim. ed. J. Gretser. Ingolst. 1606. 4), c. 18: Ὡσπερ ἐπὶ τῆς μιᾶς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου φύσεως μέρος μὲν ταύτης ἔστιν ἡ ψυχὴ, μέρος δὲ τὸ σῶμα, οὕτω καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ τῆς μιᾶς αὐτοῦ φύσεως, μέρος τάξιν ἐπέχει ἡ θεότης, καὶ μέρος τὸ σῶμα. This comparison was frequently used by the Monophysites generally after Cyril's example (see Ep. ad Succensum, above § 88, note 21), and in like manner by Philoxenus or Xenayas, bishop of Mabus (488–518) in Assemani Bibl. orient. ii. 25. Gelasius I. (bishop of Rome, 492–496) de duabus naturis in Christo adv. Eutychen et Nestorium (in Bibl. PP. and in Jo. Heroldi Haereseologia. Basil. 1556. p. 686): Adhuc autem etiam illud adjeiciunt, ut sicut ex duabus rebus constat homo, id est ex anima et corpore, quamvis utriusque rei sit diversa natura, sicut dubium non habetur, plerumque tamen usus loquendi singulariter pronunciet, simul utramque complectens, ut humanam dicat naturam, non humanas naturas: sic potentiam in Christi mysterio, et unitiorem divinitatis atque humanitatis unam dici vel debere vel posse naturam: non considerantes, quia cum una natura dicatur humana, quae tamen ex duabus constet, id est ex anima et corpore principaliter, illa causa est, quia nec initialiter anima alibi possit existere, quam in corpore, nec corpus valeat constare sine anima: et merito, quae alterutro sibi sit causa existendi, pariter unam abusive dici posse naturam, quae sibi invicem causam praebet, ut ex alterutro natura subsistat humana, salva proprietate duntaxat duarum. According to the decrees of the synod at Chalcedon, φύσις and οὐσία are synonymous, while τὸ ἄτομον and ἡ ὑπόστασις are different from them. But the Monophysites took φύσις, ὑπόστασις, and ἄτομον synonymously, and separated ἡ οὐσία from them. See Maji Scriptt. vet. nova coll. vii. 1, 11, ss.; my Comm. i. 11. That this was also the phraseology employed by Cyril is acknowledged by Eubulus, bishop of Lystra, ap. Majus, l. c. p. 31, who endeavors to exculpate him on that account. And that this controversy was more about correctness approved of the condemnation of Eutyches, for his supposed Docetism.⁴ But as the doctrine of one nature had before led, in some cases, to the idea of considering the body of Jesus as something superhuman,⁵ so also now, many attributed peculiar excellencies to it.⁶ To the most influential advocates of the doctrine of one nature, Athanasius and Cyril, was now added Pseudo-Dionysius, the Areopagite, whose writings were doubtless composed in Egypt toward the end of the fifth century,⁷ and thereof expression than of idea, even the monk Eustathius, with all his bitterness against Severus, is obliged to allow. See Majus, l. c. p. 291, and my Comm. i. 23.

⁷ De hierarchia coelesti, de hierarchia ecclesiastica, de nominibus divinis, de theologia mystica, epistolæ (ed. Paris. 1644, 2 voll. fol.) falsely ascribed to the Dionysius mentioned in Acts xvii. 34, who, according to Dionys. Corinth. ap. Euseb. iii. 4, iv. 23, was the first bishop of Athens. The first trace of these writings which has been preserved to us, belongs to the beginning of the sixth century, when Joannes Scythopolitanus wrote scholia on them (Le Quien dissert. Damasc. prefixed to his edition of Joannes Damasc. i. fol. xxxviii. verso). The Monophysite patriarch of Antioch, Severus, cites them (see note 8), and the no less respectable orthodox writer Ephraemius, who, from 526, was patriarch of Antioch, refers to them (ap. Photius Cod. 229, ed. Hoeschel. p. 420). When, however, in the collatio Catholicorum cum Severianis, in the year 531, the Monophysites appealed to them (Mansi, viii. 817), Hypatius, archbishop of Ephesus, judged, ostendi non posse, ista vera esse, quæ nullus antiquus memoraverit. Subsequently many were found in the Greek church, who always asserted the spuriousness of these writings (Maximi Prol. in schol. Dionys. p. 45, Photius Cod. 1). In the Latin church, in which they had been widely diffused from fore coincided with the mode of expounding the doctrine of Christ's person adopted by Cyril.⁸ Among the many heretical names which the party received from its opponents,⁹ the appellation Μονοφυσῖται was the most common. On the other hand they called the opposite party Δυοφυσῖται, or Διφυσῖται.¹⁰

The death of Marceian († 457) inspired the Monophysites with new hopes. At Alexandria, Proterius was killed in an insurrection; and Timotheus Aelurus, chosen bishop. The emperor, Leo I. (457–474) actually requested a new decision of the bishops respecting adherence to the decrees of the council of Chalcedon. But as the majority declared themselves in favor of the synod,¹¹ Timotheus Aelurus was banished, and Timotheus

the ninth century, Laurentius Valla († 1457) was the first that detected the imposition. He was followed in his opinion by the ablest scholars of the day; and Jo. Dallaeus de Scriptis, quae sub Dionysii Areop. et Ignatii Ant. nominibus circumferuntur. Genevaae. 1666. 4, finally exhibited in a copious form the evidence of their spuriousness. Cf. le Quien l. c. Salig de Eutychianismo ante Eutychen. Wolfenbuttelae. 1723. 4, p. 159, ss. J. G. V. Engelhardt Diss. de Dionysio Plotinizante. Erlang. 1820. 8. Id. de Origine scriptorum Areopagiticorum. Erl. 1823. 8. The same writer's Die angebl. Schriften des Areopagiten Dionysius, übers. u. m. Abhandlungen begleitet. Sulzbach. 1823, 2 Theile. 8. Baumgarten-Crusius de Dionysio Areop. comm. 1823 (Opusc. theol. p. 261), departing from the opinions of others, attributes these writings to the third century, and thinks they were written with the object of transferring the Greek mysteries to Christianity. See against this hypothesis Ritter Gesch. d. christl. Philos. ii. 519.

¹⁰ So Timotheus Aelurus, in Maji Coll. vii. 1, 277.

σαλοφακίαλος nominated in his place (460), who succeeded in maintaining the tranquillity of Alexandria by his prudent, conciliating conduct toward the opposite party. It is true, that new commotions arose soon after even in Antioch. Peter the Fuller (ὁ γναφεύς), a monk of Constantinople, and an enemy of the council of Chalcedon, endeavored to carry through here the favorite formula of the Monophysites θεὸς ἐσταυρώθη, and even to introduce it into the Trisagion;¹² succeeded in gaining over the monks to his party; and put himself in the place of the deposed patriarch; but not long after he was banished by an imperial decree (about 470), and there was hope of seeing the schism gradually disappear and be every where forgotten. But it proved incurable when Basiliscus, having driven the emperor Zeno Isauricus from the throne (476, 477), declared in favor of the Monophysites, reinstated Timotheus Aelurus and Peter the Fuller in their dignities, and by the Encyclion, required all bishops (476) to condemn the synod of Chalcedon.¹³

Nihil enim differt, sive duarum naturarum unitas inconfusa dicatur, sive ex duabus eodem modo referatur. It was not long, indeed, before the persevering Acacius, patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded in exciting a popular tumult, which was the means of restoring Zeno Isauricus to the throne (477—491); but in the mean time, the principles of the Monophysites had been so firmly established in Egypt by these occurrences, that Zeno, by the advice of Acacius, issued the *Henoticon*¹¹ (482), in which both parties were to be brought into a state of peace and union by reducing the points at issue to more general principles. Peter Mongus was patriarch of Alexandria, and subscribed the Henoticon. Many Monophysites, however, displeased at this, separated from him, and were called Ἀκεφάλοι, without a head.¹⁵ Peter the Fuller was once more appointed patriarch of Antioch (485); though many Syrian bishops were deposed because they would not subscribe the Henoticon. The most decided opposition to church fellowship with the Monophysites was presented by the Roman patriarchs, who had become entirely independent of the emperor since the downfall of the western empire (476). All remonstrances proving vain, Felix II. issued an anathema (484)¹⁶ against Acacius, and communion between the Eastern and Western churches was broken off.

But even in the east, the Henoticon proved but a weak bond of union, since the questions left indeterminate in it, were continually employing the minds of men. At Constantinople, the council of Chalcedon stood high in estimation; and the Acoemetae even continued in communion with the Church of Rome. In Alexandria, the decrees of this council were rejected. In the east, opinions on the subject were divided. Among all these churches, it is true, external fellowship was for the most part maintained by the Henoticon; but it could not be otherwise than that there should be coldness between the parties, which often led to open quarrels. Such was the situation of affairs at the accession of the emperor Anastasius (491-518). He adopted the principle of avoiding all interference in religious matters, except to protect the peace of the citizens against fanaticism.¹⁷

Mon. Epist. ad Timoth. Scholasticum, in Maji Coll. vii. 1, 277: Τούτῳ (Τιμοθέῳ Αἰλούρῳ) καὶ τοῖς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ μέχρι τῆς σήμερον οὐ κοινωνοῦσιν οἱ Σενήρου, ἀκεφάλους αὐτοῦς προσαγορεύοντες. However, Timotheus himself seems to have died before the division, since Severus esteems him highly. See his words, l. c.: Διοσκόρον δὲ καὶ Τιμοθέου τῶν τῆς ἀληθείας ἀγωνιστῶν—τοὺς ἀγῶνας τιμῶ καὶ ἀσπάζομαι. It might be expected that the strictest Monophysites should have belonged to the Acephali, who considered even the body of Jesus as something higher, and these found passages in Timotheus Aelurus, which agreed with them (see note 6), though he had maintained that the body of Christ is of like essence with our own.

But he could not prevent all outbreaks of the latter. In Constantinople itself, he was threatened by the seditious Vitalianus, who put himself forth as a defender of the Chalcedonian synod (514), and was obliged to promise to him that he would effect a restoration of communion with Rome. But all negotiations to bring this about were frustrated by the extravagant demands of the Roman see; and Anastasius carried with him to the grave the hatred, of all the friends of the council of Chalcedon, as may be seen by many narratives written after his death.¹⁸

Under Justin I. (518–527), a popular tumult finally compelled the general and solemn adoption of the Chalcedonian council at Constantinople, and the renewal of Church-communion with Rome (519). The same measures were soon after taken in the east; the Monophysite bishops were deposed, particularly Severus, patriarch of Antioch,¹⁹ Xenayas or Philoxe-

This very congregating of so many bishops in Alexandria now led to internal divisions among the Monophysites themselves.²⁰ From the controversy between Severus and Julian respecting the question whether the body of Christ was subject to that corruption, τῆ φθορᾶ, and was therefore φθαρτόν τι, or not,²¹ which has come upon human bodies by the fall, arose the first and most obstinate dispute, that of the Severians (Theodosiani,²² Φθαρτολάτραι) and the *Julianists*²³ (Gajanitae, Ἀφθαρτοδοκῆται, Phantasiastae.) Soon after there sprang from the former the Ἀγνοηταί, or Themistiani.²⁴ On the other hand, the Julianists were divided into the Ἀκτιστηταί and Κτιστολάτραι. CONTROVERSIES UNDER JUSTINIAN I.

Justinian I. (527–565), a zealous adherent of the council of Chalcedon¹ endeavored to restore unity and order both in state and church by means of laws; for which purpose he tried to bring back the Monophysites in particular, into the church. These endeavors were turned to advantage by a secret Monophysite court party, at whose head stood his spouse, Theodora,² who exercised great influence over him, and who, in the hope of bringing the Catholic Church, step by step, to Monophysitism, persuaded the emperor that the Monophysites took offense simply at points in the Catholic Church, which could be removed without a violation of orthodoxy. But since the dominant church had also its representatives at court, the emperor was led sometimes by the one party, sometimes by the other, to enact regulations, whose natural consequence was to increase rather than remove the causes of dispute.

The conferences between Catholic and Monophysite bishops, which Justinian³ caused to be held, were, on the whole, fruitless. The original Monophysite formula—"God was crucified"—which had been approved of by many, even among the Catholics in the east (θεοπασχίται),⁴ but which some Scythian monks under Justin I. had in vain attempted to introduce both at Rome and Constantinople (519-521),⁵ was declared orthodox by Justinian (533), with the evident purpose of conciliating the Monophy-

The Acoemetæ did really deny esse confitendum, b. Mariam vere et proprie Dei genetricem; et unum de Trinitate incarnatum et carne passum (Liberatus, c. 20), evidently misled by their adherence to Rome (Sam. Basnage Annal. politico-eccles. iii. 701). Justiniani lex A.D. 533 (Cod. i. i. 6).—Unius ac ejusdem passiones et miracula, quae sponte pertulit in carne, agnoscentes. Non enim alium Deum Verbum, et alium Christum novimus, sed unum et eundem.—Mansit enim Trinitas et post incarnatum unum ex Trinitate Dei verbum: neque enim quartae personae adjectionem admittit sancta Trinitas.—Anathematizamus—Nestorium anthropolatram, et qui eadem cum ipso sentiant—qui negant nec confitentur Dominum nostrum J. C. filium Dei et Deum nostrum incarnatum et hominem factum et crucifixum unum esse ex sancta et consubstantiali Trinitate.—Epist. Joannis Ep. Romae ad Justin. ibid. l. 8, et ap. Mansi, viii. 797: Comperimus, quod fidelibus populus proposuistis Edictum amore fidei pro subnoveida haereticorum intentione, secundum apostolicam doctrinam, fratrum et Coëpiscoporum nostrorum interveniente consensu. Quod, quia apostolicae doctrina convenit, nostra auctoritate confirmamus. The formula, however, was still suspected in the west of being Monophysite, and Bishop Cyprian of Toulon (about 550) was obliged to defend himself against Bishop Maximus of Geneva, quod beatitudo Vestra imperitiam nostram judicat esse culpandam, eo quod Deum hominem passum dixerim (the document is communicated by Schmidt in Vater's Kirchenhist. Archive für 1826, S. 307). The addition to the Trishagion (§ 110, note 12) continued to be used by the Catholics in Syria (see Ephraem. Patr. Antioch. about 530, apud Photius Cod. 228. Assemani Bibl. Orient. i. 518), till it was rejected by the Conc. Quinisextum, can. 81. After that time it was retained only by the Monophysites and Monothelites (Walch's Ketzerhist. ix. 480). Among the Catholics the idea arose that a quaternity, instead of a Trinity, was introduced by it. See Jo. Damasc. de Fide orthod. iii. 10. See Royaards in the Nederlandsch Archief voor kerkel. Vigili of the Monophysite bishops, Theodosius, Anthimus, and Severus, where we read, among other things: Me eam fidem, quam tenetis, Deo adjuvante et tenuisse et tenere significo.—Oportet ergo, ut haec, quae vobis scribo, nullus agnoscat, sed magis tanquam suspectum me sapientia vestra ante alios existimet habere, ut facilius possim haec, quae coepi, operari et perficere. In the Confession of Faith appended to it in Liberatus: Non duas Christum confitemur naturas, sed ex duabus naturis compositum unum filium, unum Christum, unum Dominum. Qui dicit in Christo duas formas, unaquaque agente cum alterius communione, et non confitetur unam personam, unam essentiam, anathema. Qui dicit: quia hoc quidem miracula faciebat, hoc vero passionibus succumbebat (Leo, § 89, note 7): et non confitetur miracula et passiones unius ejusdemque, quas sponte sua sustinuit, carne nobis consubstantiali, anathema sit. Qui dicit, quod Christus velut homo misericordia dignatus est, et non dicit ipsum Deum Verbum clare in favor of Monophysite doctrines (538), soon found it expedient to break through his agreement.

In the mean time, these theological affrays were increased by the revival of the Origenist controversy. Origen had, by degrees, obtained many devoted admirers among the monks in Palestine. One of them, Theodorus Ascidas, bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia, who had come to court, and gained the confidence of the emperor, protected the Origenists in propagating their doctrines in Palestine, sometimes by violent means.⁹ But at last the opposite party prevailed, by the aid of Mennas, patriarch of Constantinople, and obtained from Justinian a condemnation of the Origenist errors (about 544).¹⁰ It was more with the design of diverting attention from Origenism than of being revenged on his orthodox opponents, that Theodorus now persuaded the emperor¹¹ that the reconciliation of the Monophysites with the orthodox would be much facilitated by a public condemnation not only of Theodore of Mopsuestia,¹² who had Petr. Lambecius in Comment. bibl. August. Vindob. viii. 435, ap. Mansi, ix. 395*), though their title favors the fifth oecumenical council. See M. Le Quien Oriens christianus, iii. 210. Walch's Ketzerhist. vii. 660.

been long in somewhat evil repute among the orthodox, but also of Theodore's writings against Cyril and the letter of Ibas to Maris, though the two latter had been expressly pronounced orthodox by the council of Chalcedon.¹³ Justinian accordingly condemned, in an edict (544), the Three Chapters (τρία κεφάλαια, tria capitula).¹⁴ In the east they very easily coincided with this measure; but in the west it was so much the more obstinately resisted.¹⁵ On this account Justinian summoned Vigilius, bishop of Rome, to Constantinople (546), and prevailed on him there to condemn, in like manner, the Three Chapters (518)¹⁶ in a document called Judicatum. But Vigilius was soon induced to hesitate, by the decided opposition of the greater number of the western bishops;¹⁷ and he refused to adopt the emperor's second edict against the Three Chapters (551).¹⁸

extra praedicationem divini mysterii fuisse, et sacris diptychis ejectum esse: et—in illius vocabulum, inscriptum esse Cyrillum sanctae memoriae (see Mansi, ix. 286). The testimonies of the ancients against Theodorus, collected in the collatio v. of the fifth oecumenical council, must be very cautiously received; for instance, Theodore's name, in the two laws of Theodosius II. against Nestorius (p. 249, ss.), is a later addition.

The first edict of Justinian is lost, except fragments in Facundus, ii. 3, iv. 4. See Norisii Diss. de synodo quinta, c. 3. Walch's Ketzehist. viii. 150.

Constantinople (553),¹⁹ at which Vigilius not only refused to attend, but even defended the three chapters in the so-called Constitutum.²⁰ The Synod, therefore, broke off all Church communion with him,²¹ and approved without qualification all the decrees of the emperor hitherto made respecting religion.²² No farther notice was taken of the Origenists,²³ a circumstance which we shall not be far from the truth in attributing to the artful management of Theodorus Ascidas, who was the leading person at the council. Vigilius at length (554) assented to the decisions of the council,²⁴ to which step he was doubtless influenced chiefly by the success of the imperial arms in Italy under Narses. Immediately after, he set out on his return to Rome, but died by the way, in Syracuse (555). His successor,

²³ Though as early as Cyrilus Scythopolit. in vita Sabae, c. 90, and Evagrius, iv. 37, the formal condemnation of Origen is attributed to the 5th council by confounding it with the synod under Mennas (see note 10), as was afterward generally believed. See on the other side Walch's Ketzherh. viii. 280.

Pelagius I., acknowledged at once the authority of the fifth Synod,²⁵ which led to a tedious schism between several Western Churches and Rome. Among the writers who, during this controversy, opposed the condemnation of the Three Chapters, the most distinguished are Fulgentius Ferrandus, deacon in Carthage († before 551);²⁶ Facundus, bishop of Hermiane († about 570);²⁷ Rusticus, deacon in Rome; ²⁸ Liberatus, deacon in Carthage (about 553);²⁹ Victor, bishop of Tununa († after 565).³⁰

Shortly before his death (564), Justinian was misled by his excessive desire to bring back the Monophysites to the Church, so as to elevate to the rank of orthodoxy the doctrine of the Aphthartodocetae. Eutychius, patriarch of Constantinople, was deposed for his opposition to this measure; and the like fate awaited Anastasius Sinaita, patriarch of Antioch; when the death of the emperor (565) became the death likewise of the new doctrine.³¹ was always becoming more distinct under his reign, and internally established. The later dominion of the Arabians, by which the Monophysites were especially favored, rendered the breach incurable.

Only a small part of the Egyptians followed the Catholic patriarch of Alexandria, who had been appointed by Justinian. The more numerous Monophysites chose another patriarch; and thus they continue till the present day under the name of Copts.¹ The Æthiopian Church was always in connection with them.²

The Christians in *Armenia*³ also attached themselves ecclesiastically in the fifth century to the Greek emperors, by whose aid they held out against the Persians, and accordingly agreed to the Henoticon of Zeno.⁴ After Monophysitism had obtained acceptance among them, in consequence of these proceedings, they remained all the more faithful to it from the time of Justin I., since the Persians favored all parties separated from the Greek Church. In vain did Kyrion, patriarch of Georgia, endeavor to procure an approval of the council of Chalcedon in Armenia also;⁵ a Synod at Twin (595)⁶ declared itself decid-

CONTROVERSY BETWEEN AUGUSTINISM AND SEMIPELAGIANISM.

The Western Churches were but little disturbed by the Monophysite controversy. On the other hand, the struggle between Augustinism and Semipelagianism continued, especially in Gaul (comp. § 87, note 47, and following) though without leading to actual schisms in the Church. At first the Semipelagians had so much the advantage that their most distinguished defender Faustus, formerly abbot of the monastery at Lerins, afterward bishop of Reji (Reis) († after 490), compelled a certain presbyter, Lucidus, to retract the Augustinian doctrines,¹ and his Semipelagian creed was generally approved at the councils of Arles and Lyons (475).² Hence Arnobius the younger,³ author of the *Prædestinatus*⁴ (both about 460), and 1360, and other older writers, place this synod earlier. Comp. however, Ang. Majus in the Spicilegium Rom. x. ii. 450, annotation 3.

The first book contains a short sketch of 90 heresies (the 90th that of the Prædestinatorum), the second a liber sub nomine Augustini conflictus, in which the Augustinian doctrine was presented with great exaggeration (as it had been previously

Gennadius, presbyter at Massilia († after 495),⁵ express these sentiments without disguise. They had even penetrated to Upper Italy; and Magnus Felix Ennodius bishop of Pavia (from 511 to 521), professed them.⁶

Augustinism was hated in Gaul, especially on account of the doctrine of an unconditional decree of God, which, in the form it had there assumed, distorted by the consequences drawn from it by its obstinate defenders on the one hand, and still more by its too eager opponents on the other,⁷ was completely and necessarily fatal to all morality.⁸ Some, indeed, did not hesitate to attribute these errors directly to Augustine;⁹ but for the Praedestinatio enim Dei jam et numerum justorum, et numerum constituit peccatorum, et necesse erit constitutum terminum praeteriri non posse.—De Deo Apostolus dicit: Quos vocavit, hos praedestinavit (Rom. viii. 30). Si praesentem et praedestinantem et vocantem in Apostolo legitis; nobis ut quid impingitis crimen ob hoc, quod dicimus, praedestinasse Deum homines sive ad justitiam sive ad peccatum?—Invictus enim in sua voluntate permanet Deus, cum homo adsidue superetur. Si ergo invictum confitemini Deum, confitemini et hoc, quia quod eos voluit ille, qui condidit, aliud esse non possunt. Unde colligimus apud animum, quia quos Deus semel praedestinavit ad vitam, etiamsi negligent, etiamsi peccent, etiamsi nolint, ad vitam perducentur inviti: quos autem praedestinavit ad mortem, etiamsi currant, etiamsi festinent, sine causa laborant.* Cf. § 87, note 31.

most part it was usual, in order not to tread too closely on the honored man, to distinguish between himself and his adherents at that time,¹⁰ that these last could be the more safely condemned as heretics under the name of Predestinarians.¹¹

In Rome and Africa, on the other hand, the doctrines of Augustine were strictly followed.¹² Thus Gallic Semipelagianism was threatened with extinction from this quarter, and that the more readily, inasmuch as even in Gaul were many adherents of Augustine, and among them two distinguished bishops, Avitus, archbishop of Vienne (490–523), and Caesarius, bishop of Arles (502–542).¹³ Those same Scythian monks who had raised so much disturbance by their efforts to introduce the formula, “one of the Trinity was crucified” (§ 111, note 5), also renewed the struggle against Pelagianism, which seemed to them to be closely connected with Nestorianism, and against Semipelagianism.¹⁴ After they had been banished from Rome, because Hormisdas had pronounced judgment too indefinitely on Faustus, they brought the question of the latter’s orthodoxy before the African bishops living in Sardinia (523); in whose name Fulgentius, bishop of Ruspe († 533), now defended Augustine against the writings of Faustus.¹⁵ In consequence of this, Semipelagianism was rejected in Gaul also, under the leader-

Paris. 1648, in ej. Opp. t. iv., and in Gallandii Bibl. PP. x. 401) and the older Lutherans asserted, while the Jansenists (especially G. Manguin Accurata historiae Praedestinativae J. Sirmondi confutatio, in his Vindiciis praedestinationis et gratiae, p. 443, ss.), Dominicans, and Reformed, denied it. Modern impartial historians agree with the latter (comp. § 114.

HISTORY OF THE THEOLOGICAL SCIENCES.

After the Roman Empire had been annoyed and overrun by barbarians, the necessity of struggling against paganism no longer calling forth spiritual activity, and the study of the so-called heathen sciences having become increasingly suspicious, especially in the eyes of the monks, scientific cultivation deteriorated more and more, inasmuch as the free movement of the spirit was hindered by the narrowing down of orthodoxy, and attention exclusively directed to single barren speculations, by the disputes carried on with so much zeal.¹ How narrowly

they began in the west to judge of the writings of the older fathers, according to the standard of the new orthodoxy, is proved by the so-called Decretum Gelasii de libris recipiendis et non recipiendis.²

The writers who were engaged in the various controversies have been already named. In the Western Church, Faustus Rejensis (§ 113, notes 1, 2), Fulgentius Ruspensis (§ 113, note 15), Fulgentius Ferrandus, Facundus Hermianensis, Liberatus (§ 111, note 26, ff.); among the Orientals, Leontius Byzantinus (preface to § 110), and Johannes Philoponus (§ 110, note 25).

There was now less and less of independent investigation; and instead of it men were content with compilations from the highly esteemed older fathers.³ By way of exegesis began the series of the so-called catenae; ⁴ in the east with Procopius of Gaza (about 520),⁵ in the west with Primacius, bishop of

² In some MSS. it is attributed to Damasus (366-384), in the Spanish MSS. to Hormisdas (514-523), but commonly to a Roman Synod under Gelasius (496). On the contrary, it is wanting in the Dionysian collection of decrees (525), and in the Spanish (about 600) is placed entirely at the end, behind the decrees of Gregory the Great, which points to a later addition. It is afterward first mentioned, but without the name of an author, by the English bishop Adhelmus (about 680) de virginitate, c. 11, first attributed to Gelasius by Hincmar, archbishop of Rheims (about 860) Opusc. l. capitulorum, c. 24. That it was gradually enlarged is shown by the different existing texts (three in Mansi, viii. 153). In like manner, the difference of authors may be inferred from the fact that the Opera Cypriani are placed both among the libris recipiendis and the non-recipiendis. At the time of Hormisdas the basis of this list was already in existence (Horm. Ep. ad Possessorem ap. Mansi, viii. 499: Non improvide veneranda patrum sapientia fidei potestati quae essent catholica dogmata definiit, certa librorum etiam veterum in auctoritatem recipienda, sancto Spiritu instruente, praefigens), but not in the form of a decree, since, in the latter case, Dionysius would have adopted it. At the time of Hormisdas the Opera Fausti were also not yet in it, since Hormisdas hesitates to condemn Faustus. The decree, however, must have received its present form substantially in the first half of the sixth century, because in it no writings and heretics of this century whatever are mentioned, and only the first four general councils. Single interpolations were indeed made afterward. Thus, in Hincmar's time the canones Apostolorum were not yet adduced among the Apocryphis. Cf. Mansi, viii. 145, 151. The χριστιανικὴ τοπογραφία of the Nestorian Cosmas Indicopleustes (about 535), in its remarkable theologico-geographical part, is only a compilation, chiefly from the works of Diodorus of Tarsus and Theodorus of Mopsuestia.⁹

Distinguished as an independent thinker, in this age of imitation and authorities, was the Aristotelian philosopher Anicius Manlius Torquatus Severinus Boethius († 525), who, however, in his philosophical writings,¹⁰ refers so little to Christianity, that one is led to doubt not only of the authenticity of the theological works¹¹ ascribed to him, but even whether he could have been a Christian.¹²

That he was a Christian is denied by Gottf. Arnold (Kirchen u. Ketzehist. Th. i. B. 6, cap. 3, § 7), and Hand, l. c. On the contrary, G. Baur asserts that he was at least outwardly a Christian. Comp. Ritter's Gesch. d. christl. Philos. ii. 580.

The prevailing dialectic development of Christian doctrine must have been as unsatisfactory as it was injurious to deeper religious spirits, and therefore mysticism, in opposition to it, obtained a fuller and better developed form in the works of Pseudodionysius Areopagita,¹³ which appeared toward the end of the fifth century. These writings, banishing the divine essence, in the manner of the New Platonists, beyond all being and knowledge, and representing all things as proceeding in regular gradation out of it as their essence, proposed to teach how man, rightly apprehending his own position in the chain of being, might elevate himself through the next higher order to communion with still higher orders, and finally with God himself. At present they spread but gradually in the oriental church, till they penetrated in the middle ages into the west also, and so became the basis of all the later Christian mysticism.

There were now but few institutions for the advancement of theological learning any where; in the west none whatever.¹⁴ The monkish contempt displayed by Gregory the Great,¹⁵ bishop the Greek Church,²¹ soon after the council of Chalcedon, appeared the so-called apostolic canons,²² claiming to form the unalterable basis of all ecclesiastical arrangements. About the same time the Christians began to put together the decrees of councils in the order of the subjects, instead of in the old chronological way. The oldest collection of this kind now extant is that of Johannes Scholasticus of Antioch (afterward patriarch of Constantinople, † 578),²³ which was in great repute for several centuries. Justinian's code was also so rich a source for ecclesiastical matters, that particular collections of church laws were made soon after his time, out of his Institutes.²⁴ Those of John Scholasticus were at a later period adapted to Justinian's by a new arrangement of the collection of canons,²⁵ and thus arose the first Nomocanon.²⁶

In the Latin Church there was not even a tolerably complete chronological collection of the canons till that made after the council of Chalcedon, since known as the prisca translatio.²⁷ A still fuller collection was afterward made by Dionysius Exiguus (about 500)²⁸ in a better translation, to which was added, in a second part, a collection of the papal decretals. In Spain there had been a collection of canons, between 633 and 636, on the model of that by Dionysius (the Greek ones in a peculiar version), and of papal decretals for the use of the Spanish

PRIVILEGES OF THE CLERGY.

The clergy, and particularly the bishops, received new privileges from Justinian. He intrusted the latter with civil jurisdiction over the monks and nuns, as well as over the clergy.¹ Episcopal oversight of morals, and particularly the duty of providing for all the unfortunate (§ 91, notes 8-10), had been established till the present time only on the foundation of ecclesiastical laws: but Justinian now gave them a more general basis, by founding them on the civil law also.² He made it the duty of the bishops, and gave them the necessary civil qualifications, to undertake the care of prisoners, minors, insane persons, foundlings, stolen children, and women;³ and invested them with the power of upholding good morals⁴ and impartial administration of justice. It is true that he established a mutual inspection of the bishops and of the civil magistrates; but he gave in this respect to the latter considerably smaller privileges than to the former.⁵ For example, he gave the bishops a legal influence over the choice of magistrates,⁶ and security against general oppression on their part;⁷ allowed them to interfere in case of refusal of justice;⁸ and, in special instances, even constituted them judges of those official personages.⁹ In like manner, he conveyed to them the right of concurrence in the choice of city officials,¹⁰ and a joint oversight of the administration of city funds, and the maintenance of public establishments.¹¹ Thus the bishops became important personages even in civil life; and were farther honored by Justinian, in freedom from parental authority,¹² from the necessity of appearing as witnesses, and from taking oaths.¹³

⁵ The Praesides provinciarum were obliged to see to it that bishops observed ecclesiastical laws relating to ecclesiastical things (Cod. Just. i. iii. 44, § 3, Nov. cxxxiii. c. 6), particularly those relating to the unalienableness of church possessions (Nov. vii. in epil.) and the regular holding of synods (Nov. cxxxvii. c. 6). They could only, however, put the bishops in mind of their duty, and then notify the emperor.

If the president (of a province) were condemned, and gave no satisfaction, the matter was referred to the emperor, and in case he found the episcopal sentence just, the president was condemned to death. According to Nov. viii. c. 9, cxxviii. c. 23, every magistrate, after laying down his office, was obliged to remain fifty days in the province to satisfy any claims that might be made against him. If he removed sooner, every one injured might complain to the bishop.

DEPENDENCE OF THE HIERARCHY ON THE STATE.

Notwithstanding these great privileges, the hierarchy became still more dependent on the State. As the emperors sent their civil laws to be promulgated by the Praetorian prefects, so, in like manner, ecclesiastical laws went forth from them to the patriarchs,¹ and the magistrates were directed to watch the observance of them by the bishops.² None doubted the emperor's right to enact laws touching the external relations of the Church, and even subjects connected with its internal constitution;³ but it was more suspicious when the emperors began

³ Biener, l. c. S. 157, ss. 161, ss. Thus Justinian, Nov. 123, c. 3, where he fixes the amount to be given by the bishops pro inthronisticis, uses the expression: Κελεύομεν τοίνυν τοὺς μὲν μακαριωτάτους ἀρχιεπισκόπους καὶ πατριάρχας, τούτῃσσι τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης, καὶ Κωνσταντινουπόλεως, καὶ Ἀλεξανδρείας, καὶ Θεουπόλεως, καὶ Ἱεροσολύμων. When the Emperor Maurice had made a law, ut quisquis publicis administrationibus fuerit implicatus, ei neque ad ecclesiasticum officium venire, neque in monasterium converti liceat: Gregory the Great, lib. iii. Ep. 65, ad Mauricium Aug. remonstrated against the second part of the prohibition. Ex. gr. Ego vero haec Dominis meis loquens, quid sum nisi pulvis et vermis? Sed tamen quia contra auctorem omnium Deum hanc intendere constitutionem sentio, Dominis tacere non possum.—Ad haec ecce per me servum ultimum suum et vestrum respondebit Christus dicens: Ego te de notario comitem excubitorum, de comite excubitorum, Caesarem, de Caesare Imperatore, nec solum hoc, sed etiam patrem Imperatorum feci. Sacerdotes meos tuae manus commisi, et tu a meo servitio milites tuos subtrahis? Responde, rogo, piissime Domine, servo tuo, quid venienti et haec dicenti responsurus es in judicio Domino tuo?—Ego quidem jussioni subjectus eandem legem per diversas terrarum partes transmitti feci: et quia lex ipsa now to decide questions of faith by edicts, and when Synods were assembled almost entirely for the purpose of adopting imperial articles of faith. The Greek bishops became more and more accustomed to sacrifice their conviction to circumstances;⁴ but the bishops of Italy, favored by the political condition of their country, were able for the most part to assert a firmer position.

HISTORY OF THE PATRIARCHS.

Ever since the beginning of the Monophysite controversy in the East, the sees of Alexandria and Antioch had become so weak that the patriarchs of Constantinople only, upheld by the privileges granted them at the council of Chalcedon,¹ were able to vie with the Roman patriarchs.² But while the former were dependent on imperial caprice, and constantly harassed by the Greek spirit of controversy, the latter enjoyed the most perfect freedom in ecclesiastical things, and the advantage of standing at the head of the west, which was less inclined to controversies about faith, and therefore more united.³ After the extinction of the West Roman empire (476), by which, however, they had never been molested, but often furthered,⁴ the Roman omnipotenti Deo minime concordat, ecce per suggestionis mee paginam serenissimis Dominis nuntiavi. Utrobique ergo quae debui exsolvi, qui et Imperatori obedientiam praebui, et pro Deo quod sensi minime tacui.

Mansi, ix. p. 153: Sunt graeci Episcopi habentes divites et opulentias ecclesias, et non patiuntur duos menses a rerum ecclesiasticarum dominatione suspendi: pro qua re secundum tempus, et secundum voluntatem principum, quidquid ab eis quaesitum fuerit, sine altercatione consentiunt. bishops became subject to German princes, who left them at perfect liberty to manage all affairs within the Church according to their pleasure. This was particularly the case with Theoderich, king of the Arian Ostrogoths (493-526),⁵ to whom the schism between Rome and Constantinople gave sufficient security from all dangerous combinations of the Catholic hierarchy. And when, on the death of Bishop Anastasius, there was a contested election between Symmachus and Laurentius (498),⁶ he waited till required by both parties to decide,⁷ and then quietly allowed a Roman synod under Symmachus to declare all interference of the laity in the affairs of the Roman Church entirely inadmissible.⁸

⁵ On the course pursued by the Ostrogoth kings toward the church, see G. Sartorius Versuch über die Regierung der Ostgothen während ihrer Herrschaft in Italien. Hamburg. 1811. S. 124, ss. 306, ss. J. C. F. Manso Gesch. des ostgoth. Reichs in Italien. Breslau. 1824. S. 141, ss. Theoderich says (Cassiodori Variarum, lib. ii. Quod qui aliter facere tentaverit, evidenter caelestibus jussionibus obviavit.

⁸ Synodus Romana iii. sub Symmacho (in the collections cited erroneously as the Syn. Rom. iv. s. palmaris, see Pagé ad ann. 502 num. 3, ss.) ap. Mansi, viii. 266, ss. The protocol of a synod held after the death of Pope Simplicius was here read, and the decrees passed at it declared nugatory as proceeding from a layman. This protocol is given in the Acta of the Synod referred to, and runs thus: Cum in unum apud b. Petrum Apostolum resedisent, sublimis et eminentissimus vir, praefectus praetorio atque patricius, agens etiam vices praecellentissimi regis Odoacris, Basilius dixit: Quamquam studii nostri et religionis intersit, ut in episcopatus electione concordia principaliter servetur ecclesiae, ne per occasionem seditionis status civitatis vocetur in dubium: tamen admonitione beatissimi Papae nostri Simplicii, quam ante oculos semper habere debemus, hoc nobis meministis sub obstestatione fuisse mandatum, ut propter illum strepitum, et venerabilis ecclesiae detrimentum, si eum de hac luce transire contigerit, non sine nostra consultatione ejuslibet celebretur electio. Nam et cum quid confusionis atque dispendii venerabilis ecclesiae sustineret, miramur praetermissis nobis quidquam fuisse tentatum, cum etiam sacerdote nostro superstitute nihil sine nobis debuisset assumi. Quare si amplitudini vestrae vel sanctitati placet, incolumia omnia, quae ad futuri antistitis electionem respiciunt, religiosa honoratione servemus, hanc legem specialiter praeferentes, quam nobis haeredibusque nostris christianae mentis devotione sancimus: Ne unquam praedium, seu rusticum seu urbanum, vel ornamenta aut ministeria ecclesiarum—ab eo qui nunc antistes sub electione communi fuerit ordinandus, et illis qui futuris saeculis sequentur, quocumque titulo atque commento alienentur. Si quis vero aliquid eorum alienare voluerit, inefficax atque irritum

Thus the Roman bishops were so far from being hindered by any superior power, that it proved an advantageous circumstance to them in the eyes of their new civil rulers, that they steadfastly resisted innovations of faith made in Constantinople, till they gained a new victory over the changeable Greeks under the Emperor Justin. The natural consequence of this was, that while the patriarchs of Constantinople were constantly sinking in ecclesiastical esteem on account of their vacillation in these controversies, the bishops of Rome still maintained their ancient reputation of being the defenders of oppressed orthodoxy.⁹

Under these favorable circumstances, the ecclesiastical pretensions of the Roman bishops, who now formed the only center of Catholic Christendom in the west, in opposition to the Arian conquerors, rose high, without hindrance. They asserted that not only did the highest ecclesiastical authority in the west belong to them, but also superintendence of orthodoxy and maintenance of ecclesiastical laws throughout the whole Church. These claims they sometimes founded on imperial edicts¹⁰ and decrees of synods;¹¹ but for the most part on the peculiar rights

Synodus, ut praetermissis personis religiosis, quibus maxime cura est de tanto pontifice, electionem laici in suam redegerint potestatem, quod contra canones esse manifestum est.—Scriptura evidentissimis documentis constat invalida. Primum quod contra patrum regulas a laicis, quamvis religiosis, quibus nulla de ecclesiasticis facultatibus aliquid disponendi legitur unquam attributa facultas, facta videtur. Deinde quod nullius praesulis apostolicae sedis subscriptione firmata docetur. The arrangement was declared null, and, on the contrary, another of similar import was passed by the synod to secure ecclesiastical property.

the apologist of this synod, Ennodius, bishop of Pavia (511), first gave utterance to the assertion, that the bishop of Rome is subject to no earthly judge.¹⁴ Not long after an attempt was made to give a historical basis to this principle by supposititious Gesta (acts) of former popes;¹⁵ and other falsifications of older documents in favor of the Roman see now appeared in like manner.¹⁶ Still the Roman bishops (or as they were already called in Italy, by way of distinction, Papa)¹⁷ did not yet demand any other kind of honor than was paid to the other apostolic sees,¹⁸ acknowledging that they were subject to gen-

Petri Apostolorum principis cathedra locuta est, dicens, quod ipse in ea nunc usque in suis successoribus sedeat.—Cuncta quae dicta sunt in eo libenter accepi, quod ille mihi de Petri cathedra locutus est, qui Petri cathedram tenet. Et cum me specialis honor nullo modo delectet, valde tamen laetatus sum, quia vos, sanctissimi, quod mihi impendistis, vobismetipsis dedistis.—Cum multi sint Apostoli, pro ipso tamen principatu solo Apostolorum principis sedes in auctoritate convaluit, quae in tribus locis unius est. Ipse enim sublimavit sedem, in qua etiam quiescere, et presentem vitam finire dignatus est (Rome); ipse decoravit sedem, in qua Evangelistam discipulum misit (Alexandria); ipse firmavit sedem, in qua septem annis, quamvis discessurus, sedit (Antioch). Cum ergo unius atque una sit sedes, cui ex auctoritate divina tres nunc Episcopi praesident quidquid ego de vobis boni audio, hoc mihi imputo. Si quid de me boni creditis, hoc vestris meritis imputate, quia in illo unum sumus, qui ait: Ut omnes unum sint, etc. (Jo. xvii. 21). Cf. Wiggers de Gregorio M. ejusque placitis anthropologicis comm. ii. Rostoch. 1838. 4. p. 29. The flattery of Eulogius may be explained by his straitened condition, which Gregory relieved even by presents (cf. lib. vi. Ep. 60; vii. 40; viii. 29). Isidorus Hisp. Etymol. vii. 12 (in Gratiani Decreto, dist. xxi. c. 1): Ordo Episcoporum quadripartitus est, id est in Patriarchis, Archiepiscopis, Metropolitanis atque Episcopis. Patriarcha graeca lingua summus patrum interpretatur, quia primum, i. e. apostolicam retinet locum: et ideo quia summo honore fungitur, tali nomine censetur, sicut Romanus, Antiochenus et Alexandrinus. Here, therefore, the pope still stands in the same rank completely with the other patriarchs.

Syracus.: Si qua culpa in Episcopis invenitur, nescio quis ei (Sedi apostolicae) subjectus non sit: cum vero culpa non exigit, omnes secundum rationem humilitatis aequales sunt. Lib. xi. Ep. 37, ad Romanum defensorem: Pervenit ad nos, quod si quis contra clericos quoslibet causam habeat, despectis eorum Episcopis, eosdem clericos in tuo facias iudicio exhiberi. Quod si ita est, quia valde constat esse incongruum, hac tibi auctoritate praecipimus, ut hoc denovo facere non praesumas.—Nam si sua unicuique Episcopo jurisdictione non servatur, quid aliud agitur, nisi ut per nos, per quos ecclesiasticus custodiri debuit ordo, confundatur? (Lib. ii. Ep. 52: Mihi injuriam facio, si fratrum meorum jura perturbo).—Lib. viii. Ep. 30, ad Eulogium Episc. Alexandr.: Indicare quoque vestra Beatitudo studuit, jam se quibusdam (the patriarch of Constantinople) non scribere superba vocabula, quae ex vanitatis radice prodierunt, et mihi loquitur, dicens: sicut jussistis. Quod verbum jussionis peto a meo auditu remove, quia scio, qui sum, qui estis. Loco enim mihi fratres estis, moribus patres. Non ergo jussi, sed quae utilia visa sunt, indicare curavi. Non tamen invenio vestram Beatitudinem hoc ipsum, quod memoriae vestrae intuli, perfecte retinere voluisse. Nam dixi, nec mihi vos, nec cuiquam alteri tale aliquid scribere debere: et ecce in praefatione epistolae, quam ad me ipsum qui prohibui direxistis, superbae appellationis verbum, universalem me Papam dicentes, imprimere curastis. Quod peto dulcissima mihi Sanctitas vestra ultra non faciat, quia vobis subtrahitur, quod alteri plus quam ratio exigit praebet. —Nec honorem esse deuto, in quo fratres meos honorem suum perdere cognosco.—Si enim universalem me Papam vestra Sanctitas dicit, negat se hoc esse, quod me fatetur

After ecclesiastical peace had been restored between Rome and Constantinople, the kings of the Ostrogoths became suspicious of their Catholic subjects generally, and, in particular, of the Romish bishops, who still had unbroken communication with Constantinople. John I., indeed, in his capacity of regal ambassador, procured the restoration of their Churches to the Arians in the Greek Church; yet he was obliged to end his life in prison.²¹ The kings maintained a strict oversight of the choice of the Catholic bishops, reserving to themselves the confirmation, or absolute appointment of them.²² Yet even now the Gothic rule was not so dangerous to the papacy as the Byzantine, which latter began after the conquest of Italy (553–554). It is true that Justinian honored the Roman see,²³ but he also distinguished the Constantinopolitan with no less favor;²⁴ and endeavored in the end to convert both merely into instruments to enable him to rule both in church and state. Two of his creatures, Vigilius and Pelagius I., successively filled the Roman see; and in the controversy concerning the three chapters it soon became apparent how hazardous to Rome this dependence on Byzantium was. For a long time in the Western Church the rejection of the Three Chapters was considered a violation of orthodoxy; and on this account the bishops of the diocese of Italy broke off communion with Rome. The bishops of Milan and Ravenna were indeed reconciled; when, oppressed by the Arian Lombards, they were compelled to set greater value on communion with the Catholic Church (570-580); but the archbishop of Aquileia (who, since the incursions of the Lombards into Italy (568), resided on the island Grado) and the Istrian bishops were more obstinate, and did not renew their fellowship with Rome till the year 698.²⁵

But even this dangerous period of dependence on Byzantium ceased for Rome, after the incursion of the Lombards into Italy (568). From that time the Greek dominions in this country were confined to the exarchate of Ravenna, the Duchy of Rome and Naples, the cities on the coast of Liguria, and the extreme provinces of Lower Italy. Continually threatened by the Lombards, and often forsaken by the Greek emperors, these districts were frequently obliged to protect themselves. At the head of all measures for defense appeared the popes, as the richest possessors,²⁶ whose own interest it was to avert the rule

if the complaint is delegated by the patriarch to a metropolitan or another bishop, and a sentence passed which the one party is dissatisfied with, and an appeal is made; then the appeal shall be to the archbishop (consequently with the omission of some intermediate courts, according to the rule Cod. Just. vii. lxii. 32, § 3: Eorum sententiis appellatione suspensus, qui ex delegatione cognoscunt, necesse est eos aestimare—qui causas delegaverint judicandas). 'Ο ἀρχιερατικὸς θρόνος, is every delegating patriarch, not exclusively (as has been assumed after the Latin translation of Anton. Augustinus, which in this law is entirely false) the patriarch of Constantinople. Even Ziegler Geschich. der kirchl. Verfassungsformen, S. 232, ss. has entirely misunderstood this law.

²⁶ As the emperors called their fortunes patrimonium (namely patrimonium privatum s. dominium their private property, and patrim. sacratum s. divinae domus, their domains. See Gutherius de offic. dom. Aug. lib. iii. c. 25. Pancirolius ad notit. dignatatum Imp. orient. c. 87), so the churches called their possessions patrimonia of their saints. That of the Roman church was therefore patrimonium S. Petri: at the same time also the single of those Arian barbarians. Thus they not only gained great political influence in Grecian Italy,²⁷ but also obtained a more independent position in ecclesiastical matters in relation to the Greek emperors. As citizens, they remained subject to the Greek emperors, and their representatives, the exarchs of Ravenna.²⁸

Toward the end of this period the flame of controversy was again kindled between the two first patriarchs of Christendom, when John Jejunator began to assume the title of a Patriarcha

Opp. iv. 271), and Zaccaria, l. c. p. 112, 131, conclude from them that the city of Naples belonged to the patrimonium S. Petri; but that the popes who had important possessions there (a patrimonium Neapolitanum and Campanum, Zaccaria, p. 111), when the city was hard pressed (cf. Gregor. M. lib. ii. Ep. 46, ad Johannem Episc. Ravennae: De Neapolitana vero urbe, excellentissimo Exarcho instantur imminente, vobis indicamus, quia Arigis—valde insidiatur eidem civitati, in quam si celeriter dux non mittatur, omnino jam inter perditas habetur), and required speedy aid, took the necessary measures instead of the exarch. ³¹ Gregorii M. lib. v. Ep. 18, ad Johann.—Si ergo ille (Paulus) membra dominici corporis certis extra Christum quasi capitibus, et ipsis quidem Apostolis subijci partialiter evitavit (1 Cor. i. 12, ss.): tu quid Christo, universalis scilicet Ecclesiae capiti, in extremi iudicii es dicturus examine, qui cuncta ejus membra tibimet conaris universalis appellatione supponere? Quis, rogo, in hoc tam perverso vocabulo, nisi ille ad imitandum proponitur, qui despectis Angelorum legionibus secum socialiter constitutis, ad culmen conatus est singularitatis erumpere, ut et nulli subesse et solus omnibus praeesse videretur? Certe Petrus Apostolorum primus, membrum sanctae et universalis Ecclesiae, Paulus, Andreas, Johannes, quid aliud quam singularium sunt plebium capita? et tamen sub uno capite omnes membra—Numquid non—per venerandum Chalcedonense Concilium hujus apostolicae sedis Antistites, cui Deo disponente deservio, universales oblati honore vocati sunt? (Comp. § 94, note 72.) Sed tamen nullus umquam tali vocabulo appellari voluit, nullus sibi hoc temerarium nomen arripuit: ne si sibi in Pontificatus gradu gloriam singularitatis arriperet, hanc omnibus fratribus denegasse videretur. Ep. 19, ad Sabinianum Diac. (Apocrisiarium.) Ep. 20, ad Mauricium Aug. Ep. 21, ad Constantinam Aug. Ep. 43, ad Eulogium Ep. Alexandr. et Anastasium Antiochenum. Lib. vii. Ep. 4, 5, and 31, ad Cyriacum Ep. Constant. Ep. 27, ad Anastas. Antioch. Ep. 33, ad Mauricium Aug.: De qua re mihi in suis jussionibus Dominorum Pietas praecipit, dicens, ut per appellationem frivoli nominis inter nos scandalum generari non debeat. Sed rogo, ut Imperialis Pietas penset, quia alia sunt frivola valde innoxia, atque alia valde nociva. Numquidnam cum se Antichristus veniens Deum dixerit, frivolum valde erit, sed tamen nimis perniciosum? Si quantitatem sermonis attendimus, duae sunt syllabae; si vero pondus iniquitatis, universa pernicies. Ego autem fidenter dico, quia quisquis se universalem Sacerdotem vocat, vel vocari desiderat, in elatione sua Antichristum praecurrit, quia superbiendo se caeteris praeponeit. Nec dispari superbia ad errorem ducitur, quia sicut perversus ille Deus videri vult super omnes homines: ita quisquis iste est, qui solus Sacerdos appellari appetit, super reliquos Sacerdotes se extollit. Ep. 34, ad Eulogium Alex. et Anastas. Ant. How earnestly Gregory rejected for himself this title, may be seen in lib. viii. Ep. 30, ad Eulogium Ep. Alex. above, note 18. According to Johannes Diac. (about 825) in vita Greg. M. ii. 1, Gregory may have assumed the title servus servorum Dei, to put to shame the patriarch of Constantinople. Even Augustine calls himself, Ep. 130 and 217, servus servorum Christi, Fulgentius Ep. 4, servorum Christi famulas. Among Gregory the Great's letters, there are now only three before which he so styles himself. But even so late as the eleventh century other bishops too, as well as kings and emperors, employed this title. See du Fresne Glossar. ad scriptt. med. et. inf. lat. s. v. servus.

repaid the pope's favor by taking his part against the patriarch,³³ though after him that disputed title was constantly used by the see of Constantinople.³¹

At this time the popes also began to bestow the pallium (which all bishops in the east received at their consecration)³⁵ on the most distinguished bishops of the west, for the purpose of symbolizing and strengthening their connection with the Church of Rome.³⁶

³³ The patriarch Cyriacus was an adherent of Maurice (Theophanes, i. 446, 453). Anastasius de vitis Pontific. c. 67, Bonifacius, iii.: Hic obtinuit apud Phocam Principem, ut Sedes apostolica b. Petri Apostoli caput esset omnium ecclesiarum, i. e., Ecclesia Romana, quia Ecclesia Constantinopolitana primam se omnium Ecclesiarum scribebat. With the same words Paulus Warnefridi' de Gestis Longob. iv. 37. Doubtéd by J. M. Lorenz Examen decreti Phocae de primatu Rom. Pont. Argent. 1790. Schröckh, xvii. 72. Remarkable is the view of the subject taken by the Ghibelline Gotfridus Viterbiensis (about 1186), in his Pantheon, p. xvi. (Pistorii Rer. Germ. scriptt. ed. Struve, ii. 289):

Tertius est Papa Bonifac us ille benignus,
Qui petit a Phoca munu per secula dignum,
Ut sedes Petri prima sit; ille dedit.
Prima prius fuerat Constantinopolitana;
Est modo Romana, meliori dogmate clara.

In the east, monachism continued in its manifold forms.¹ Justinian favored it by his laws,² though he endeavored to restrain the irregular wanderings of the Coenobites.³ While pallium was sent. See Pertsch, l. c. p. 196, ss. That a tax was early connected with this investiture, see Gregorii i. lib. v. Ep. 57, ad Johannem Episc. Corinth. (also ap. Gratianus dist. In the west, Benedict, a native of Nursia in Umbria,¹ gave a new form to the monastic life. After he had long lived a hermit's life, he founded a convent on a mountain in Campania, where the old castrum Cassinum was situated (hence called monasterium Cassinense, monte Cassino). Here he introduced a new system of rules (529)² which mitigated the extreme

Martene, Paris. 1690. 4, and by Augustin Calmet, Paris. 1734. t. ii. 4. General regulations: Cap. 64: In Abbatis ordinatione illa semper consideretur ratio, ut hic constituatur, quem sibi omnis concors congregatio secundum timorem Dei, sive etiam pars, quamvis parva, congregationis, saniori consilio, elegerit. Cap. 65: Quemcunque elegerit Abbas cum consilio fratrum timentium Deum, ordinet ipse sibi Praepositum. Qui tamen Praepositus illa agat cum reverentia, quae ab Abbate suo ei injuncta fuerint, nihil contra Abbatis voluntatem aut ordinationem faciens. Cap. 21: Si major fuerit congregatio, eligantur de ipsis fratres boni testimonii et sanctae conversationis, et constituantur Decani, qui sollicitudinem gerant super Decanias suas. Cap. 3: Quoties aliqua praecipua agenda sunt in monasterio, convocet Abbas omnem congregationem, et dicat ipse unde agitur! Et audiens consilium fratrum, tractet apud se, et quod utilius judicaverit faciat. Si qua vero minor agenda sunt in monasterio: utilitatibus, seniorum tantum utatur consilio. rigor of the eastern monks,³ prescribed a variety of suitable employments,⁴ but was distinguished especially by this, that it exacted a promise from all who entered, never to leave the monastery again, and strictly to observe its rules.⁵ This system was soon diffused in Italy, Gaul, and Spain. Instead of the former diversity of monasteries, unity now appeared; and thus arose the first proper monastic order or association of many monasteries under a peculiar rule. The straitening of vows in this Benedictine rule was followed by the declaration of marriage being invalid in the case of monks;⁶ while the monks and nuns Farther panis libra una, and, cap. 40, hemina vini (different opinions concerning the hemina, see in Martene Comm. in Reg. S. Bened. p. 539, ss.). On the other hand, carniun quadrupedum ab omnibus abstinetur comestio, praeter omnino debiles et aegrotos. Cap. 36: Balneorum usus infirmis, quoties expedit, offeratur. Sanis autem, et maxime juvenibus, tardius concedatur.

⁵ Cap. 58: After ordering a probation time of the noviter venientis ad conversionem: si habita secum deliberatione promiserit se omnia custodire et cuncta sibi imperata servare, tunc suscipiatur in congregatione, sciens se jam sub lege regulae constitutum, quod ei ex illa die non liceat egredi de monasterio, nec collum excutere de subjugo regulae, quam sub tam morosa deliberatione licuit aut excusare, aut suscipere. Suscipiendus autem in oratorio coram omnibus promittat de stabilitate sua, et conversione morum suorum, et obedientia coram Deo et sanctis ejus, ut si aliquando aliter fecerit, ab eo se damnandum sciat, quem irridet. De qua promissione sua faciat petitionem ad nomen Sanctorum, quorum reliquiae ibi sunt, et Abbatis praesentis. Quam petitionem manu sua scribat, aut certe, si non scit literas, alter ab eo rogatus scribat, et ille novitius signum faciat, et manu sua eam super altare ponat. Cap. 59: Si quis forte de nobilibus offert filium suum Deo in monasterio, si ipse puer minori aetate est, parentes ejus faciant petitionem, quam supra diximus. Et cum oblatione ipsam petitionem et manum pueri involvant in palla altaris, et sic eum offerant. Cap. 66: Monasterium autem, si possit fieri, ita debet construi, ut omnia necessaria, id est aqua, molendinum, hortus, pistrinum, vel artes diversae intra monasterium exercentur, ut non sit necessitas Monachis vagandi foras, quia omnino non expedit animabus eorum.

who had left their monasteries began to be violently brought back into them.⁷

Of literary pursuits among the monks we find no trace, either in Benedict's rule, or among the first Benedictines.⁸ It was Cassiodorus who made the first attempt of this kind in the convent built by him called Vivarium (Coenobium Vivariense, 538) near Squillacei in Bruttia, whither he had withdrawn;⁹ and where in addition to other useful employments, an endeavor was made to introduce learned occupations also into a monastery.¹⁰ The Benedictines, already accustomed to a well regulated ac-

Cap. 30: Ego tamen fateor votum meum, quod inter vos quaecumque possunt corporeo labore compleri, Antiquariorum mihi studia (si tamen veraciter scribant) non immerito forsitan plus placere; quod et mentem suam relegendo scripturas divinas salubriter instruant, et Domini praecepta scribendo longe lateque disseminat. (Comp. the directions for copying and revising manuscripts, cap. 15, and the treatise de orthographia.)—Cap. 31: Sed et vos alloquor fratres egregios, qui humani corporis salutem sedula curiositate tractatis, et confugientibus ad loca sanctorum officia beatæ pietatis impenditis. Et ideo discite quidem naturas herbarum, commixtionisque specierum sollicita mente tractate. He recommends to them the writings of Dioscorides, Hippocrates, and Galen. Comp. They reclaimed many waste lands, actively advanced the cause of education,¹¹ handed down to posterity the history of their time in chronicles, and preserved to it by their copyists, for the most part indeed as dead treasures, the writings of antiquity.¹²

RELATION OF THE MONKS TO THE CLERGY.

Though the clergy continued to be very often chosen from among the monks, yet there were in the convents no more ordained monks than were required by the necessities of the monks' congregation; and many convents had no presbyter whatever.¹ The old rule that all convents should be under the inspection of the bishops of the dioceses in which they were situated,² was first departed from in Africa, where many put themselves under the superintendence of distant bishops, especially the bishop of Carthage, to keep themselves secure against oppression.³ In the remaining part of the west, the duty of the

Ep. 46, vii. 43.—Abbots prayed and received permission in monasterio Presbyterum, qui sacra Missarum solemnia celebrare debeat, ordinari. Ibid. vi. 42, ix. 92: or a presbyter was appointed to the convent, quem et in monasterio habitare, et inde vitæ subsidia habere necesse fuit, ibid. iv. 18.—On the other hand Gregory lib. vi. Ep. 56, praises a convent of which he had heard, et Presbyteros et Diaconos cunctamque congregationem unanimes vivere ac concordēs.

Chalced. c. 4:—*Ἐδοξε μηδένα μὲν μηδαμοῦ οἰκοδομεῖν μηδὲ συνιστᾶν μοναστηρίον ἢ εὐκτήριον οἶκον παρὰ γνώμην τοῦ τῆς πόλεως Ἐπισκόπου· τοὺς δὲ καθ' ἐκάστην πόλιν καὶ χώραν μονάζοντας ὑποτετάχθαι τῷ Ἐπισκόπῳ. monasteries to be spiritually subject to the diocesan bishops was still strictly enforced.⁴ On the other hand, synods and popes took them under their protection, in opposition to episcopal oppression, and made it a fundamental principle that the bishops should not interfere with their internal administration.⁵ Gregory the Great, in particular, was distinguished for his protection of convents.⁶

A.D. 456 (Mansi, vii. 907), which limited the rights of the bishop of the diocese in the convent of Lerins as follows: Ut clerici, atque altaris ministri a nullo, nisi ab ipso, vel cui ipse injunxerit ordinentur; chrisma non nisi ab ipso speretur; neophyti si fuerint, ab eodem confirmentur; peregrini clerici absque ipsius praecepto in communionem, vel ad ministerium non admittantur. Monasterii vero omnis laica multitudo ad curam Abbatis pertineat: neque ex ea sibi Episcopus quidquam vindicet, aut aliquem ex illa clericum, nisi abbate petente, praesumat. Hoc enim et rationis et religionis plenum est, ut clerici ad ordinationem Episcopi debita subjectione respiciant: laica vero omnis monasterii congregatio ad solam ac liberam Abbatis proprii, quem sibi ipsa elegerit, ordinationem dispositionemque pertineat; regula, quae a fundatore ipsius monasterii dudum constituta est, in omnibus custodita.

FIFTH CHAPTER.

HISTORY OF PUBLIC WORSHIP.

§ 121.

How much the sensuous tendency of public worship,¹ of which we have already spoken, was farther developed in this period, and how many new superstitious notions sprung from it,² is best seen in the writings of Gregory the Great, a man who, with much real piety, had also very many monkish prejudices and great credulity; while by his high reputation in the Western Church, he did much to introduce new forms of worship, and diffuse a multitude of superstitions.

The chief part of the reverence paid to saints came more and more to consist in the superstitious worship of relics,³ of whose

miraculous power the most absurd stories were told. The consequence of this was, that the moral aspect of saint-reverence was still farther lost sight of by an age which longed only for the marvelous. As this tendency now began to give rise to imposture in introducing false relics,⁴ it had also the effect of developing the legends of the saints, to a greatly increased extent, in consequence of the love of the miraculous. The old martyrs, of whom for the most part the names alone were handed down,⁵ were furnished with new descriptions of their lives, while the new saints were dressed out with wonderful narratives; even martyrs, with the histories of martyrs, were entirely fabricated anew.⁶

In the worship of saints, angels were now without hesitation made to participate, to whom also churches were dedicated.⁷

serenissimae Dominae tam religiosum desiderium esse vacuum non debet, de catenis, quas ipse S. Paulus Ap. in collo et in manibus gestavit, ex quibus multa miracula in populo demonstrantur, partem aliquam vobis transmittere festinabo, si tamen hanc tollere limando praevaluero, namely, quibusdam petentibus, diu per catenas ipsas ducitur lima, et tamen ut aliquid exinde exeat non obtinetur.—Lib. ix. Ep. 122, ad Recharedum Wisigoth. Regem: Clavem vero parvulam a sacratissimo b. Petri Ap. corpore vobis pro ejus benedictione transmisiimus, in qua inest ferrum de catenis ejus inclusum; ut quod collum illius ad martyrium ligaverat, vestrum ab omnibus peccatis solvat. Crucem quoque dedi lateri praesentium vobis offerendam, in qua lignum Dominicæ crucis inest, et capilli b. Joannis Baptistæ. Ex qua semper solatium nostri Salvatoris per intercessionem præcursoris ejus habeatis. Cf. lib. iii. Ep. 33. A number of similar miraculous stories are found in the works of Gregory of Tours, see note 6.

⁵ Gregor. M. lib. viii. Ep. 29, see Div. I. § 53, note 46.

Pictures became more common in the churches. In the east authentic likenesses of Christ now appeared in public,⁸ and were the principal means of establishing there the worship of images;⁹ but in the west the latter was still rejected.¹⁰

Justinian was distinguished for building splendid churches.¹¹

To the festivals were added the two feasts of Mary, festum purificationis (ὑπαπαντή) on the second of February; and festum annunciationis (ἡ τοῦ εὐαγγελισμοῦ ἡμέρα) on the 25th of March.¹²

On the three days before the ascension (jejunium rogationum), Mamercus or Mamertus, bishop of Vienne (452), had instituted solemn rites of penance and prayer, accompanied by fasting and public worship (litaniae, rogationes), appointed for the three days

But after this appeared the εἰκόνας ἀχειροποίητοι, a counterpart of the ἀγάλματα διοπετῆ of heathenism, first noticed in Evagrius, iv. 27. See Div. I. § 21, note 4.

Nic. ii. ann. 787, Act. 4 (Mansi, xiii. 43), where he defends προσκύνησις before the pictures, mentions even αἰμάτων ῥύσεις ἐξ εἰκόνων and designates the pictures as πρὸς ἀνάμνησιν καὶ τιμὴν καὶ εὐπρέπειαν ἐκκλησιῶν προκειμένα καὶ προσκυνούμενα. Et quidem zelum vos, ne quid manufactum adorari posset, habuisse laudavimus, sed frangere easdem imagines non debuisset indicamus. Idcirco enim pictura in Ecclesiis adhibetur, ut hi, qui litteras nesciunt, saltē in parietibus videndo legant, quae legere in codicibus non valent (as Paulinus Nilus, § 99, notes 47 and 48). Tua ergo Fraternitas et illas servare, et ab earum adorata populum prohibere debuit: quatenus et litterarum nescii haberent, unde scientiam historiae colligerent, et populus in picturae adoratione minime peccaret. Among other things, frangi ergo non debuit, quod non ad adorandum in ecclesiis, sed ad instruendas solummodo mentes fuit nescientium collocatum. Cf. lib. ix. Ep. 52, ad Secundinum: Imagines, quas tibi dirigendas per Dulcidium Diaconum rogasti, misimus. Unde valde nobis tua postulatio placuit: quia illum toto corde, tota intentione quaeris, cujus imaginem prae oculis habere desideras, ut te visio corporalis quotidiana reddat exercitatum: ut dum picturam illius vides, ad illum animo inardescas, cujus imaginem videre desideras. Ab re non facinus, si per visibilia invisibilia demonstramus. Scio quidem, quod imaginem Salvatoris nostri non ideo petis, ut quasi Deum colas, sed ob recordationem filii Dei in ejus amore recalescas, cujus te imaginem videre desideras. Et nos quidem non quasi ante divinitatem ante illam prosternimur, sed illum adoramus, quem per imaginem aut natum, aut passum, sed et in throno sedentem recordamur.

Justinian first transferred to the spiritual relationship (cognatio spiritualis) between the god-father and the god-child, the civil consequences arising from corporeal affinities.¹⁶

Gregory the Great, in his Sacramentarium, gave that form to the Roman liturgy relative to the Lord's Supper, which it has substantially preserved ever since.¹⁷ The earlier notions of this rite, and of its atoning power, became more exaggerated in proportion as the idea became general, which was thrown out by Augustine as a conjecture,¹⁸ that men would be subjected to a purifying fire immediately after death.¹⁹ Gregory the Great did much to confirm these notions by descriptions of the tortures of departed souls, and the mitigation of such tortures by the sacrifice offered in the Supper.²⁰ In proportion as the latter assumed the form of a tremendum mysterium, the more seldom did the people partake of it, so that it was necessary for the Church to enact laws on the subject.²¹ In other respects the ideas of the nature of the elements in the Supper suffered no change (§ 101, note 15).²²

²⁰ Greg. M. Dialog. lib. iv. c. 39: Qualis hinc quisque egreditur, talis in iudicio praesentatur. Sed tamen de quibusdam levibus culpis esse ante iudicium purgatorius ignis credendus est, pro eo quod veritas dicit, quia si quis in S. Spiritu blasphemiam dixerit, neque in hoc saeculo remittetur ei, neque in futuro (Matth. xii. 31). In qua sententia datur intelligi, quasdam culpas in hoc saeculo, quasdam saeculo vero in futuro posse laxari.—Instances of such tormented souls, ibid. ii. 23, iv. 40, especially iv. 55: Si culpae post mortem insolubiles non sunt, multum solet animas etiam post mortem sacra oblatio hostiae salutaris adjuvare, ita ut hanc nonnumquam ipsae defunctorum animae expetere videantur, with two examples. Peter, listening, artlessly asks (iv. 40): Quid hoc est, quaeso, quod in his extremis temporibus tam multa de animabus clarescunt, quae ante latuerunt: ita ut apertis revelationibus atque ostensionibus venturam aeternam inferre se nobis atque aperire videatur? To which Gregory replies (c. 41): Ita est: nam quantum praesens saeculum propinquat ad finem, tantum futurum saeculum ipsa jam quasi propinquitate tangitur, et signis manifestioribus aperitur.

SIXTH CHAPTER.

SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY, AND ITS CONDITION WITHOUT THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

I. IN ASIA AND AFRICA.

During the reign of Justinian I., the people dwelling on the Black Sea, viz., the Abasgi, Alani, Lazi, Zani, and Heruli, declared themselves in favor of Christianity, and for the Catholic Church. But the Nestorians and Monophysites made much more important acquisitions to the cause, during this period, in Asia and Africa.

The *Nestorians*¹ not only maintained themselves in Persia, where they enjoyed exclusive protection (§ 88, at the end), but also spread themselves on all sides in Asia, particularly into *Arabia*² and India,³ and it is said, in the year 636, even as PP., in Heroldi Haereseologia. Basil. 1556. fol. p. 683, etc.): Certe sacramenta, quae sumimus, corporis et sanguinis Christi, divina res est, propter quod et per eadem divinae efficiuntur consortes naturae, et tamen esse non desinit substantia vel natura panis et vini. Et certe imago et similitudo corporis et sanguinis Christi in actione mysteriorum celebrantur. Satis ergo nobis evidenter ostenditur, hoc nobis in ipso Christo Domino sentiendum, quod in ejus imagine profitemur, celebramus et sumimus, ut sicut in haec, scilicet in divinam transant Spiritu S. perficiuntur substantiam permanentem tamen in sua proprietate natura, sic illud ipsum mysterium principale, cujus nobis efficientiam virtutemque veraciter repraesentant. Facundus Hermian. pro defens. iii. capitul. ix. 5: Nam sacramentum adoptionis suscipere dignatus est Christus, et quando circumciscus est, et quando baptizatus est; et potest sacramentum adoptionis adoptio nuncupari, sicut sacramentum corporis et sanguinis ejus, quod est in pane et poculo consecrato, corpus ejus et sanguinem dicimus: non quod proprie corpus ejus sit panis, et poculum sanguis: sed quod in se mysterium corporis ejus et sanguinis contineant. Hinc et ipse Dominus benedictum panem et calicem, quem discipulis tradidit, corpus et sanguinem suum vocavit. Cramer's Forts. v. Bossuet, Th. 5, Bd. 1, S. 200, ff.

So too in Male. But ἐν τῇ Καλλιύνα—ἐπίσκοπος ἐστὶν ἀπὸ Περσίδος χειροτονούμενος. So also ἐν τῇ νήσῳ τῇ καλουμένη Διοσκορίδους—Ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἐπὶ Βάκτροις, καὶ Οὐννοῖς, καὶ Πέρσαις, καὶ λοιποῖς Ἰνδοῖς, καὶ Περσαρμενίοις, καὶ Μήδοις, καὶ Ἑλαμίταις καὶ πάσῃ τῇ χώρᾳ Περσίδος καὶ ἐκκλησίαι ἁπείροι, far as China.⁴ Along with the theological tendencies of the Syrian Church, whence they had come forth, they preserved its learning likewise; and were thus the introducers of Greek science into Asia. Their school in Nisibis was the only theological institution of Christendom in the sixth century.⁵

The Monophysites, on the other hand, spread themselves from Alexandria toward the south. Among the Hamdschars or Homerites, Christianity had been early established (§ 107); though it did not become general till the time of Anastasius.⁶ But when Dhu-Nowas, a Jewish king of this people, afterward persecuted the Christians with violence (522), the Aethiopian king Elesbaan came to their aid (529); in consequence of which the Homerites were subject to Aethiopian rulers for seventy-two years.⁷ As the Homerite Christians were Mono-

The genuineness of the monument has always been doubted by many. So in particular by La Croze, against whom Assemanus Bibl. Orient. iii. ii. 538, defends it. On the contrary, Beausobre (Hist. de Manichéé, c. 14), Neumann in the Jahrb. f. wissen. Kritik, 1829, S. 592, and Von Boblen (das alte Indien. Königsberg. 1830, Th. 1. § 123.

SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY AMONG THE GERMAN NATIONS.

The first German people converted to the Christianity of the Catholic Church were the Franks, who since 486 had been masters of the greatest part of Gaul. Clotvis, king of the Salian Franks, influenced by his queen Clotildis, and by a vow made at the battle of Tolbiacum (Zülpich, 496), was baptized by Remigius, bishop of Rheims,¹ and his people followed his example.

From the Franks Christianity was propagated among the Allemani, who were subject to them.²

So far as the inclination of all Romans that had been subjected to the yoke of the Germans leaned immediately to the Franks as Catholic Christians,³ the latter obtained an important predominance of influence over the other German people. For this reason the others successively came over at this time to the Catholic Church.⁴ This took place in regard to the Burgundians, under their King Sigismund (517); the Suevi, under their Kings Carrarich (550-559) and Theodemir I. (559-569);⁵ the Visigoths, under their King Reccared at the council of Toledo (589).⁶ Since under Justinian the Vandal kingdom in Africa (534), and that of the Ostrogoths in Upper Italy (553), had been destroyed, Arianism also lost its dominion in those territories.

On the contrary, it revived under the rule of the Lombards in Italy (from 568), and was longest maintained among this people.⁷

In other parts, the amalgamation of the German conquerors with the older inhabitants of their land,⁸ and the development of the new European nations, were universally effected by similarity of faith.⁹

At the end of this period began the conversion of the Anglo-Saxons in Britain. Augustine, sent thither by Gregory the Great with forty Benedictines (596), was first received by Ethelbert, King of Kent, through the influence of his Queen Bertha, who was a Frank. From Kent Christianity was gradually diffused in the other Anglo-Saxon kingdoms.¹⁰

Although the ecclesiastical constitution and code which had been formed in the Roman Empire were adopted by the German nations,¹ yet the relations of the hierarchy received a peculiar form. The kings soon saw how much their power could be supported and strengthened by the reputation of the clergy;² and they endeavored therefore to bind more closely to themselves the heads of the clergy, the bishops and abbots. Churches and monasteries received considerable possessions from their hands,³ while the bishops and abbots, as the temporary

The possessions of the Church were only by degrees, as exceptions, freed from all taxes; but, though exempted from contributions to the royal exchequer, continued to be devoted to military services,⁵ which were in some instances rendered in person.⁶ Besides, the kings regarded church property as feudal tenures (beneficia), and frequently did not scruple to resume them.⁷ It was stipulated by law that the choice of a bishop should be confirmed by the king;⁸ but for the most part, the kings themselves appointed to vacant sees.⁹

Synods could not assemble without the royal permission; their decrees had to be confirmed by the king, being previously invalid. In the mean time they began to consult about the affairs of the Church, even in the meetings of the king's vassals or council (Placitum regis, Synodus regia, Synodale concilium).¹⁰ Synods became more rare, and at length ceased entirely.

This arrangement completed the downfall of the metropolitan system, which had been already weakened in many ways. The king became the only judge of the bishops.¹¹ But in proportion as they rose higher in civil relations, the other clergy sank so much the deeper. No free man was allowed to enter the clergy without the royal permission.¹² Hence the clergy were chosen for the most part from among the serfs; and on this very account the bishop acquired an unlimited power over them, which frequently manifested itself in the most tyrannical conduct.¹³ The administration of justice among the clergy was at first conducted according to Roman principles of legislation, as they were in force before Justinian (§ 91, note 5, ff.),¹⁴ till the Synod of Paris (615) gave the clergy the privilege of being brought before a mixed tribunal, in all cases which hitherto belonged to the civil judge alone.¹⁵ A wider influence was given to the bishops by committing to them an oversight of the entire administration of justice,¹⁶ while their spiritual punishments were made more effectual by connecting with excommunication civil disadvantages also.¹⁷ On the other hand, in the application of their discipline they were bound to regard the intercession of the king.¹⁸

Under these circumstances, the popes could not directly interfere in ecclesiastical matters; and their communication with the established church of the country depended entirely on the royal pleasure.¹⁹

MORAL INFLUENCES OF CHRISTIANITY AMONG THE GERMAN NATIONS

As is usual among rude people when coming into closer contact with the more enlightened, there proceeded from the Romans, then greatly corrupted, pernicious influences rather than cultivation to the Germans, which were exhibited among the latter in the roughest form, less hidden in their case by the external rites prevalent among the Romans. Christianity, as it was then proclaimed, a series of dogmas and laws, could not restrain this corruption. Since it offered expiations for all offenses, along with its prohibitions of them, there was opened up to wild barbarity a way of first enjoying the lust of sin, and then of procuring exemption from the guilt of it. There was little concern for instruction. The public services of religion by means of their pomp and the use of a foreign, i. e., the Latin language, awakened obscure feelings rather than right ideas. As the grossest notions were entertained of hell, so also were similar ideas prevalent respecting the power of the church, the influence of the saints,¹ the merit of ecclesiastical and monkish exercises, the value of alms to the church and to the poor.² These notions are. Et primam quidem petitionis ejus partem, quia facillior fuit, mox ut dixit, implevimus.—Ut autem nullius deinceps, quod absit, suspicionis resideret occasio, etiam illam aliam partem, quam memoratus vir illustris Rufinus admonuit, facere mutavi, scilicet propriis verbis confessionem fidei, quam tenemus, exponens. Then follows a diffused confession of faith, in which, however, he mentions only four oecumenical synods, not the fifth. At the same time he writes to Sapaudus Episc. Arelat. (Ep. 15, l. c. p. 727) praying, ut, si epistola, quam—ad—Childebertum regem direximus, in qua de institutis beatissimorum patrum nostrorum fidem catholicam nostro per Dei gratiam sermone deprumpsimus, tam ipsi gloriosissimo regi, quam caritati tue, vel aliis fratribus cœpiscopis nostris, placuit, rescripto tue caritatis celerius agnoscamus. Cf. Preuves des Libertés de l'église Gallicane, c. 3. Planck, ii. 673.

² Cf. vita S. Eligii Episc. Noviomensis libb. iii. written A.D. 672, by his contemporary Audoenus Archiep. Rotomag. in Luc. d'Achery Spicilegium, ed. ii. tom. ii. p. 76, ss. Eligius, bishop of Noyon, was considered a man of extraordinary sanctity (Vitae, lib. ii. c. 6, p. 92: Huic itaque viro sanctissimo inter caetera virtutum suarum miracula id etiam a Domino concessum erat, ut sanctorum Martyrum corpora, quae per tot saecula adita were strengthened by legends and miracles, which were certainly in part an imposition of the clergy,³ but were far from exerting any good moral influence on the people.⁴ Crimes of the grossest kind were common among the clergy,⁵ as well as the kings and populis hactenus habebantur, eo investigante ac nimio ardore fidei indagante patefacta proderunt: siquidem nonnulla venerabantur prius a populo in locis, quibus non erant, et tamen quo in loco certius humata tegerentur, prorsus ignorabatur). The more remarkable, therefore, is his exhortation, contained in the Vitae, lib. ii. c. 15, p. 96, ss. He first refers to the judgment-day, then to the points of faith, then to the duty of performing opera christiana, and thus continues: Ille itaque bonus Christianus est, qui nulla phylacteria, vel adinventiones diaboli credit.—Ille, inquam, bonus Christianus est, qui hospitiis pedes lavat, et tamquam parentes carissimos diligit; qui juxta quod habet pauperibus eleemosynam tribuit; qui ad Ecclesiam frequentius venit, et oblationem quae in altari Deo offeratur exhibet; qui de fructibus suis non gustat, nisi prius Deo aliquid offerat; qui stateras dolosas et mensuras duplices non habet; qui pecuniam suam non dedit ad usuram; qui et ipse caste vivit, et filios vel vicinos docet, ut caste et cum timore Dei vivant; et quoties sanctae solemnitates adveniunt, ante dies plures castitatem etiam cum propria uxore custodit, ut securam conscientiam ad Domini altare accedere possit; qui postremo symbolum vel orationem dominicam memoriter tenet, et filios ac filias eadem docet. Qui talis est, sine dubio verus Christianus est.—Ecce audistis, Fratres, quales sint Christiani boni: ideo quantum potestis cum Dei adjutorio laborate, ut nomen christianum non sit falsum in vobis. Sed ut veri Christiani esse possitis, semper praecepta Christi et cogitate in mente, et implete in operatione. Redimite animas vestras de poena, dum habetis in potestate remedia; eleemosynam juxta vires facite, pacem et charitatem habete, discordes ad concordiam revocate, mendacium fugite, perjurium expavescite, falsum testimonium non dicite, furtum non facite, oblationes et decimas Ecclesiis offerite, luminaria sanctis locis juxta quod habetis exhibete, symbolum et orationem dominicam memoria retinete, et filiis vestris insinuate.—Ad Ecclesiam quoque frequentius convenite, Sanctorum patrocinia humiliter expetite, diem dominicam pro reverentia resurrectionis Christi absque ullo servili opere colite, Sanctorum solemnitates pio affectu celebrate, proximos vestros sicut vos ipsos diligite, etc.—Quod si observaveritis, securi in die judicii ante tribunal aeterni judicis venientes dicetis: Da, Domine, quia dedimus: miserere, quia misericordiam fecimus; nos implevimus quod jussisti, tu redde quod promisisti.

the people, without shame for them being exhibited,⁶ while public opinion did not declare against them in a manner conformable to the spirit of Christianity.⁷ The moral influence of Christianity on the multitude was confined to the external influence of church laws and church discipline, so far as these were respected. The period of legal restraint, as a preparation for the Gospel, had now returned.

Though every thing heathen was strictly forbidden,⁸ yet secret idolatry⁹ and apostasy from Christianity¹⁰ frequently appeared. It was still more common for the new Christians to be unable en-

⁷ Thus Gregory Tur. relates, without disguise, the crimes of Chlodowich, and yet he passes this judgment on him, ii. 40: Prosternebat enim quotidie Deus hostes ejus sub manu ipsius, et augebat regnum ejus, eo quod ambularet recto corde coram eo, et faceret, quae placita erant in oculis ejus. Löbell's (p. 263) exculpation of this judgment is of no avail. It is nothing but moral barbarousness, when Gregory admits and disapproves the crimes of Clovis, and yet designates him as pious on account of his confession. Comp. iii. 1: Velim, si placet, parumper conferre, quae Christianis beatam confitentibus Trinitatem prospera successerint, et quae haereticis eandem scindentibus fuerint in ruinam.—Hanc Chlodovechus Rex confessus, ipsos haereticos adjutorio ejus oppressit, regnumque suum per totas Gallias dilatavit: Alaricus hanc denegans, a regno et populo, atque ab ipsa, quod majus est, vita multatur aeterna. Moral barbarousness is also shown in the sentiments expressed concerning Guntramnus Boso v. 14: Gunthramnus alias sane bonus, nam ad perjuriam nimium praeeparatus erat. Comp. ix. 10: Fuit in actu levis, avaritiae inhians, rerum alienarum ultra modum cupidus, omnibus jurans, et nulli promissa adimplens. In like manner, concerning king Theudebert, iii. 25: Magnum se atque in omni bonitate praecipuum reddidit. Erat enim regnum cum justitia regens, sacerdotes venerans, Ecclesias munerans, pauperes elevans, et multa multis beneficia pia ac dulcissima accommodans voluntate. Omne tributum, quod in fisco suo ab Ecclesiis in Arverno sitis reddebatur, elementer indulisit. Comp. de vitis Patrum, c. 17, § 2: Nam Theudebertus—(cum) multa inique exerceret, et ab eodem (Nictio) plerumque corripere, quod vel ipse perpetraret, vel perpetrantes non argueret, etc.

⁹ Even as late as the time of Gregory of Tours, an image of Diana was worshiped at Treves. (Greg. Tur. Hist. viii. 15.) In Herbadilla at Nantes, about the same time, were statues of Jupiter, Mercury, Venus, Diana, and Hercules. (Mabillon Acta SS. Ord. S. Bened. i. 683.) In like manner there was found in Luxovium, when Columbanus came thither about 590, imaginum lapidearum densitas, quas cultu miserabili rituque profano vetusta paganorum tempora honorabant (Jonas in vita Columbanus, c. 17, in Mabillon Acta SS. Ord. S. Bened. ii. 13). Martinus Ep. Bracarenensis (about 570) wrote de origine idolorum (ed. A. Majus Classicorum auctorum, iii. 379), pro castigazione rusticorum, qui adhuc pristina paganorum superstitione detenti, cultum venerationis plus daemouii quam Deo persolvunt. The Roman names of deities were frequently transferred to Celtic and German deities also; and therefore the peculiar character of this worship can not always be perceived. tirely to lay aside reverence for their old gods, and the power they were supposed to possess.¹¹ Thus the remains of old pagan superstition were preserved among the people along with Christianity.¹² In civil legislation, all traces of heathenism were likewise rejected,¹³ though the most extended freedom of divorce remained,¹⁴

Since the invasion of the Anglo-Saxons, ecclesiastical as well as social order had been subverted among the Britons, who manfully strove for their freedom.¹ But the Irish Church was still in a very prosperous state. Factis rei veritas adprobetur: succendatur igni aeneus, et in ferventi aqua annulas cujusdam projiciatur. Qui vero eum ex ferventi unda sustulerit, ille justitiam consequi comprobatur: quo facto pars diversa ad cognitionem hujus justitiae convertatur, etc.

¹⁶ Gregor. M. lib. xi. Ep. 76, ad Mellitum Abbatem (also in Bedae Hist. eccl. Angl. i. 30): Cum vos Deus omnipotens ad—Augustinum Episcopum perduxerit, dicite ei, quid diu mecum de causa Anglorum cogitans tractavi, videlicet, quia fana idolorum destrui in eadem gente minime debeant, sed ipsa, quae in eis sunt, idola destruantur. Aqua benedicta fiat, in eisdem fanis aspergatur, altaria construantur, reliquiae ponantur: quia si fana eadem bene constructa sunt, necesse est ut a cultu daemonum in obsequium veri Dei debeant commutari: ut, dum gens ipsa eadem fana non videt destrui, de corde errorem deponat, et Deum verum cognoscens ac adorans, ad loca, quae consuevit, familiarius concurrat. Et quia boves solent in sacrificio daemonum multos occidere, debet his etiam hac de re aliqua solemnitas immutari: ut die dedicationis vel natalitii SS. Martyrum, quorum illic reliquiae ponuntur, tabernacula sibi circa easdem ecclesias, quae ex fanis commutatae sunt, de ramis arborum faciant et religiosi convivii solemnitatem celebrent. Nec diabolo jam animalia immolent, sed ad laudem Dei in esum suum animalia occidant, et donatori omnium de satietate sua gratias referant: ut, dum eis aliqua exterius gaudia reservantur, ad interiora gaudia consentire facilius valeant. Nam duris mentibus simul omnia abscondere impossibile esse non dubium est: quia is, qui locum summum ascendere nititur, necesse est ut gradibus vel passibus, non autem saltibus elevetur.

founded by him on the island Hy (St. Iona), and transmitted this relation to his successors.³

Close as the union was between the British and Irish Churches, they could yet have little connection of importance, on account of their remoteness, with other Churches. Hence they had retained many old arrangements, and developed them in a peculiar way, after such usages had been altered in other countries.⁴

⁴ These appear in the following controversy, and relate to (a) the reckoning of Easter. The Britons were by no means Quartodecimani, though they were often called so from ignorance (ex. gr. Bedae Chron. ad. ann. 4591), and appealed too, themselves, to John and the Asiatics (for example, Colman, Beda, H. E. iii. 25). Beda Hist. eccl. iii. 4: Paschae diem non semper in luna quartadecima cum Judaeis, ut quidam rebantur, sed in die quidem dominica, alia tamen quam decebat hebdomada, celebrabant. Namely, ii. 2: Paschae diem a decimaquarta usque ad vicesimam lunam observabant. Quae computatio octoginta quatuor annorum circulo continetur. The Romans on the other hand (ii. 19), adstruebant, quia dominicum Paschae diem a quintadecima luna usque ad vicesimam primam lunam oporteret inquiri. The difference therefore, was, that the Easter festival fell on different Sundays in several years. The cause of this was, that owing to the previous confusion on the subject, and for the purpose of removing it (see above, § 100, note 13), the Aquitanian Victorius first (457), and afterward the Roman abbot, Dionysius Exiguus (525), had made new Easter tables, which, in succession, were brought into use, first in Italy, and then in the other western churches (see Ideler's Chronologie, ii. 275). On the contrary, the British church had retained the old cycle of 84 years. The state of the controversy is more minutely developed by Jac. Usserius Britannicarum Ecclesiarum antiquit. Dublin. 1639. 4. p. 925. Humphr. Prideaux Connection of Scripture History, ii. 273. Ideler's Chronol. ii. 295. (b) The tonsure. The Roman clergy were in coronam atonsi; the British, as also the monks elsewhere, in older times, see Paulini Nol. Ep. vii., had the fore part of the head bald. The former called their tonsure tonsuram Petri, and that of the Britons tonsuram Simonis Magi (Beda H. E. v. 21). Usserii Brit. Eccl. antiqu. p. 921. (c) Lanfrancus Episc. ad Terdelvacum Hibern. regem, written 1074 (in J. Usserii Vett. epistolarum hibernicarum syll. Dublin. 1632. 4. p. 72), accuses them, quod quisque pro arbitrio suo legitime sibi copulatum uxorem, nulla canonica causa interveniente, relinquit, et aliam quamlibet, seu sibi vel relictac uxori consanguinitate propinquam, sive quam alius simili improbitate deseruit, maritali seu fornicaria lege, punienda sibi temeritate conjungit. Quod Episcopi ab uno Episcopo consecrantur. Quod infantes baptismo sine chrismate consecrata baptizantur. Quod sacri ordines per pecuniam ab Episcopis dantur. But from these the 1 and 4, which afterward prevailed, may have sprung. We have also to direct attention to the following peculiarities of the British-Irish church, which are not touched on in the disputes. They had (a) no celibacy of the priests. Patrick himself was sprung from priests, see Patricii confessio: Patrem habui Calpurnium Diaconum, filium quondam Potiti Presbyteri. Synodus Patricii about 456, can. 6 (in D. Wilkins Concilia Magnae Britanniae et Hiberniae, i. 2): Quicumque clericus ab ostiario usque ad sacerdotem—si non more romano capilli ejus tonsi sint (i. e., cut short generally, the differences of tonsure arose subsequently), et uxor ejus si non velato capite ambulaverit, pariter a laicis contemnuntur, et ab Ecclesia separantur. Synodus Hibern. in d'Achery Spicilegium, i. 493: Qui ab accessu adolescentiae usque ad trigesimum annum aetatis suae probabiliter vixerit, una tantum uxore virgine sumta contentus, quinque annis Subdiaconus, et quinque annis Diaconus, quadagesimo anno Presbyter, quinquagesimo Epis-

Since the condemnation of the Three Chapters, a great mistrust of the Romish orthodoxy had arisen here also.⁵

When Augustine formed a new Church with Roman arrangements among the Anglo-Saxons, he required the British clergy (Culdees)⁶ to adopt the Roman ecclesiastical arrangements, especially with regard to the mode of reckoning Easter; and to yield to him, as archbishop of Canterbury, the primacy of all Britain.⁷ But the negotiations at two meetings⁸ (603) led to copus stet. The Irish Clement defended the marriage of a bishop as late as the eighth century. Bonifacii Ep. 67. (b) A peculiar liturgy. Usser. Brit. Eccles. Antiqu. p. 916. (c) The monks had a peculiar system of rules. Usser. p. 918.—That the British-Irish Church derived its origin from Asia Minor, and had preserved a purer, simpler Christianity, are mere empty conjectures, which have been carried to an extravagant length, especially by Münter in the Theol. Studien u. Krit. 1833, iii. 744. The opinion that the Britons, as Quartodecimani, had the Asiatic mode of celebrating the passover, an opinion which principally lies at the foundation of that belief, is obviously false.

⁵ Comp. § 111, note 25; § 117, note 25; § 124, note 19. Gregorii Magni Ep. ad Episcopos Hiberniæ, A. D. 592 (lib. ii. Ep. 36): Reducat caritatem vestram tandem integritas fidei ad matrem, quæ vos generavit, Ecclesiam.—Nam in Synodo, in qua de tribus capitulis actum est, aperto liquet nihil de fide convulsum esse vel aliquatenus immutatum, sed (sicut scitis) de quibusdam illic solummodo personis est actitatum.—Quod autem scribitis, quia ex illo tempore inter alias provincias maxime flagellatur Italia, non hoc ad ejus debetis intorquere exprobrum, quoniam scriptum est: quem diligit Dominus castigat.—Ut igitur de tribus capitulis animis vestris ablata dubietate possit satisfactio abundanter infundi, librum, quem ex hac re sanctæ memoriæ decessor meus Pelagius Papa scripserat, vobis utile judicavi transmittere. Quem si deposito voluntariæ defensionis studio, puro vigilantique corde sæpius volueritis relegere, eum vos per omnia secuturos, et ad unitatem nostram reversuros nihilominus esse confido. However, at a later period, Columbanus defended, with zeal, the three chapters against Boniface IV. See below, note 13.

no agreement; they gave rise rather to bitter hatred between the two parties.⁹

At this time the Irish monk Columbanus came into the kingdom of Burgundy (about 590), where he acquired great reputation by his strict piety and cultivated mind, and founded several convents, particularly that at Luxovium (Luxeuil). Here he not only introduced a peculiar system of monastic rules, but also continued faithful to the peculiarities of his mother Church, and defended the Irish mode of celebrating Easter with great zeal.¹⁰ At length he displeased King Theodorich II., on account of his boldness; was banished (about 606); labored some years in the conversion of the Alemanni at the lake of Constance; then transferred this task to his pupil Gallus; founded the con-ministerium baptizandi—juxta morem sanctae Romanae et apostolicae Ecclesiae completis, ut genti Anglorum una nobiscum verbum Domini praedicetis; caetera quae agitis, quamvis moribus nostris contraria, aequanimiter cuncta tolerabimus. At illi nil horum se facturos, neque illum pro Archiepiscopo habituros esse respondebant. The papal primacy was not at all a subject of dispute. The first rank among the bishops was conceded to the popes by the Britons, but they believed so in an erroneous way (see note 5). But the popes themselves did not yet lay claim to a greater ecclesiastical power than that of other apostolic sees (see § 117, notes 18-20); and so one appealed against the Britons, not to papal authority, but to the statuta canonica quaternae sedis Apostolicae, Romanae videlicet, Hierosolymitanae, Antiochenae, Alexandrinae, to the old councils, and to the universalis Ecclesiae catholicae unanimem regulam (see Cummiani Ep. ad Segienum Huessem Abbatem, in J. Usserii Vett. epist. hibernicarum sylloge, p. 27, 28). The Britons did not consider the pope as the sole successor of Peter, but all bishops. Gildas de excidio Britanniae, P. iii. cap. 1, describes bad priests as sedem Petri Apostoli immundis pedibus usurpantes (comp. § 94, note 36). That the Britons acknowledged no ecclesiastical power of the pope over them, is proved by their opposition to the Roman regulations, an opposition which continued in Ireland down to the twelfth century. Spelman (Conc. Brit. i. 108) has published for the first time, from a Cottonian MS. in the old British language, the following declaration of Dinooth, abbot of the monastery of Bangor, which he is said to have made to Augustine: Notum sit et absque dubitatione vobis, quod nos omnes sumus et quilibet nostrum obedientes et subditi ecclesiae Dei, et Papae Romae, et unicuique vero Christiano et pio, ad amandum unumquemque in suo gradu in caritate perfecta, et ad juvandum unumquemque eorum verbo et facto fore filios Dei. Et aliam obedientiam, quam istam, non scio debitam ei, quem vos nominatis esse Papam; nec esse patrem patrum vindicari et postulari: et istam obedientiam nos sumus parati dare et solvere ei et cuique Christiano continuo. Praeterea nos sumus sub gubernatione episcopi Caerlionis super Osca, qui est ad supervidendum sub Deo super nobis, ad faciendum nos servare viam spiritualem. It is however spurious. See Döllinger's Gesch. d. christl. Kirche, i. ii. 218. Stevenson on Bedae H. E. ii. 2, p. 102.

⁹ Thus Augustine's successor, Laurentius (Beda, ii. 4), complained that the Scottish bishop, Dagamus, ad nos veniens, non solum cibum nobiscum, sed nec in eodem hospitio, quo vescebamur, sumere voluit. Comp. Beda, ii. 20: Usque hodie moris est Brittonum, fidem religionemque Anglorum pro nihilo habere, neque in aliquo eis magis communicare quam paganis.

THIRD DIVISION.

FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE MONOTHELITIC CONTROVERSY, AND FROM THE TIME OF MUHAMMED TO THE BEGINNING OF THE CONTROVERSY CONCERNING THE WORSHIP OF IMAGES. FROM 622-726.

FIRST CHAPTER.

RESTRAINING OF THE CHURCH IN THE EAST.

Though the Persians tolerated the Nestorians, they hated the Catholic Christians, as was apparent in the war which Kesra (Chosröes) II. Purveez carried on against the East Roman empire from A.D. 604, and especially in the taking of Jerusalem (614). On this account the victories of Heraclius from 621, ending with the dethronement of Chosröes by his son Schirujeh (Siröes) (628) were of importance in relation to the Church. Besides, Heraclius brought back the wood of the true cross which had been carried off; and instituted a festival in commemoration of it, the στανρώσιμος ἡμέρα, festum exaltationis (14th of September).¹

In the mean time, a far more dangerous enemy of the Church had appeared in Arabia. Muhammed, in the year 611, began to preach Islamism, at first in private, and then publicly among the Koreish in Mecca. At first, indeed, he was obliged to give way to his enemies (15th July, 622, Hegira),² but gained over the city Yatschreb (Medina al Nabi) in his favor; extended his dominion and his doctrines thence, prince and prophet in one person, till they spread far into Arabia; at length conquered Mecca (630); consecrated the Caaba as the chief temple of Islamism; and bequeathed to his successors (Chalifs) Arabia,

Islamism, whose holy writings are contained in the Koran,⁴ collected by Abu-Bekr, was, in its chief doctrines, a compound of Judaism and Christianity.⁵ But it made the doctrine of the infinite sublimity of God its basis, in a way so one-sided that an absolute dependence of man on God resulted from it; and ideas of a likeness and an inward union between man and God, and consequently the fundamental principles of all the higher morality, found no place in the system. By making it a religious duty to wage war on unbelievers, by its fatalism, and its sensual promises, it excited among the rude and powerful people of the Arabs so unconquerable a spirit for war, and so wild a desire for conquest,⁶ that the two neighboring kingdoms, the Persian and the Byzantine, could not withstand such resistance, amid their internal weaknesses. The provinces of the Byzantine empire, which lay nearest, were the more easily conquered, inasmuch as the greater number of the inhabitants consisted of Monophysites who joyfully met the Arabians as their deliverers. The conquest of Syria was begun under the first Chaliph Abu-Bekr († 634), and completed under the second, Omar (639), under whom the valiant Amru also overcame Egypt (640). Under Othman the Persian empire was conquered (651). During the reign of the Ommeyyades, their general Musa, brought first the entire northern coast of Africa (707), and then Spain also (711), under the Arabian dominion; while, on the other side, the Arabians advanced several times as far as Constantinople, and twice besieged the city for a long time (669 till 676, and 717 till 718).

Jews and Christians were tolerated by the Arabs on condition of paying a poll-tax; and though sometimes severely oppressed, yet they were not compelled to change their religion.⁷ Still, however, the advantages held out to those who adopted Islamism attracted many converts; and thus Christianity not only lost all political importance in the conquered provinces, but the number of its confessors was always diminishing in proportion to that of the Moslems. The catholic patriarchates of Antioch, Jerusalem, and Alexandria, remained unoccupied; for their possessors, living in the Greek empire, were merely titulars.

⁷ Muhammed was tolerant at first of other religions (cf. Sura, ii. et v.): afterward, however, he made it the duty of believers, by the 9th and 67th Surats, to carry on religious war, for the purpose of exterminating idolaters and making Jews and Christians tributary (comp. Gerock's Christologie des Koran, S. 118). Before this he had granted the Christians of some parts of Arabia, as well as the Jews and Sabaeans, letters of freedom, though doubtless both the Testamentum et pactiones initae inter Mohammedem et christianae fidei cultores (first brought from the East by the Capuchin Pacificus Scaliger, and printed at Paris 1630, 4to, and often afterward), and the Pactum Muhammedis, quod indulsit Monachis montis Sinai et Christianis in universum (in Pococke Descr. of the East, Lond. 1743. fol. i. 268, translated into German, 2d edition, Erlangen. 1771. 4. i. 393), in which distinguished privileges are secured to all Christians, are spurious. The humiliating terms under which Omar, at the taking of Jerusalem, 637, allowed freedom of religion to the Christians there (Le Beau Hist. du Bas-Empire, xii. 421), express, on the contrary, the spirit with which the subjugated Christians were treated at a later time. SECOND CHAPTER.

HISTORY OF THE GREEK CHURCH.

MONOTHELITIC CONTROVERSY.

Original Documents in the Acts of the first Lateran Synod, A.D. 649 (ap. Mansi, x. 863), and the sixth General Council, A.D. 680 (ap. Mansi, xi. 190). Anastasii Bibliothecarii (about 870) collectanea de iis quae spectant ad Histor. Monothelit. (prim. ed. J. Sirmond. Paris. 1620. 8, in Sirm. Opp. t. iii. in Bibl. PP. Lugdun. xii. 833, ap. Gallandius, t. xiii. and scattered in Mansi, t. x. and xi.)

Historical authorities: Theophanes (comp. the preface to section 2).

Works: F. Combefisii Hist. haeresis Monothelitarum ac Vindiciae actorum sextae synodi, in his Nov. auctarium Patrum. ii. 3 (Paris. 1648). Walch's Ketzehist. ix. 3. Neander's K. G. iii. 353.

A fresh attempt to bring the Monophysites back to the Catholic Church was followed by no other consequence than that of introducing into the latter a new element of controversy.

When the Emperor Heraclius (A.D. 611–641) during his Persian campaign abode in Armenia and Syria (from 622), he thought he perceived that the Monophysites were particularly stumbled at the consequence arising from the catholic doctrine, viz., two manifestations of will (ἐνέργειαι) in the person of Christ. Sergius, patriarch of Constantinople, having been applied to on the point, declared that the adoption of one active will, and one manifestation of will, was not inconsistent with the received creed of the Church; and therefore the emperor, as well as several bishops, decided in favor of this opinion.¹ But when one of these bishops, Cyrus, whom the emperor had appointed patriarch of Alexandria, reunited (633)² the Severians

² Cyri Epist. altera ad Sergium (ap. Mansi, xi. 561), with the nine articles of agreement appended, p. 563. In the seventh we read: Τὸν αὐτὸν ἕνα Χριστὸν καὶ υἱὸν ἐνεργοῦντα τῷ θεοπροπέῃ καὶ ἀνθρώπινα μὴ θεανδρική ἐνεργεία, κατὰ τὸν ἐν ἁγίοις Διονύσιον (Dionys. Areopag. Epist. iv. ad Cajum. Comp. § 110, note 8. The orthodox read καὶνῇ θεανδρική ἐνεργεία).

of that place with the Catholic Church by articles of agreement, in which that doctrine of one will was expressed; Sophronius, a Palestinian monk, who happened to be there at the time, raised the first opposition to this doctrine, which he afterward continued with zeal after he became patriarch of Jerusalem (634).³ Sergius now advised that nothing should be said on the disputed point.⁴ Pope Honorius agreed with him, not only in this advice, but in the doctrinal view of the matter.⁵ Sophronius was quieted by the incursions of the Arabs; but the spark which had fallen on spirits so susceptible of dogmatic speculation could not be extinguished. In vain did the emperor now issue the Ἐκθεσις (638),⁶ composed by Sergius for the purpose of putting down the controversy. The west, too, now rose up against the new doctrine. The monk Maximus,⁷ a

⁴ Sergii Ep. ad Honorium (ap. Mansi, xi. 529), contains the most credible account of the beginning of the controversy. He assures Cyrus that his advice was, *μηκέτι τοῦ λοιποῦ τινι συγχωρεῖν, μίαν ἢ δύο προφέρειν ἐνεργείας ἐπὶ Χριστῷ τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν· ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον, καθάπερ αἱ ἄγια καὶ οἰκουμενικαὶ παραδεδώκασι σύνοδοι. ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν νῦν μονογενῆ τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰ. What follows is word for word the same as the passage from Sergii Ep. ad Honor., given in note 4. But he continues, *εἰ γὰρ ὁ μαρτὸς Νεστόριος καίπερ διαιρῶν τὴν θεῖαν τοῦ κυρίου ἐνανθρώπησιν, καὶ δύο εἰσάγει νουὺς, δύο θελήματα τοῦτον εἰπεῖν οὐκ ἐτόλμησε, τοῦναντίον δὲ ταυτοβουλῶν τῶν ἐπ' αὐτοῦ ἀναπλαττομένων δύο προσώπων ἐδόξαζε, πῶς δυνατὸν, τοὺς τὴν ὀρθὴν ὁμολογοῦντας πίστιν, καὶ ἕνα νῦν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰ. former companion of Sophronius, roused up Africa against it; Pope John IV. refused to adopt the Ecthesis;⁸ and Pope Theodore excommunicated Paul, patriarch of Constantinople (646). Equally unsuccessful was the attempt of Constans II. (A. D. 642–668) to restore internal tranquillity by means of the edict called Τύπος (648),⁹ which merely recommended silence on the point, without giving a preference to either view; although that tranquillity was most desirable in the kingdom so severely oppressed from without.¹⁰ Pope Martin I. at the first Lateran synod (649),¹¹ even ventured to anathematize the doctrine of one will, and the two imperial decrees relating to it. Martin I. indeed was now deposed, and, together with Maximus, brought to Constantinople (653), where both were condemned to end their life in exile after much severe treatment.¹² This had the effect of restoring communion between Rome and Constantinople,

To remove this, the emperor summoned the sixth general council (680), where Pope Agatho triumphed in procuring a confirmation by the synod of the doctrine of two wills,¹⁴ as copiously unfolded by him in an epistle, after an examination which terminated in peace and order.¹⁵

CONCILIUM QUINISEXTUM.

At the last two general councils, no attention had been paid to the laws affecting the constitution of the Church. To supply this defect, and to obtain a complete synodical code, the emperor Justinian II. (reigned from 685–695, and from 705–711), called a new oecumenical council in the Trullus at Conἀτρέπτως, ἀμερίστως, ἀσυγχύτως ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ κυρίῳ ἡμῶν Ἰ. Χ. τῷ ἀληθινῷ θεῷ ἡμῶν δοξάζομεν, τουτέστι θείαν ἐνέργειαν καὶ ἀνθρωπίνην ἐνέργειαν κατὰ τὸν θεηγόρον Λέοντα τρανέστατα φάσκοντα: “ἐνεργεῖ γὰρ ἑκατέρα μορφή μετὰ τῆς θατέρου κοινωνίας ὅπερ ἴδιον ἔσχηκε, τοῦ μὲν λόγου κατεργαζομένου τοῦτο, ὅπερ ἔστι τοῦ λόγου, τοῦ δὲ σώματος ἐκτελοῦντος ἅπερ ἔστι τοῦ σώματος” (comp. § 89, note 7).

¹⁷ John IV., in the Epist. ad Constantin. (note 8), had endeavored to exculpate Honorius on the ground that he merely asserted quia in salvatore nostro duae voluntates contrariae, id est, in membris ipsius (cf. Rom. vii. 23) penitus non consistant, quoniam nihil vitii traxit et praevaricatione primi hominis. So too Maximus in Epist. ad Marinum ap. Mansi, x. 687, and in the disputatio cum Pyrrho, ibid. p. 739. In all the measures afterward taken in Rome against the Monothelites, no mention was made of Honorius. On the other hand, Synodus oecum. vi. actio xiii. (ap. Mansi, xi. 556), pronounces an anathema on Sergius, Cyrus, Pyrrhus, Petrus, Paulus, Theodorus, bishop of Pharan, καὶ Ὀνώριον τὸν γενομένον πάπαν τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης διὰ τὸ εὐρηκέναι ἡμᾶς διὰ τῶν γενομένων παρ' αὐτοῦ γραμμάτων πρὸς Σέργιον κατὰ πάντα τῇ ἐκείνου γνώμῃ ἐξακολοθησάντα καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ ἄσεβῃ κηρύξαντα δόγματα. This anathema was repeated act. xvi. p. 622, act. xviii. p. 653, etc. Leo II. in his Epist. ad Constant. Imp. in which he confirms the council (ap. Mansi, xi. 731): Anathematizamus—nec non et Honorium, qui hanc apostolicam ecclesiam non apostolicae traditionis doctrina lustravit, sed profana proditiōne immaculatam subvertere conatus est. Cf. ejusd. Epist. ad Episc. Hispaniae ap. Mansi, xi. 1052, and ad Ervigium Regem Hispaniae ibid. p. 1057. Also in the confession of faith subscribed by the following popes at their accession (liber diurnus cap. ii. tit. 9, professio 2), the anathema was pronounced against auctores novi haeretici dogmatis, Sergium, etc.—una cum Honorio, qui pravis eorum assertionibus fomentum impendit.—Anastasius Biblioth. Ep. ad Joannem Diaconum (Collectanea ed. Sirmond. p. 3), is the first that endeavors again, after the example of John IV., whose letter he reproduced, to excuse Honorius, licet huic sexta sancta Synodus quasi haeretico anathema dixerit. But later Catholic historians deny even this fact. Platina in vita Honorii I.: Ferunt Heraclium—Pyrrhii—et Cyri fraudibus deceptum in haeresim Monothelitarum incidisse.—Hos tamen postea tanti erroris auctores, hortante Honorio et veram ante oculos literis et nunciis ponente, relegavit Heraclius. According to Baronius, the acts of the sixth council have been corrupted, and instead of Honorius we should read Theodorus. Bellarmino maintains that the letters of Honorius are either spurious or interpolated. According to Pagi, Garnier, the Ballerini, and others, Honorius was not condemned for heresy, but for negligence; and according to Combesisius and others, even with the consent of Pope Agatho. Against all these evasions see *Richer Historia concil. general. i. 296. stantinople (692),¹ at which 102 canons were passed, for the most part giving legal expression merely to older Church usages, and repeating older canons. It appears that the Greek bishops had expressly entertained the design, both here and at Chalcedon, of reminding the Roman patriarchs, again exalted by their new victory, of the limits of their power. Particularly unacceptable to the Romans were the six canons concerning the Church laws to be esteemed valid,² the marriage of priests,³

² Can. ii. confirms 85 canones Apost., while the Roman church, after Dionysius, adopted only the first 50. This council also sanctioned, as church laws, the canons of the councils of Nice, Ancyra, Neocaesarea, Gangra, Antioch, Laodicea, Constantinople in A.D. 381, Ephesus, Chalcedon, Sardica, Carthage and Constantinople, A.D. 394. Also the canons of Dionysius Alexandrinus, Petrus Alex., Gregory Thaumaturgus, Athanasius, Basil the Great, Gregory Nyssene, Gregory of Nazianzum, Amphilocheus of Iconium, Timotheus Alex., Cyril Alex., and Gennadius patriarch of Constantinople. Lastly, also, of Cyprian and his synod. All other canons are prohibited as not genuine. (Μηδενὶ ἐξείναι—ἑτέρουσ παρὰ τοὺς προκειμένους παραδέχσθαι κανόνας ψευδεπιγράφως ὑπὸ τινων συντέθέντας τῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν κατηλέυειν ἐπιχειρησάντων.) In that list, however, many western synods, and all decretals of Romish bishops, are passed over.

the rank of the patriarch of Constantinople,⁴ against fasting on Saturday,⁵ against the eating of blood and things strangled,⁶ and against pictures of the Lamb.⁷ Though the papal legates had subscribed them, yet Pope Sergius I. refused to accept them. Justinian meant to have him brought to Constantinople, but was prevented by the rebellion of the garrison of Ravenna, and soon after by his deposition.⁸ Thus this council was acknowledged only in the east, but not in the west;⁹ and was the first public step which led to the separation of the two Churches.

FORTUNES OF MONOTHELITISM.

The emperor Philippicus Bardanes (711–713) revived once more the Monothelitic doctrine, and made it the prevailing faith, though merely for a short time.¹ Only Rome withstood him.² But the Greek bishops were as ready to subscribe a Monothelitic bishops, though Justinian had forbidden them by a civil law (Cod. i. iii. 48). Cf. Calixtus de Conjugio Clericorum ed. Henke, p. 389, ss.

confession of faith as they were to return to orthodoxy at the command of the next emperor, *Anastasius II.*³

In Syria, however, a small party of Monothelites remained for a long time. Here all Christian parties had a political importance. The Jacobites were favorable to the Arabians; the Catholics to the Greek emperors, hence called Melchites (from מלך). On the other hand, an independent party had collected in mount Libanus, about the monastery of St. Maro, who adopted the Monothelitic doctrines, chose for themselves a patriarch of Antioch (the first was John Maro, † 701), and under the name of *Maronites*⁴ continued to hold the doctrine of one will in Christ till the time of the Crusades.⁵

⁵ The modern Maronite writers, namely, Abraham Echellensis in several works, Faustus Nayron Diss. de origine et religione Maronitarum. Rom. 1679. 8. Ejud. Enoplia fidei catholicae. Ibid. 1694. 8. Assemani Bibl. orient. i. 496, have introduced confusion into the history of their sect, 1. By asserting that the Maronites were never Monothelites, but were always orthodox (in addition to the opposite reasons given by Renaudot Histor. patr. Alexandr. p. 149, ss. is the testimony of Germanus, patriarch of Constantinople, about 725, de Haeresibus et Synodis, in the Spicilegium Romanum, vii. 65, that the Maronites rejected the sixth synod. The grounds given by both parties may be found in M. Le Quien Oriens christ. iii. 1. Walch's Ketzehist. ix. 474); 2. By identifying the Mardaites (whose name is erroneously derived from מרד) with the Maronites. On the contrary, Anquetil Duperron Recherches sur les migrations des Mardes, ancien peuple de Perse in the Mémoires de l'Acad. des Inscript. tome 50, p. 1, has shown that the Mardaites or Mards, a warlike people in Armenia, were placed as a garrison on Mount Libanus by Constantine Pogonatus A.D. 676 (Theophanes, p. 295), but withdrawn as early as 685 by Justinian II. (Theoph. p. 302, s.)

HISTORY OF THE WESTERN CHURCH.

ECCLESIASTICAL STATE OF ITALY.

Important for the history of this and the following period is Anastasii Bibliothecarii (about 870) *Liber pontificalis, s. vitæ Rom. Pontif.*¹ ed. C. Annib. Fabrotus, in the Corp. hist. Byz. t. xix. Paris. 1649. fol.; Fr. Blanchini. Rom. 1718–35. iv. t. fol. Jo. Vignolius. Romæ. 1724. 4, with the biographies of the later popes in L. A. Muratorii Rerum Ital. scriptor. t. iii. p. i.—Liber diurnus Roman. Pontificum, collected about 715, prim. ed. Luc. Holstenius. Rom. 1658. 8.² J. Garnerius. Paris. 1680. 4. (Supplementum in J. Mabillon Museum Italicum, i. i. 32. Paris. 1687. 4) reprinted in Chr. G. Hoffmanni Nova scriptorum ac monumentorum collect. t. ii. Lips. 1733. 4.

The political consequence of the *popes*³ in Italy increased, in proportion as the Greek emperors, now pressed by the Saracens

² This edition, better than that of Garnier, was immediately suppressed by the Romish censors. Its history (see especially Baluzii. not. ad de Marca de Concord Sac. et Imp. lib. i. c. ix. § 8), and an account of its variations may be seen in Schoepfli Comment. hist. crit. Basil. 1741. 4. p. 499, ss. In addition to the two codd. used by Holsten and Garner, a third is noticed by Launojus Diss. de Lazari et Magdal. in provinciam adpulsu cap. 10, obs. 10.

³ Honorius I. from 625–638, Severinus † 640, John IV. † 642, Theodore † 649, Martin I too, were forced to leave to them chiefly the defense of their Italian possessions against the Lombards.⁴ Still they continued subjects of the emperors, had to be confirmed by them in office,⁵ and paid them taxes.⁶ While the Monothelitic troubles gave the popes an opportunity of appointing a vicar even in Palestine now overrun by the Saracens,⁷ Martin I. was still made to feel bitterly the emperor's power; and Vitalianus was compelled to bow to Monothelitism supported by imperial patronage. But banished 654, † 655, but even in 654 Eugenius I. was again chosen, † 657, Vitalianus † 672, Adeodatus † 676, Domnus I. † 678, Agatho † 682, Leo II. † 683, Benedict II. † 685, John V. † 686, Conon † 687, Sergius I. † 701, John VI. † 705, John VII. † 707, Sisinnius † 708, Constantine † 714, Gregory II. † 731.

⁷ This was done by the popes Theodore and Martin I. during a vacancy in the see of Jerusalem, though the patriarchs of Antioch and Jerusalem protested against it. See lib. Stephani Episc. Dorensis ad Synod. Rom. (Mansi, t. x. p. 899), and Martini P. Episc. ad Johannem Episc. Philadelphiae (ibid. p. 805, ss.), comp. Walch's Ketzehistorie, Th. 9. by their triumph at the sixth synod the popes strengthened anew their ancient calling as defenders of the true faith;⁸ and began at this time to attribute to themselves the title Episcopus Universalis, which Gregory the Great had declared to be anti-christian.⁹ The Quinisextum could no longer humble them in the west. When Justinian II. attempted to bring Pope Sergius I. to Constantinople to compel him to subscribe the decrees of the Quinisextum, the garrison of Ravenna rose in rebellion,¹⁰ and soon after (701) the mere suspicion of such an intention caused a new uproar against the exarch.¹¹ Hence, in order to confirm his own authority in Italy, Justinian II. invited Pope Constantine to visit him, and overloaded him with exceedingly high marks of honor (710).¹² The loose connection between Rome and the empire was soon after shown in the refusal of the former to obey the heretic Philippicus Bardanes (711–713).¹³

The oppressed Church of Africa now yielded to the claims of Rome without resistance.¹⁴ On the other hand they still met with much opposition in Italy. The bishops of Ravenna ventured to build higher claims on the fact that their city was the seat of the exarch, in accordance with Grecian principles, and even maintained for some time the independent management of the Church of the exarchate, when Rome would not accommodate herself to the imperial Monothelitism.¹⁵ Among the Lombards catholicism found many adherents since the time of Queen Theodelinda and her son King Adelwald (616-620); and from the time of King Grimoald († 671) became the prevailing system among them.¹⁶ Still, however, they remained at variance with the popes;¹⁷ and Upper Italy asserted its ecclesiastical independence.¹⁸ Theological learning continued to be in a low state in Italy.¹⁹

ECCLESIASTICAL STATE OF FRANCE AND SPAIN.

The superior dignity of the Romish Church was the more readily admitted in the west on account of its being the only

¹⁷ Planck's Gesch. d. kirchl. Gesellschaftsverf. ii. 669, ff.

apostolic Church in that region, as well as the only medium of ecclesiastical connection with the east. But the greatest impression was made by the halo of holiness which surrounded that city in the eyes of the westerns; so that every thing proceeding from it was regarded as sacred.¹

The connection of the Frank Church with Rome was slight since the time of Gregory the Great. The chief authority lay continuously in the hand of the king; and thus all traces of metropolitan government had disappeared. Among the political disturbances of the French empire in the seventh century, the Church also fell into great disorder; the bishops took part in the feuds of the nobles; clergy and monasteries became ungovernable; and the better few, who wished to call attention to morality and discipline, were persecuted.² The robbing of Churches was not uncommon; and Charles Martel (major-domus from 717–741) even distributed ecclesiastical revenues and offices in usufruct to valiant soldiers (as beneficium, precarium).³

² So Leodegar, bishop of Autun, who was put to death by the major-domus Ebrun, 678. Aigulf, abbot of a monastery at Lerins, wished merely to keep order among his monks, but was therefore abused, banished, and, in 675, murdered. See the lives of both in Mabilon Act. SS. Ord. Benedicti, saec. ii. p. 679, ss. 656, ss.

³ Comp. above, § 124, note 7. Bonifacius Ep. 132 (ed. Würdtwein Ep. 51), ad Zachariam, about 742: Franci enim, ut seniores dicunt, plus quam per tempus lxxx. annorum Synodum non fecerunt, nec Archiepiscopum habuerunt, nec Ecclesiae canonica jura alicui fundabant vel renovabant. Cf. Chronicon Virdunense (written about 1115) in Bouquet Rev. Gall. et Franc. scriptt. t. iii. p. 364. But for this even the clergy abused him after his death. The Spanish Church appears to have gradually relaxed in humble subjection to the Roman see since catholicism had prevailed among the Goths likewise; although that subordination had been shown as long as the Church stood under the pressure of Arianism.⁴ Here also the king, as feudal lord of the bishops, was the head of the Church;⁵ but at the same time the bishops attained to a peculiarly great importance, both by their weighty voice in the election of the king, and by the necessity of supporting a tottering throne by means of spiritual authority.⁶

Thus the connection with Rome ceased.⁷ The bishop of the royal metropolis, Toledo, was primate of the Spanish Church,⁸ and raised himself to a self-reliance, which exhibited itself very decidedly even in opposition to the Roman see.⁹ King Witizia (701–710) at length broke off all connection with it;¹⁰ but this

⁹ From Gregorii M. lib. vii. Ep. 125, 126, it is plain that the same sent the pallium to Archbishop Leander of Seville. It may be that the latter was already dead († 599) when it came to him, so that for this reason no trace is found of his receiving it, as Cenni, ii. 225, supposes. That little value generally was attributed to the Roman pallium, is proved by the fact that the succeeding archbishops did not seek for it, and that, before the invasion of the Saracens, no other Roman pallium came to Spain, Cenni, ii. 252.—That self-reliance and independence are expressed particularly in the explanations of Archbishop Julian of Toledo, respecting the remarks made by Benedict II. against his confession of faith, in Conc. Toletan. xv. (688) ap. Mansi, xii. 9. They conclude with the words, p. 17: Jam vero si post haec et ab ipsis dogmatibus patrum, quibus haec prolata sunt, in quocumque [Romani] dissentiant, non jam cum illis est amplius contendendum, sed, majorum directo calle inhaerentes vestigiis, erit per divinum iudicium amatoribus veritatis responsio nostra sublimis, etiamsi ab ignorantibus aemulis censeatur indocilis.

ECCLESIASTICAL CONDITION OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

Among the Anglo-Saxons, Christianity had at first to struggle against heathenism with various fortune, but was afterward diffused by degrees in all the Anglo-Saxon states. Those who preached it were for the most part Roman missionaries; Northumberland alone being converted by the Scottish clergy, who introduced here the regulations of the ancient British Church. Old controversies between them and the Roman-English clergy were soon renewed; however, after a conference between both parties at the synod of Strenechal (now Whitby, not far from York, Synodus Pharensis 664), the king of Northumberland, Oswin, decided in favor of the Roman ordinances.¹ And since the well-ordered schools of the Irish monasof Isidore's Chronicon (A.D. 1236). After relating many infamous deeds of Witiza, it is stated by Rodericus, l. c. c. 16, in Andr. Schotti Hispania illustrata (Francof. 1603. 4 tomi, fol.) ii. 62: *Verum quia ista sibi in facie resistebant [clerici], propter vexationem pontificis [Episc. Toletani] ad Romanum pontificem appellabant. Witiza facinorosus timens, ne suis criminibus obviarent, et populum ab ejus obedientia revocarent, dedit licentiam, immo praeceptum, omnibus clericis, ut uxores et concubinas unam et plures haberent juxta libitum voluptatis, et ne Romanis constitutionibus, quae talia prohibent, in aliquo obedirent, et sic per eos populus retineretur. Lucas Tudensis (ibid. iv. 69): Et ne adversus eum insurgeret s. ecclesia, episcopis, presbyteris, diaconibus et caeteris ecclesiae Christi ministris carnales uxores lascivus Rex habere praecepit, et ne obedirent Romano Pontifici sub mortis interminatione prohibuit. The state of the matter appears to have been this. Witiza, in conjunction with Sinderedus, archbishop of Toledo, opposed licentiousness in priests, and perceived that it could be eradicated only by allowing them to marry. The latter had been general among the Arians, and abolished when they joined the Catholic Church (cf. Conc. Tolet. iii. ann. 589, c. 5): Compertum est a sancto Concilio, Episcopos, Presbyteros et Diaconos venientes ex haeresi carnali adhuc desiderio uxoribus copulari: ne ergo de cetero fiat, etc. Thus the prejudicial alteration, which had been introduced for one hundred years by the prohibition of the council, could be clearly noticed. Hence Witiza allowed priests to marry, and declared the Roman decretals, forbidding it, to be of no binding force. Comp. a defense of King Witiza by Don Gregorio Mayans y Siscar, translated into German, from the Spanish, in Busching's Magazin für die neue Historie und Geographie, i. 379, ff. Aschbach's Gesch. der Westgothen, S. 303, ff.*

Rursum autem Rex: si utrique vestrum, inquit, in hoc sine ulla controversia consentiunt, quod haec principaliter Petro dicta, et ei claves regni caelorum sunt datae a Domino? Responderunt: etiam utique. At ille ita conclusit: et ego vobis dico, quia hic est ostiarius ille, cui ego contradicere nolo, sed in quantum novi vel valco, hujus cupio in omnibus obedire statutis, ne forte me adveniente ad fores regni caelorum, non sit qui reserat, avelo illo qui claves tenere probatur. ⁴ Vita S. Wilfridi by the contemporary Eddius (Æddi), cognomento Stephanus (cantandi magister in Northumborum Ecclesiis, invitatus de Cantia a reverendissimo viro Wilfrido, Beda Hist. eccl. iv. 2), in Th. Gale Historiae Britannicae, Saxonicae, Anglodanicae Scriptores xv. Oxon. 1691. fol. p. 40. Lappenberg's Geschichte von England. Bd. 1 (Hamburg. 1834), S. 167.

It is true that the original missionary dependence of the Anglo-Saxon Church on Rome gradually ceased; here also the kings put themselves in possession of the same ecclesiastical privileges, which kings asserted in the other German kingdoms;⁵ the Latin language, connecting with Rome, was obliged to allow along with itself, even in the Liturgy, the Anglo-Saxon tongue;⁶ but notwithstanding such considerations, Rome continued to maintain an authority in the Anglo-Saxon Church which it did not now exercise in any other German Church.⁷

Emulation with the Irish institutions for educational purposes also introduced into the Anglo-Saxon schools a very great activity. Not only did they distinguish themselves by the study of the Greek language, which Theodore had established in the whole of the west, but its stimulus unquestionably contributed to the development of the Anglo-Saxon dialect, already even as a written language.⁸ At the end of this period, England possessed the most learned man of the west, the Venerable Bede, a monk in the monastery of Peter and Paul at Yarrow († 735).⁹ The ⁵ Theodore was still in Rome when nominated Archbishop of Canterbury, after Wighard, who had been sent thither to be ordained, had died (Beda, iii. 29, iv. 1). But the decision of Rome in favor of Wilfrid, who had been expelled from the see of York (Eddius in vita Wilfridi, ap. Gale, i. 67), was not regarded; Wilfrid, on the contrary, was put in captivity (l. c. p. 69). The bishops were for the most part appointed by the kings (Lappenberg's Gesch. v. England, i. 183), who had also the power of confirming the decrees of synods, and the highest judicial power over the clergy (Lappenberg, i. 194).

⁸ Caedmon, a monk in the monastery of Streaneshalh † 680 (Beda, iv. 24, non ab hominibus,—sed divinitus adjutus gratis canendi donum accepit), author of poetical paraphrases of biblical books, especially of Genesis. See Caedmon's metrical paraphrase of parts of the Holy Scriptures, in Anglo-Saxon, by Benj. Thorpe. London. 1832. 8.—Aldhelm, abbot of Malmesbury, afterward bishop of Sherborne († 709), translated the Psalm (King Alfred said of him, according to Wilhelm. Malmesb. ap. Gale, i. 339: Nulla unquam aetate par ei fuit quisquam poësin anglicam posse facere, tantum componere, eadem apposite vel canere vel dicere). As early as the year 680, there existed a version of the four gospels by Aldred. (Selden Praef. ad Scriptt. Hist. Angl. ed. Twyssen, p. 23): also Ekbert, bishop of Lindisfame, translated the gospels; Bede, the gospel of John.—Beowulf, a heroic poem, received its present form at this time from the hands of Christians (ed. G. F. Thorkelin, Kopenh. 1817. 4, translated into German by L. Ettmüller. Zurich. 1840. 8). In like manner, about the year 700, there existed a poem (by Aldhelm?) descriptive of the conversion of the Myrmidonians by the apostle Andrew, and another on the finding of the cross by the empress Helena, composed by one Cynewulf. See Andrew and Elene, published by J. Grimm. Cassel. 1840. 8vo.

⁹ As a proof of his wide-spread fame is adduced Sergii P. I. Ep. ad Ceolfridum (abbot of the cloister there, A.D. 700, quoted in Guilelmi Malmesburiensis († 1143) de Reb. gestis Regum Angl. i. 3: Hortatur Deo dilectam bonitatis tuae religiositatem, ut, quia exortis quibusdam ecclesiasticarum causarum capitulis (without doubt the cloister in question), non sine examinatione longius imotescendis, opus nobis sunt ad conferendum artis literatura imbuti,—absque aliqua immoratione religiosum famulum Dei (Bedom) venerabilis

new branch of ecclesiastical literature founded by John the Faster, in his penitential law-book, had been first adopted in the west by the British Church,¹⁰ and, after its example, was also used among the Anglo-Saxons by Theodore, Bede, and Egbert of York († 767).¹¹ On the other hand, these libelli poenitentiales do not seem to have as yet obtained currency any where out of England.

Endeavors were always proceeding from the Anglo-Saxon states to reconcile the Britons and Irish with the Roman Church as the common mother-church,¹² and to unite them with the Church of the Anglo-Saxons. But although the abbot Adam-

Stevenson, however, in his Introduction prefixed to Bedae Opp. Hist. tom. 1, p. x., shews that the word Bedam is wanting in an old MS. of this epistle, and was inserted by William of Malmesbury, but that Bede could not have been called at that time.—Bede's writings embrace Natural Philosophy, Chronology, Philosophy, Grammar, Astronomy, Arithmetic, etc., and give a view of all the learning of the time. In particular, Historia ecclesiast. gentis Anglorum lib. v., from Julius Caesar till 731 (ed. Fr. Chiffletius. Paris. 1681. 4. Joh. Smith. Cantabrig. 1722. fol.). De sex aetatibus mundi liber. ¹⁰ These libelli poenitentiales were constantly altered, that they might continue useful in practice: on the other hand, the earlier were transferred more or less verbally into the later. Hence hardly any one has come down to us entirely free from alterations; and in many cases it is difficult to decide to what author an extant poenitentiale is to be attributed. Among the Irish the oldest known was that of Columbanus, a part of which was published in Colomb. Opp. ed. Patric. Fleming. Lovan. 1667. (See F. F. Mone's Quellen u. Forschungen zur Gesch. d. teutschen Literatur u. Sprache. Bd. 1. Aachen u. Leipzig. 1830. S. 494), another by Cumini († 661), an extract from which was published by Fleming, l. c. and Bibl. PP. Lugd. xii. 42 (see Mone, S. 490), and which is the same work as the so-called Canones poenitentiales Hieronymi (Opp. ed. Martianay, v. 5) (Mone, S. 497).

thus the complete connection of the British and Irish Church with Rome was effected.

The attempts to convert the Germans, whether made by Franks, or by Irish and Anglo-Saxons, were as yet but partially successful.

The Irish *Kilian*¹ lost his life in the cause at Würzburg (689); as also *Emmeram*² at Ratisbon (654). In Bavaria, however, better success attended Rupert,³ bishop of Worms, who baptized Duke Theodore II. († 696), and founded the Church of Salzburg († 718); as also Corbinian,⁴ who gathered a church in Freisingen († 730).

On the other hand, Anglo-Saxon monks endeavored to spread Christianity among the kindred north-German races. Wilfrid was the first who preached among the Frieslanders († 677).⁵

³ Act. SS. ad d. 27 Mart. Rupert came to Bavaria at the time of a Frankish King Childebert. According to the Salzburg tradition, the king was Childebert II., at the end of the sixth century; but, according to Valesius, Mabillon, Pagi, and especially Hansiz Germania sacra, ii. 51) Childebert III., a hundred years later. On the contrary, M. Filz, a Benedictine, and Professor in Salzburg, has reasserted, conformably to the ancient tradition, that Rupert came to Bavaria, A.D. 580, and died in 623. Afterward Willebrord, first bishop of Wiltaburg (Utrecht) from 696-739 labored, along with his associates,⁶ with much success, under the protection of the Franks, among the West Frieslanders and the surrounding territories; but the East Frieslanders remained steadfast to paganism. § 1. The Idea of the Church.—Prof. Leo, of Halle, in his Ferienschriften, Halle, 1847, contends for the Celtic origin of the word kirche, church. In the Celtic, cyrch or cylich designates the central point, around which something is gathered, the place of assemblage. Kurtz, Kirchengeschichte, Bd. 1, § 1, remarks, "that the introduction of the word among the Anglo-Saxons, and through English missionaries among the Germans," is the most probable hypothesis.
